He Says That Stock Exchange Will See Return of Old Prosperity.

Horace White, who served as Chairman of the Hughes committee that investigated the New York Stock Exchange and who has enjoyed a wide experience in financial affairs, was quoted yesterday by John Muir & Co. as being confident that the depression of recent months in security markets does not represent a permanent change.

"The Stock Exchange will recover," predicted Mr. White. "The present situation which is confronting brokers and Wall Street generally is a reflection of industrial and business conditions. We are witnessing one of the downward sweeps of the pendulum. The direction will change in time. The public will come back into the market and brokers will again see the record transactions on the floor equal, and probably exceed, the figures made at the height of the last period of general public interest in the stock market.

"The real cause of the present financial unrest is comparatively plain if you do not go too far back. There is a scarcity of capital throughout the world. More demands are being made for money than it is possible to supply. The asking and refusing scares both the investor and the business executive. In fact, they are both in danger of getting the impression that conditions are more serious than perhaps is the case.

"War and the threat of war are largely responsible for the scarcity of money. The Balkan troubles extinguished many millions of capital and the atmosphere which has enveloped Europe since those events has not been reassuring. Practically every government on the other side of the Atlantic has been straining every resource to build navies and to strengthen armies. This expenditure has not only been unproductive but the spectacle of so many billions of dollars put to such use has tended to alarm conservative investors and to discourage legitimate investment. The difference between the present available supply of capital and an amount of money sufficient to satisfy all reasonable demands of legitimate business enterprise would be speedily adjusted if the excessive appropriations which governments have been demanding for armaments should cease. And I believe that the time is near at hand when we can look for more rational behavior among nations.

"The settlement of the Mexican situation would have a beneficial effect upon business everywhere but I do not think that there will be any war in which we shall take part. If the United States sends an armed force across the border on any plea whatever, this country will suffer lasting injury to its reputation and commercial interests, and President Wilson's administration will be damaged accordingly."

Allege "Sugar Trust" Wash Sales.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22.—A supplemental petition was filed in the United States Court to-day charging the American Sugar Refining Company with being a monopoly in restraint of trade. The petition was filed by Wogan Brothers, Inc., the Rose Hill Sugar Refining Company, and the Columbia Sugar Refining Company. It is charged that the American Company conducted "wash sales" in 1911 to hammer down the New York market so it might buy raw sugar at greatly reduced prices. Damages in $1,000,000 are asked.

COPPER MARKED DOWN.

Sales Reported Below 15 Cents—Trade Looks for Better Demand.

After being formally reduced from 16⅞ cents a pound around the middle of last week by the larger selling agencies to 15½ cents a pound, copper weakened still further and was reported yesterday to be selling in small lots below 15 cents. As far as a real market is concerned, however, there isn't any. Consumers are staying as resolutely away as they have at any time this Fall, not so much with the idea, apparently, that the metal may become cheaper, but because a recession of demand has occurred in the trades using copper in quantity.

"The high crest of the copper market on the recent movement was reached a short time ago," says Copper Gossip, "and with a decrease in buying demand a readjustment of prices became inevitable. Domestic consumption has also receded from the high level of a few months ago, and it seems apparent to good judges of the situation that a further reaction in business is probable before satisfactory conditions in manufacturing lines are again established. It is not surprising, therefore, that present sentiment appears to favor the policy of buying on a hand to mouth basis.

"The weakness of the London market lately was especially remarked, and the heavy selling of future deliveries at that centre influenced local buyers to hold off until the current uncertainty regarding prices and demand for the next six months required less caution. Although hesitation has become a prominent feature owing to recent developments in business prospects we expect that this tendency will only be temporary, and with more settled conditions market activity will grow accordingly. With the situation so much confused it is not to be wondered at that the volume of business the last few weeks fell much below the normal.

"During a period of particularly good consumption extending over many months the world's stocks of copper were reduced to the lowest level in years, and this fact was a potential factor in creating market firmness. The decrease in the world's visible supply of copper since January of this year is 111,753,560 pounds, and tabulated returns show that the copper surplus of the United States and European countries is the smallest in over four years. Compared with July, 1910, the shrinkage in tonnage amounts to 310,655,875 pounds. It is perfectly evident, therefore, that the statistical position of copper at present is obviously strong. But the feature of the situation is no longer the prime influence in regulating market operations of buyers. The certain information that there is now a substantial recession in manufacturing activity at the brass and copper mills of the country, and that other lines of industry are operating below capacity has caused general conservatism in placing new orders.

"Strikes at mines and shut-downs at smelters contributed to keep copper market values high, but with more favorable conditions at producing centres there should be more liberal shipments available for consumption in the coming months. A miners' strike at the Michigan mines has seriously interfered with the production of Lake copper for nearly four months, but, notwithstanding the fact that the Lake output for October was only about one-third the normal size, there was an increase of 7,669,252 pounds in the total United States productions last month."

New Banks Authorized.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION AND STOCK MARKETS

FINANCIAL MARKETS

In a market such as yesterday's it made little difference if prices were up or down, so inconsequential were the changes which attended the trading. The fact, however, was that the general level of quotations rose a little. The movement as well as the volume of trading was a fit ending of a week during which scarcely more than the semblance of a market was maintained on the Stock Exchange. The week was to all intents and purposes a stock market interregnum, with the rank and file of traders leaning strongly toward the assumption that the period of extreme inactivity was likely to be much prolonged. That assumption perhaps is no safer than the average of stock market hypotheses.

The decision of the Cotton Exchange to put greater restrictions than heretofore have been imposed upon members of the Exchange in handling speculative accounts for customers would have aroused more interest if speculation itself were more active at the moment. One Cotton Exchange house in its weekly review said yesterday that the prevailing opinion among traders was that there was "too much cotton and too little speculation." That perhaps attests a condition of soundness which is not to be regretted, even if it imposes some hardship upon those who would fain see speculation more active. In the stock market it is also evident that there is very little speculation, whatever may be said of the supply of stocks. In throwing greater safeguards around speculation in cotton the Cotton Exchange is in effect following the lead of the Stock Exchange, which has for some time through its Business Conduct Committee sought to prevent the carrying on of operations too thinly supported by margins.

The bank statement reflected in a contraction in reserves the effect of Friday's withdrawals of gold for shipment to Canada, and the transfer of currency to San Francisco. These had the effect of wiping out the cash gain from other sources and of leaving in its stead a loss for the week of about $1,200,000. Loans and deposits increased sufficiently to cause along with the cash loss a decrease of over $6,000,000 in the surplus, which was cut down by just about one-third of the amount reported the previous week. This movement to Canada, particularly, should it expand to considerably larger figures this week, necessarily calls for some revision of previous views regarding the money market position this coming week when preparations will be under way for the Dec. 1 disbursements. With the surplus of the Clearing House institutions still standing at more than $12,000,000, it seems unlikely, however, that the gathering of funds for the December payments will cause any real inconvenience.

BOURSES OF EUROPE.

Prices Irregular in London and Paris, Higher in Berlin.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Money was in good demand and discount rates were firm to-day.

Investment business on a fair scale imparted a good tone to the stock market generally. Consols hardened an eighth and home rails and the recent new issues improved in sympathy, but speculative business was narrow and Paris offerings caused easiness in Rio Tintos and Kaffirs.

American securities advanced after an irregular opening. Realizing caused a decline later and the market closed irregular, with prices ranging from ¼ above to ¼ below parity.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Prices moved irregularly on the Bourse to-day. Three per cent. rentes, 86 francs 90 centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Trading was quiet and prices were higher on the Boerse to-day.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Time money rates were 4¾@5 per cent. for sixty days to six months.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 5¼ per cent. for short and 5 per cent. for three months' bills; Berlin, 4¼ per cent.; Paris, 3¾ per cent. Money was 4¼@4¾ per cent. in London, and 2½ per cent. in Berlin.

The Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 51 pfennigs. The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 31½ centimes.

Foreign exchange was quoted as follows:

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

Demand sterling—High, $4.8555; low, $4.8550; last, $4.8550.

London—Cable, $4.8605; demand, $4.8555.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Another deluge of letters offering the recipients an opportunity to buy stock in a candy factory, largely on the strength of the profits which have been made by other manufacturers, descended on the overworked mail carriers yesterday. There is something intimate about an investment in the candy business which must appeal to many persons of small means who could not be persuaded to put their savings into shares of a steel company or a railroad. Nearly every one eats candy, and it is a fascinating pastime to figure the profits there must be in selling for 80 cents a pound an article that can be boxed and put upon the stands for 30 cents a pound. That is what the promoter of a local candy factory's stock says is the secret of the success of the best-known candy manufacturers. What he does not explain is the reluctance of capitalists to finance a business which returns such handsome profits. If a concern making 50 cents on every 30 cents' worth of its product cannot supply the demand for its candy because of lack of capital, it ought to get a new treasurer. Banks are only too eager to loan money to such concerns.

A Plan That Failed.

The discussion of the purchase by the St. Louis & San Francisco of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Road at a handsome profit to the syndicate which constructed that property recalls talk of a change in the Frisco's capital stock which was semi-officially announced four years ago in connection with the decision of the board to take over the Brownsville line. At that time the management had completed plans for submitting to the stockholders a proposal to retire the first and second 4 per cent. preferred stock with a new issue of 7 per cent. preferred. The change was decided upon principally for the purpose of making it possible to raise additional capital through the sale of stock, instead of putting out more bonds. In anticipation of the change all of the company's securities enjoyed a substantial advance, but the change was never submitted to the shareholders.

Interest Rates High in Canada.

So far in the year, gold to the amount of $8,450,000 has been shipped from this city to Canada, of which $1,800,000 came back last July, when New York exchange at Canadian centres was selling at a substantial premium. An officer of a Canadian branch bank here said yesterday that the transfer of $2,600,000 to Montreal last week was necessary because of the position of exchange rates, but that Canadian banks were not especially desirous of gold at this time. In other quarters an opposite view was expressed. It was said that money has been fairly tight in the Dominion all this Fall, and that funds were in demand for the shorter maturities at rates about 1 per cent. higher than for the corresponding periods at this centre. Gold coin of the United States is legal tender in Canada and may be held as bank reserve, thereby facilitating the loaning of surplus funds of the banks.

That Standard Oil Dividend.

An official of the Standard Oil Company of New York placed a damper yesterday on the hopes expressed latterly on the Curb that a dividend would be declared before the end of the year. Said he: "The matter of dividend action has not been considered by the Directors for the near future, and it is not expected that anything will be done for some time. I should say that it will be next March, at least, before the possibility of making a return to shareholders will even be seriously discussed by the Directors." The company has paid one dividend of $6 a share on the old capital of $15,000,000 this year, at about the time last Summer when the capital was increased to $75,000,000, and a 400 per cent. stock dividend declared.

Mexican Stock Depressed.

Yesterday's decline of 8 points in Mexican Petroleum preferred apparently represented liquidation because of disturbing stories from Mexico. The Street heard a rumor that the company might be forced to pass the next quarterly preferred dividend if the political and financial situation below the border does not improve before the December meeting of Directors. Not nearly as much attention was paid to the possibility of such action, however, as to the actual danger from physical harm oil properties in Mexico were reported to be in. The Street has been prepared for some time to hear of reduced earnings because of disturbances to transportation facilities, but destruction of property was a new matter of serious import to consider. Its seriousness appeared to be exaggerated somewhat, in view of news dispatches from the South saying that especial effort would be made to protect the oil interests at Tampico and Tuxpam.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Following a generally lower opening at 9:30 o'clock, the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange rallied, but prices eased again near the close. Business was again on a minimum scale, with the trading displaying the waiting tendency which has been its prominent characteristic. Transactions took place in a number of stocks of which no sales were recorded elsewhere in Wall Street, among them St. Paul at 98⅜ and 98¼, Pacific Mail at 23½ to 23¾, and Third Avenue at 39½. The sales of St. Paul were on the 9:30 o'clock call, while the other stocks named were dealt in after the call.

NEWS OF THE CORPORATIONS AND THE BANKS

BANK STATEMENT

Deposit Increase and Cash Loss Decrease Surplus by $6,000,000.

Late withdrawals of cash more than offset the gain made by the Clearing House institutions earlier in the week and yesterday's statement showed a decrease of over $1,200,000 in the amount of reserve held. At the same time loans and deposits increased. The net effect was a decrease of over $6,000,000 in surplus.

The bank statement figures compare as follows with the returns of earlier weeks and of corresponding dates in other years:

THE BUSINESS WORLD FROM MANY ANGLES

DO DISCOUNTS AID TRADE ABUSES?

Some Clothing Manufacturers Think So, but Others Do Not —Plan to Stop Them.

Would the elimination of several of the trade evils now existing in the clothing industry be brought about by the abolition of the discounts given to the retailers? This is a much mooted question in the local clothing trade, but at least one prominent manufacturer thinks well of the suggestion. It would necessitate radical changes in selling methods, he says, but he believes that the manufacturers would be better able to tell where they stand in the matter of profits if the scheme were carried out.

"In many cases," he told a TIMES reporter recently, "retailers add express and freight charges to the regular discount of 9 per cent. for cash and 7 per cent. for payment in sixty days. With discounts abolished the retailers would hardly have courage to deduct these charges from their bills.

"The retailers under the net plan would get fair treatment. The wholesaler is generally fairer in his dealings than the average retailer, who is coddled by salesmen and manufacturers alike. Many of our customers, through this coddling, have come to make a practice of unfair dealings. They consider the wholesalers legitimate prey simply because they are wholesalers. Possibly the fact that we have larger stocks and sell in a much larger way than retailers leads them to think that we do not feel the loss of a few extra cents or dollars from our bills."

Upon inquiry in another quarter it was learned that many manufacturing clothiers sold their goods on a net basis, but that this plan was not a regular selling feature in any house.

"If a net selling basis were put into effect generally," said another member of the trade, "it would not affect the industry adversely. We might have trouble, however, in 'educating' retailers to adjust their methods of figuring profits. The net plan would not curtail business much unless the dating evil was eliminated also. In that event the loss would be heavy, as few retailers have sufficient capital to pay cash for their goods. The net plan would not benefit manufacturers particularly in saving time and expense, and it doubtless would be a bone of contention with a certain class of retailers who take discounts they are not entitled to. I am not really sure that it would check this extra-discount evil; it might have the opposite effect.

"Some manufacturers are to-day selling their products on a net basis than ever before," he continued. "The entire trade may come to a net basis of doing business eventually, but the only reason for such a step would be to compete with manufacturers who are doing same 'net.' A line of clothing on a net basis might look more attractively priced than those sold 'regular.'"

Another member of the trade said that he doubted the possibility of the entire industry ever getting to a net selling basis. One manufacturer would give discounts for the sake of making a sale, he said, where another would hold to the agreement. In that way the plan would make constant trouble, he thought, and an exceedingly strong trade organization would be necessary to make its adoption successful.

"The giving of discount," he added, "is not so great an evil as the submission to the taking of undue discounts and the lack of standardization in billing. All kinds of datings are given for the sake of making sales. This should be stopped. But, on the other hand, merchants in different parts of the country want their seasonable goods at different times, as the seasons open earlier or later than they do here.

"If discounts were abolished, and with them all taking of undue discounts, we might sell a little closer, but the retailer and the consumer would not benefit materially. The 'net' plan has been discussed by a number of clothiers' organizations at various times, but no definite action has so far been taken regarding it."

Another Complaint of Parcel Post.

The parcel post, judging from the recent experience of a local commission house, is not an entirely satisfactory medium for sending samples to buyers. This commission house recently sent a set of samples through the mails to a customer in the Middle West. Nothing was heard from the customer regarding them, so the firm wrote him asking if the goods had been received, and inclosed a second statement. The customer replied that he had not received the samples, and therefore he wished to cancel his order for the goods. Had the commission house shipped the samples by express it would have a receipt showing that the goods had been sent. As the case now stands the credit man of the selling firm is trying to figure out a plan to convince the customer that shipment has been made, and to collect what is due for the order.

VEILING DEMAND IS GOOD.

Al. Kinds in Favor—Some Presage Future Styles in This Field.

The demand for veilings so far this season has been more satisfactory than for several years, and the most encouraging note haa been the tendency of buyers to get away from plunging on any particular style.

Beauty spot, frame and shadow veilings have been favorably received, as have lace veils. Hair-line and hexagon meshes, both in plain effects and those with narrow serrated borders woven in the mesh, bid fair to retain their popularity through this season into the Spring. According to Rudolph Hacker of Oppenheim, Stern & Hacker, the popularity of the beauty-spot veil, which is brought out mostly in chenille with single velvet spot designs, makes it safe to predict a return of the vogue for chenille and velvet spotted veilings, which were much in demand several years ago. The frame veil will doubtless be a factor to be reckoned with from now on.

In colors, black is most in favor, with white and magpie also in demand. Taupes are good, too, and browns and navy, with a sprinkling of Copenhagen blues, are next in demand.

RAINCOATS AT 10 CENTS.

They Are Made of Waterproof Paper—Can Be Carried in a Handbag.

A man in Illinois has invented a process to produce and market a rain coat that can be retailed from 10 cents up. These coats are made in the regulation slip-on style, from an integral piece of waterproof paper. Their production cost, according to The Sartorial Art Journal, will be no higher than 5 cents each, and even that figure can be lessened. The coat can be folded up to fit in an ordinary envelope and is particularly adapted to being carried in handbags.

The coats can be made of oiled paper, or parrafin, vellum parchment paper, which gives the appearance of silkiness at a short distance. The original idea was for the coats to be worn only once, but, after a trial, it was demonstrated that they could be utilized successfully two or three times. The coats are reinforced where the buttons are sewn on, and also where the buttonholes are cut. There are only two seams, both running underneath the arms and down the sides. These seams are cemented by ordinary glue.

DRY GOODS WELL SOLD UP.

Current Buying Is Largely for Delivery Early In 1914.

The sold-up condition of various lines of dry goods has lessened the movement of such merchandise into the hands of distributors, says the Dry Goods Economist. In dress fabrics of all kinds—silk, woolen, worsted or cotton, including those composed of silk and wool or of silk and cotton—many goods that are especially desirable cannot be obtained for immediate delivery, and the current business is largely confined to the placing of orders for January and February delivery.

In a large degree, purchases for the holiday season have been completed, and the orders now coming in are mostly of a filling-in character. The extent to which some retail concerns are restricting their purchases is indicated by the anticipation of bills—action which, while showing a comfortable financial condition, is not favorable from the view of full employment of resources.

"TANGO" SLIPPERS NOT NEW

They Were Worn in Roumania Before They Came Here—The Proof.

Incidents are constantly coming up to show that "there is nothing new under the sun." A few days ago, in Pittsburgh, an almost up-to-date "tango" slipper appeared from an unexpected quarter. A Rumanian immigant entered a certain shoe store in that city to get a pair of new shoes and discarded his old footwear. Much to his surprise, the clerk beheld the original tango slipper in the discarded shoes.

The sole of the Rumanian's shoe was made from one piece of heavy leather, the edge being molded over to protect the heel and sewed to a one-piece vamp. A thin leather strap was woven, basket fashion, over the edge of the sole, back of the vamp. The end of this strap passed through a slit cut near one edge in the outside of the sole, and was then passed over the ankle and through the loop of the tongue at the throat of the vamp. The strap was passed over and through another slit in the sole, corresponding with the one on the other side. When on the foot, the strap was wound around the ankle and leg and fastened there.

WILL SEND OUT A LEGAL BULLETIN

Important Questions to be Answered by National Retail Dry Goods Association.

In the course of the next few days the National Retail Dry Goods Association will send out its third special legal bulletin. This bulletin will contain a number of questions regarding important points that have arisen in retail dry goods centres in the last year, and that have been submitted to the legal department of the association for consideration and answer. Some of the more important questions asked, with the answers they received, follow:

Question 1. "In the Dry Goods Economist of Oct. 11 we noticed an article entitled 'Contract Not Invalid.' This article is regarding a suit in Providence, R. I., regarding a contract between the merchants there not to give trading stamps. As the information from this article is not very conclusive, will you kindly ask an opinion from our legal department on this point? That is, would an agreement between several merchants in any city in Minnesota not to use trading stamps or other premiums is not contrary to law. It is neither in restraint of trade nor illegal for other reasons. On the contrary, it is exceedingly moral. The article in the Dry Goods Economist wherein the ruling of Judge Charles F. Stearns of the Superior Court in the Diamond case is confirmatory of the doctrine above stated. There is no decision to the contrary, so far as we know.

Question 2. "At a meeting of local merchants this morning, the question came up as to whether we as a corporation, (composed of dry goods concerns,) would lay ourselves liable to prosecution if we combined to eliminate discounts, or if we appointed a private censorship committee to pass upon fake advertisements. Can we also as an association refuse to make donations, to buy tickets, and to give prizes, &c.? We thought possibly you might have had this matter up in some of your work, and would be very glad to have your opinion on this matter, and suggest possibly how we might proceed to avoid liability."

There is not the slightest danger of the association, as a corporation or otherwise, laying itself liable to prosecuption if it acts in concert to eliminate discounts or combines for the appointment of a private censorship committee to pass upon fake advertising or upon donations or solicitations of tickets or the giving of prizes. Indeed, these works are all very meritorious and tend to the purification of trade. However, in all that you do in those directions, be very careful not to name nor describe individuals or corporations so as to lay yourselves open to the possibility of libel or slander suits. You have a right to attack bad practices, in combination with others or individually, but you take a good deal of responsibility if you name persons or corporations and point them out for disapproval among their fellows. Therefore, each step along these lines should only be taken after submitting the proposed publication or action to legal counsel. It is likely that each instance must stand upon its own separate basis.

Question 3. "Two young men, with a capital of about $5,000, wish to open up in our store a shoe department to be run by them, but under our name. They want us to take their cash sales, also their credit sales, which, however, are to be subject to our O. K., and retreat the cash money over to them every week, also the amount of credit sales, allowing us say a 2 per cent. or 5 per cent. Many of their accounts we will carry in conjunction with our own for 30, 60 and 90 days or even longer. We want to avoid the responsibility of their debts and it is upon this point that we would like you to advise us how it can be done in view of the fact that their department would be advertised as one of our own, and the goods charged will be billed on our billheads with our goods which our customers buy from us. Will this make us financially responsible?"

Where a department store allows an independent firm to open a shoe department in the store, to be run by the firm but under the name of the department store, the shoe department being advertised as a part of the department store itself and the goods to customers charged on the department store billheads along with other goods, it is difficult for the department store to entirely avoid responsibility for the debts of the firm. Such an arrangement as this is frequent in department store circles, but it always has attendant risks arising through the misleading of creditors who do not know the real situation.

However, the arrangement can be carried out if the firm is honest, with comparative safety if the following instructions are carefully observed. The department store should not only have access to the books of the firm but should supervise these books and keep careful track of the finances of the firm. The department store should see to it that each and every creditor, whether he be a merchandise creditor, or an employe, or the truckman, or anybody else, is made to understand that the firm is alone responsible for the debts, not the department store. The department store should see to it that letters are written by the firm to each of its creditors, explaining the situation, and the department store should keep copies of these letters, and, if possible, the replies thereto.

By thus notifying creditors and prospective creditors of the real situation and keeping track of the finances of the firm, the department store is comparatively safe. It should have this arrangement, however, provide specifically for such notification, for inspection and supervision.

Question 4.—"In October we purchased merchandise amounting to approximately $1,700. Some of the invoices were consigned to Mr. ——, New York City. Many of the smaller manufacturing concerns make a practice of assigning their invoices to this man, and, as we had made a number of such payments in the past, we anticipated payment on one of these invoices from the company. It subsequently transpired that the owner of the —— Company, having in his possession money advanced by Mr. ——, departed from New York for parts unknown. Our merchandise never arrived. We did, however, receive a case covering which Mr. —— had a bill of lading, but, when the case was opened, it was found to contain nothing but kindling wood. There is now due us from Mr. —— the sum of $649.20, representing a remittance we sent him for which no merchandise was received. The invoice bearing the notice of assignment requested us to make payment to Mr. ——, and we contend that he is responsible, but so far he has refused to pay any attention to our requests for reimbursements. What do you suggest?"

It is difficult to advise you precisely as to your rights in this case, without being fully informed as to all the facts and correspondence. However, it can be said that if the merchandise actually was shipped by the —— Company, so that the title of the goods passed to you then any loss in transit would fall upon you and you would be unable to recover the money advanced to Mr. ——. However, this is not at all likely to have been the case. Undoubtedly, the goods never were shipped or the case of goods was fraudulently "loaded," in which latter event you ought to be able to recover the money you paid to Mr. ——.

Question 5.—Can we purchase samples from a salesman on the road in view of the recent Interstate Commerce Commission ruling?"

By a recent ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission it follows that a traveling salesman lays himself open to punishment for disobedience of the Interstate Commerce law where he attempts to carry free as baggage samples that he is selling en route as merchandise. Samples are not supposed to be sold, and so far as the Interstate Commerce law is concerned it is not unlawful to carry samples free as baggage. However, the moment such samples are sold as merchandise then they enter into competition with similar goods on which freight or express charges have had to be paid, which would result in an unfair advantage and discrimination in the use of the common carrier's services.

What one is forbidden to do directly the law says he shall not do indirectly, and so here, the railroad company would not be allowed to transport the merchandise free of charge in the one person and subject it to a charge for another person, nor can the salesman by subterfuge reach the same result indirectly at attempting to check merchandise that is intended for sale under the guise of baggage.

The legal department of the association has now been in existence for about two years. It is under the direction of Harold Remington.

Dun's list of wholesale commodity prices again showed fewer changes last week than for some time, there having been but forty-eight. Prices showed a sharp downward trend as compared with those of the previous week, however, and thirty-five of last week's changes were declines. In the week ended Nov. 15 there were fifty-three changes, of which thirty were downward.

As had been the case for several weeks, the fluctuations of the week ended yesterday were not greatly divided among the various markets. Only two of these markets showed three or more advances, and all of the thirteen upward revisions were confined to six markets. The declines were similarly limited as to markets, and in only three of them were more than three declines recorded.

There were fewer changes in foodstuffs than for some time, but, in sympathy with the general tone of the list, the tendency was downward and the advances were nearly doubled by the declines. Aside from the weakness displayed by the major provisions at Chicago there was little feature to the week's transactions in foodstuffs. Mess pork and short ribs were higher there, but all of the other items in this part of the list were quoted lower. Fruit and vegetables were steady generally, spices were slightly weaker, and one of the leading grades of raw sugar advanced again. In dairy products, butter remained steady at prices close to those of the previous week, and cheese quotations showed a slight revision upward. The better grades of eggs held their price levels firmly, but prices asked for the medium and lower grades were off a little. Values in flour were rather unsettled, but the grain markets were strong. Wheat, corn, and oats advanced.

The weakness of the metals markets was again one of the prominent features of the list. While some articles were held fairly steady, further reductions were recorded in prices on pig iron and several kinds of finished iron and steel products. The minor metals were generally easier; copper and tin being off, and lead, spelter, and antimony being barely maintained at recent levels. Raw cotton and raw wool closed at levels close to opening prices, and in none of the markets for finished textiles were important price changes put through. Drugs, chemicals, and oils together showed fourteen changes, of which twelve were downward. Three leading numbers in the hide market were also quoted lower.

Minor declines were noted in burlaps, while hops, jute, and turpentine were advanced. Crude rubber prices have declined under the sympathetic effect of lower levels at London, and up-river fine is now quoted considerably lower than it was a year ago at this time.

TO WATCH UNDERVALUING.

Provisions of New Tariff Rouse Interest of Domestic Jewelers.

Domestic manufacturers of jewelry are discussing plans for a close watch for undervaluations in jewelry importations. The Tariff act of 1913 carries a reduction in duties of approximately 25 per cent. on many lines as compared with the old Payne-Aldrich law. The old act specified a rate of 85 per cent. ad valorem on articles of personal adornment, while goods commercially known as jewelry were taxed at 60 per cent. During the life of the act of 1909, however, the Board of General Appraisers and the Customs Court of Appeals made numerous constructions of the law, which took many articles out of the personal adornment class at 85 per cent. and relegated them to the strictly jewelry clause at 60 per cent.

The framers of the present law, taking notice of the judicial decisions, included practically all forms of jewelry, (including articles of personal adornment,) under Paragraph 356, with a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem. The same paragraph also carries a rate of 50 per cent. on stampings, galleries, mesh, and other materials of metal, whether or not set with glass or paste, finished or unfinished, when suitable for use in the manufacture of any of the articles enumerated in the first part of the paragraph.

CHINESE EFFECTS IN SILKS.

They Will Dominate Printed Offerings for Spring—Crepes Good.

Adaptations from Chinese and Japanese designs and colors are noticeable in all lines of printed silks for next year. For example, extremists in printing have chosen the Chinese dragon, while the more conservative printers have adopted conventional figures in Chinese colors, especially yellow.

Plaids, principally in blue and green combinations, are retained both in New York and in Paris, and Roman stripes in vivid colors of blue, green, purple, and yellow are showing renewed activity principally for trimming purposes.

Crêpe de Chine is favored for dresses and to some extent for underwear. Crêpe meteor has general acceptance.

HARD COAL MOVES FREELY.

Best Business of the Year Reported Last Week—Soft Coal Quiet.

Seasonable weather conditions have created a demand for hard coal at all the distributing centres, and the trade has attained the greatest activity of the year. The last rush of water shipments to points soon closing to navigation is now on, and there are some anxious phases to the situation. Stove coal continues the leader in demand.

Bituminous coal continues uncertain, according to Coal Age, and far from active. The tendency is strongly toward a declining market, due to the apathy in general business.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Imports of general merchandise at New York in the week ended Nov. 15 gained considerably, being valued at $18,676,986, compared with $12,936,473 in the previous week. Imports of dry goods also showed a gain, and were valued at $3,431,380. Withdrawals from bonded warehouses for the week aggregated $730,436 in value.

At a recent meeting of the United Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' Association the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, S. A. Schneider; Vice President and Chairman of the Board of Directors, Benjamin Levy; Treasurer, L. B. Lieberman, and Secretary, A. Miller. The following members were elected to the Board of Directors: Morris Bernstein, A. Davis, William Kerzner, Benjamin Lowitz, Louis Lustig, H. Markowitz, Marcus Pollak, S. A. Schneider, I. Chauser, and B. H. Rubin.

According to a report from Chicago, a receiver has been appointed to take charge of the affairs of Hart Brothers, one of the oldest manufacturers and wholesalers of men's furnishing goods in the United States. The firm's liabilities are said to be over $300,000.

Consul General George A. Bucklin, Jr., stationed at Guatemala City, will be in New York to-morrow and Tuesday, and will make his headquarters at the local branch of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Custom House. Mr. Bucklin will be glad to interview merchants interested in Central American trade.

PRINTCLOTH TRADE SMALL.

Some Prices Were Cut at Fall River, but Did Not Help Much.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 21.—The print cloth market experienced another quiet week, with the manufacturers making concessions in a few styles. The demand has been principally for wide and medium widths. The sales for the week are estimated at 80,000 pieces, with contracts extending up to Jan. 1. Some contracts have been accepted for delivery from Jan. 1 to March 1.

The unsettled cotton and financial markets still have an important bearing on the demand and sales. The action of the Textile Council in forwarding a demand to the Cotton Manufacturers' Association for a wage increase of 12½ per cent., to become effective Dec. 8, has so far had no effect on the market, however.

The following are comparative prices:

LIKE UNBOXED NECKWEAR.

Merchants Say It Means Better Goods and Less Mussing.

Many manufacturers of women's neckwear have discontinued boxing their better-grade holiday goods. The unboxed goods are meeting satisfaction among the retailers, one of whom said yesterday that there would be less poorly made merchandise palmed off as high-grade neckwear in the future. Some of the manufacturers, it was said, have been so clever in putting inferior goods on cards that both buyers and customers have been deceived as to their real worth. Another advocate of the new plan said that the boxes always collected dust in the stores, and that the appearance of boxed goods was often not all what could be desired. It was also said that the boxes came finger marked and torn from much handling, and had to be replaced. It was said that the stores would attach the neckwear to cards and box it when requested to do so by their customers.

Carelessness Lost a Customer.

The carelessness of a boy at a telephone switchboard lost a valuable account for a local wholesale dry goods house yesterday. A Western customer had decided to place an order on a certain line of fabrics with a wholesaler nearer home, and, for business reasons, did not care to have the New York house, with the exception of one salesman, know of it. He called up the office yesterday morning and asked for Mr. Smith, the salesman. The operator said, "He's talking." The salesman was talking on another wire, but this was not made known to the customer, so he told the supposed Mr. Smith of the order he intended placing. The operator asked him to hold the wire, went to get somebody more acquainted with the firm's business to take the message, and revealed it, as it happened, to the manager. When the Westerner learned what had resulted from this carelessness he asked that his account be closed.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Reordering in the local dress goods market has improved considerably in the last week, although there are instances where jobbers report hesitation in following up sample orders with further business. While many importers have done a good business for Spring, it is generally felt that the volume is not sufficiently large to hurt domestic producers.

Women's suit skirts for Spring will continue to be narrow at the bottom, but will have a decided fullness at the hips. This will be obtained by the use of modified panniers, peg-tops, ruffles, and bustle backs. Suit skirts will also be longer than for some time.

There is noticeable activity in the high-neck types of women's neckwear, and silk combinations with lace are also moving well. The demand for ceintures and girdles continues strong, and indications are that these goods will be good holiday features.

SHALL APPRAISERS HOLD OPEN COURT?

Importers and attorneys having business relations with the Board of United States General Appraisers are speculating as to the character of reappraisement proceedings to be brought before the lower customs tribunal under the new tariff. Chief interest centres in the interpretation to be placed on the phraseology of the provisions relating to the procedure to be followed in cases where importers are dissatisfied with the values placed on imported merchandise by appraising officers and appeal to the general board for review.

The question of primary concern to importers is whether hearings at which testimony is taken regarding values are to be "open," as was the general rule under the act of 1909, or behind closed doors, as was frequently the case under the act of 1897. Uncertainty has arisen from the omission from the new law of a specific provision providing for open hearings. Paragraph M, Section 3, of the administrative part of the new law reads:

In such cases (reappraisement) the General Appraisers and the Boards of General Appraisers shall give reasonable notice to the importer and the proper representative of the Government of the time and place of each and every hearing at which the parties or their attorneys shall have opportunity to introduce evidence and to hear and cross-examine the witness for the other party, and to inspect all samples and documentary evidence or other papers offered.

The corresponding provision in the act of 1909 was under Section 13, which provided:

In such cases hearings may, in the discretion of the General Appraiser or Board of General Appraisers before whom the case is pending, be open, and in the presence of the importer and his attorney and any duly authorized representative of the Government, who may in like discretion examine and cross-examine all witnesses produced.

At the offices of the Board of General Appraisers it was said that regulations giving the desired interpretation of the construction to be placed on the reappraisement provision of the new law would probably be promulgated shortly. Members of the board are understood to hold that, in the main, reappraisement proceedings under the act of 1913 should be open to both parties in litigation, as under the act of 1909. This question, as well as the admittance to hearings of persons not directly connected with the case, or as witnesses, will be dealt with in the rules soon to be promulgated.

It is said to be not at all unlikely that the Treasury Department Appraisers, as well as the Boards of three General appraisers, will find themselves facing the necessity of summoning witneses privately to give testimony where persons competent to give the required information regarding foreign market values are unwilling to appear at the regular hearings and be subjected to cross-examination by a competitor's lawyer. While importers whose cases are on trial before the board object to what has been termed "star chamber" proceedings, Government officials believe that the fact that the law does not prohibit General Appraisers from obtaining privately, when the open hearing procedure fails, such data as will settle disputed questions of market value in an equitable manner.

Importers generally are of the opinion that open hearings should at all times prevail, as otherwise they would have no means of defending themselves against adverse testimony given by trade rivals. The need of open hearings is emphasized, they say, by the fact that under the present law, as under its predecessors, the decision of the Board of Reappraisement is final and may not be appealed from.

GLOVES WILL BE SCARCE.

Leather Scarcity and Strikes Have Combined to Keep Stocks Low.

The general scarcity of leather and strikes among the sewers in the glove industry abroad have resulted in low stocks in the hands of local importers and wholesalers. Staple goods for the holiday season are scarce. The domestic mills are busy, and are doing everything possible to make up the shortage.

Apropos the new tariff, it is thought that the foreign manufacturers cannot increase their output sufficiently to prove formidable competitors, as their home markets buy up about all they can produce.

The Spring business booked so far in silk gloves has been satisfactory. Advances in the raw silk markets have curtailed the production somewhat, and it is said that there will be no surplus goods on hand at the end of the season. Black and white goods have made up about 85 per cent. of the orders taken.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The Municipal Board of Catania, Italy, has submitted to the Municipal Council of that city a plan for providing better sanitation and other improvements in the City of Catania at an estimated cost of $5,790,000.

The value of exports to the United States declared through the London Consulate General in the first nine months of the present year was $101,035,661, a decrease of $19,128,591 from the figures for the corresponding period of last year.

The Vice Consul of Callao, Peru, reports that the Peruvian Government has contracted with a Dutch engineer, who will be assisted by two other experts from Holland, to carry out the contemplated improvements of the Port of Callao.

FEATHER IMPORTS DROP.

The prohibitory section of the new tariff relating to bird feathers is held responsible at the Custom House for a heavy falling off in importations since the law became effective early in October. Official figures made public yesterday show the feather importations at New York for the week ended Nov. 15 to have had a value of $19,810, compared with $50,266 the corresponding week of 1912.

In the week following the passage of the law feather importations aggregated $73,753, but a week later the entries reached $264,354. Commencing with the week ended Oct. 25, when imports were valued at $71,851, a steady decline has taken place. Feather imports at New York so far this month total $45,985, compared with nearly $200,000 in the same period a year ago.

EMBROIDERY ORDERS GOOD.

Buyers Think Well of Narrow Flouncings for Spring.

The local lace market is fairly active, and, although the volume of business is slightly under that of last year, the outlook for Spring is good. Shadow laces are active, and a better demand for Venises is expected for Spring. Salesmen who are now returning for the holidays report that the demand in some sections exceeded that of last year, but in general the buying was light.

Swiss baby sets, with yokes and allovers to match, have been especially active. Emoroideries on novelty cloths, such as organdies, crêpes and voiles, are active, and there is a noticeable buying trend toward colors. One importer said yesterday that if the demand for embroidered flouncings developed materially, especially in those effects which require three and four widths to the skirt, the consumption of Spring embroideries would be large. He hinted that the frail laces now in vogue for such effects were not especially durable, and that embroideries were likely to supersede them.

RAW SILK PRICES STEADY.

In their outline of the week in the world's raw silk markets, A. P. Villa & Brothers say:

"Yokohama continues very quiet, and reelers are willing to make a slight concession from the nominal prices quoted. Canton cables a very quiet market also, with a slightly easier tendency. At Shanghai the situation remains unchanged. The Milan market is not very active, and nearly all of the reelers have decided to close their establishments a month ahead of time this year to avoid further losses. In New York business is fairly active, as buyers have again been attracted by the low quotations prevailing in the primary markets."

MORE BUYERS HERE THAN FOR YEARS

One of the most interesting results of the recent passing of the tariff law is the large number of buyers it has brought to this market in a period which ordinarily is more or less noted for its quietness so far as "spot" trading is concerned.

Twenty years ago, according to experienced local wholesalers, it was only on the rarest occasions that a retail merchant came to this market more than twice a year. At that time, they say, there was by no means the number of individual buyers there are to-day, which usually meant that the merchant himself did all, or nearly all, of the buying. In those days the individual purchases were much larger than they are now, despite the increased population of the country and the greater number of retail outlets. Then a whole season's merchandise was often contracted for at one time, and if the merchant were not a good buyer he paid for his ignorance or ill-luck.

With the separation of stores into departments and the resultant increase in the number of buyers per store, the individual purchases became smaller and more frequent. Buyers used to come to market twice a year, or they came three or four times if they were not too far from New York. Now they come more frequently, and it is not a rare thing for many out-of-town buyers to visit this market every month. Never before have the hotel registers borne the names of so many buyers at this time of the year. In some quarters this is taken as a definite sign that the retail distinction between the seasons is passing, but in other quarters the delayed visits of buyers from the more remote parts of the country are laid to the late date at which the Underwood-Simmons measure was put through. It is admitted generally that the uncertainty attendant on the passage of the Tariff bill had a deterrent effect on many buyers, but there are some wholesalers who are waiting for Spring to prove their contention of the passing of the seasons as a factor in retail merchandising.

OF CURRENT INTEREST IN THE AUTOMOBILE WORLD

HOW ENGLISH CRITIC VIEWS OUR INDUSTRY

POINTS OF VIEW DIFFER

Says Europe Will Not Approximate Our Quantity Production Until It Changes Its Outlook.

Some of his impressions of American automobile making are given by H. M. Bulst, who visited our factories this year with members of the Institute of Automobile Engineers of England. In the second of his articles on America in the London Morning Post, he says in part:

"When American motor-car production is spoken of in Great Britain the idea usually obtains that a certain system common to the manufacture of all machines made in the United States is in question. Nothing surprised me more when going over the leading factories in America than the discovery that no two firms produce their cars on the same principle. There is a greater variety of system than is found in Europe. At the leading British factories one is struck with the astonishing similarity of methods. With trifling details, to see the plant of one is to see that of all, allowing for differences in scale of establishment. But in the States it is very different. Even in a single city, such as Detroit, which is something more than the Coventry of the States, because more than half the cars produced in the world come from the factories of that town, every motor manufacturing concern works along lines evolved by its own staff.

"Though each believes its own methods to be the best, there is, nevertheless, a greater breadth of mind abroad; you do not hear any American motor manufacturer readily condemning different methods adopted by his rivals. One of the reasons of this is that among the really big houses there is not that clashing or overlapping competition we get at home; each maps out a market for himself and grows to greatness because he does not concern himself with anybody else's business. Every leading manufacturer must in a sense pursue methods different to his competitors, for the American engineer is essentially a logical man, who argues that his plant should be made to fit the product, not the product the plant. Each factory is found to present the appearance of having been designed from the beginning for the particular car it is turning out.

"At nearly all the American factories I have visited the operatives seem to work under far more agreeable conditions than is possible at home. This is to be accounted for on various grounds, notably among them being the space problem. Most of our motor factories, like our shipping yards, have grown in congested districts from small beginnings, and present a patchwork appearance. In America the factory buildings are all of a style. Lighting and ventilation arrangements are more than excellent, and hours of work are reasonably easy. The American manufacturer's view of labor is the precise opposite to that of the British, and it is for that reason he is able to do much bigger things. Our manufacturing enterprises are controlled by Boards of Directors, the majority of whom know little or nothing of the technicalities of the business in which they are engaged, but who have some smattering of banking traditions. Therefore the average management is obsessed with the idea of how much money any given man is being paid. In the States, where motor engineers control the firms, that is not thought of.

"Nobody worries how much any one workman may be making. The more he makes the better his employers are pleased. What they worry about is how much work they are getting out of the given man. Until we arrive at that crucial change of mental outlook we shall never be able to do things on the big scale they do in the States, where the whole system of education leads to a broader mental outlook. At one factory all the notices are printed in at least four and sometimes in five languages. If you step up to any worker at random and put a question to him in the simplest English ten to one he will not understand a word you are saying. Hungarians, or 'Hunkeys,' as they are called, are perhaps the chief class of worker employed here; yet there is no man starting at less than $10 a week, and most of the least skilled are getting $12.50 a week, despite the fact that when they came to the States the only work they had done was on farms.

"It must not be imagined that all American motor car factories are designed merely for output. Take a certain factory, which is certainly the largest works for the number of cars it produces of any I know. It only issues three thousand and some odd hundred high-class pleasure cars a year. One section of the works is devoted to commercial vehicles; seven thousand hands are employed at a total salary of approximately half a million dollars a month; and eighty-four distinct trades are represented in the plant, which extends over thirty-eight acres of floor space. The establishment includes two restaurants for work people, seventeen hundred of whom are served with dinner every day, and there is a band of forty-eight players, all of whom are engaged at the works.

"A permanent corps of guides is employed to conduct visitors over the works, and these visitors number 15,000 a year, the floors being marked with arrows to indicate the way to review the departments. This seemed to me the most English in principle of all the factories in America, except that, even in this country, where we cannot produce half the number of machines of quality for shop space that some of the leading American makers can, nevertheless our outputs are very much larger in relation to factory accommodation than are theirs. At these works many unexpected things are done, such, for example, as the making of wooden wheels. Again, the motor coachwork is produced on a principle which is almost outdated in this country, but which would be the delight of the oldtime coachmaker, as each body has forty coats of paint before it is passed out of the works. Yet the net result is a car which, in its actual road conduct, cannot match the finest produced in this country. Incidentally, nearly all the leading six-cylinder car makers of America have had examples of English vehicles, and have striven, by reproducing details of the design and so forth, to attain like results. But all have come to the conclusion that there is more in it than the mere design or material, and that they cannot reproduce in the States what they call the hand-made method of car production.

"They call America the land of equal opportunities; but I do not think there is any country where they are less equal to-day, because, though the phrase was once true—that is why it lingers—enterprises like the Steel Trust, the Oil Corporation, the Pork-packing groups, the Corn combines, and the huge motor factories sufficiently reveal that those respective groups have made such good use of the start they had in the early days that they have now established themselves on a scale which makes it impossible for the small man or the late-comer to live beside them.

"Where so much material has to be handled the problem of transportation is a very serious one, and it has been solved in the simplest fashion by a central crane-way which can scarcely have cost more than $15,000 to install, and which, nevertheless, serves the whole of the machine shop with expedition, and has the additional advantage of passing the materials overhead where space is not valuable, and saving it underneath where it is precious. Overhead crane-ways are, of course, not entirely fresh to factory experience, but the light sort employed, and the manner of their arrangement are quite novel to motor manufacturing. If I were to example the more highly technical processes of manufacture, it would be only to mention equally simple and clever ways of saving money and time. Small parts of cars are not counted, but are dealt with in boxes and weighed, just as sovereigns are weighed at a bank, and the number is known by the weight."

LEADERSHIP ASSURED U. S.

Europe Has Not Grasped Quantity Production Idea, Says Willys.

"While several countries of Europe—notably, England, France, and Italy—are becoming bigger factors in the motor car field every day, it will be years before they arrive at the fundamental principles which have made American manufacturers so successful," he said.

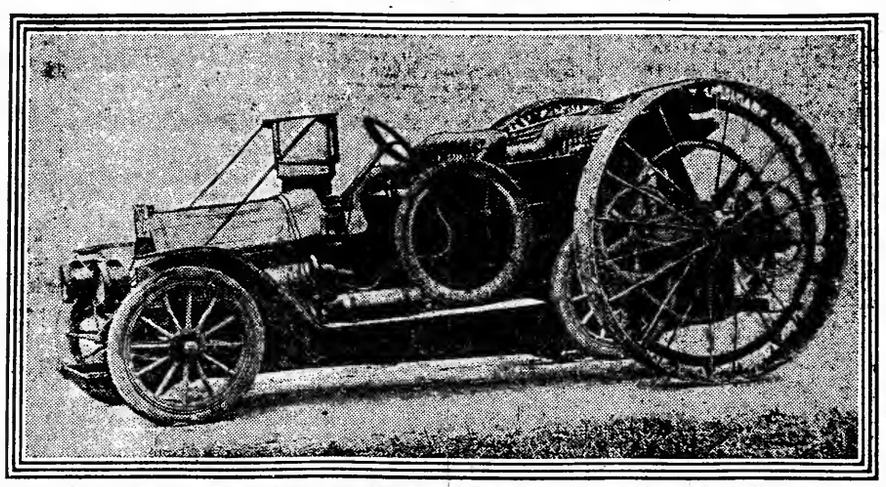
"I have failed to find the very important principle of quantity production applied in any European factory. Over there they are still working away on the old plan of individual labor. They have neglected, to an almost unbelievable extent, to install labor-saving machinery and quantity production methods which, it has been shown, are the essential requirements for good automobiles at low prices. Even the best-known firms in Europe are still refusing to accept the American idea of producing in large quantities and thereby lowering the cost to the individual customer. If the methods now in use in one factory under my direction, by which we are producing 50,600 cars this year, were introduced into Europe they would cause a revolution in the industry there.

"The French army trials of motor trucks, recently completed, as well as tests in other countries, were interesting affairs from a manufacturer's standpoint. The French Government made a thorough investigation of the vehicles entered, paying attention to the slightest details of design, construction, and finish. Such a test in this country would do a great deal toward further increasing the high standard of quality of American-made products."

Rest Your Engine on Hills.

"In climbing long and steep grades," said W. H. Stewart, Jr., motoring teacher, last week, "an occasional rest for the engine is most advisable. This resting of the engine does not necessarily mean shutting down. On the contrary, should the engine overheat sufficiently to cause the piston to drag, it is much better to keep the engine running slowly with maximum advance spark and very little gas. This will prevent the pistons seizing as a gradual cooling of the water takes place."

TOURING CAR AND TRACTOR, TOO.



This Reo has been adapted to carry a tractor arrangement by which it can easily be used for plowing and other farm work. A few minutes' work converts it into an ordinary touring model.

SEES FUTURE FOR CYCLECARS ABROAD

Discussing the chances of an American invasion of Europe by cycle car selling, E. S. Foljambe, in an editorial in The Automobile Trade Journal of Philadelphia, says that there is an opportunity for American cycle-car makers to market their cars in Europe, and at prices considerably lower than European cycle cars are now selling for. The editorial says in part:

"The average foreign cycle car sells for about $600 to $700. Few of the largest and most influential car makers of Europe have even considered the cycle car situation, and practically but one large maker has placed cars in any quantity on the market. There is that well-known conservatism of the English designer and builder which prevents him from branching out into an entirely new and different design from anything known to standard practice. This inertia of the foreign maker is extremely marked in comparison with the go-ahead and push of the American designer and builder.

"In this country manufacturers do not hesitate to try out small cars on unconventional lines after tests have shown that these will work satisfactorily in practice. Already in this country there are several concerns planning outputs of from 1,000 to 3,000 cycle cars per year, and one maker announces he will build 10,000 this season, the prices ranging from $300 to $400. That these prices can be considerably lowered is almost assured when designs become standardized and quantity production is actually in operation.

"This means that it is perfectly possible for the American makers to flood the European market with good, serviceable cycle cars at anywhere from $100 to $300 less than cycle cars are being manufactured and sold for at the present time in Europe. That there is a big demand for cycle cars in the foreign market is evidenced by the success which has attended the few progressive European makers who have already entered the cycle-car industry.

"The danger of such an invasion is recognized, especially in England, as shown by articles and editorials in foreign papers. In the September issue of The Cyclecar there was an article under the heading "Wake Up the Midlands! Are British manufacturers prepared to Fight an Invasion of American Cyclecars?" In this article it says, after calling attention to speed and fearlessness of the American designer and manufacturer:

"'So we see the American cycle car already looming on the horizon as a most dangerous competitor to the English manufacturer. What will be the result on the English market as soon as these great American cycle car factories become established? The English motor manufacturers have allowed the American light cars to steal a march on them, and in every part of the country one sees almost more American small cars than English. It is to be hoped devoutly that the same thing will not occur as regards the cycle car movement.'"

HOW TO AVOID FREEZING.

Care of the Motor When Cold Weather Comes Described.

In speaking of "care of motors in cold weather," in view of a possible sudden frost, William H. Stewart, Jr., teacher of automobiling, says that the modern self-starter may obviate the difficulty of cranking by hand, thereby saving work on the part of the driver, but that freezing of the motor cannot be prevented except by exercising great caution. When the mercury is at the freezing point, the motor should not be left dead with the water in it. While there may be sufficient heat in the circulating system to prevent immediate freezing, it is only a question of a short time before this is lost, due to the great radiation area.

"Probably the radiator is the most sensitive part," said he last week. "Here the water is purposely spread out into sheets, in order to obtain the proper cooling of the water under normal conditions of temperature. However, in cold weather the danger of freezing is so much more increased by having such a large radiation area exposed. It is necessary, therefore, in very cold weather to use an anti-freezing solution, if the motor is to be exposed when not running. If this is not done, then the water should be drained from the lowest point in the system. In allowing the water to drain, the engine should be started and allowed to run for a minute or two, in order to further dry the parts. This, of course, is impracticable except when the car is to stand in the cold for a long time. The best method for practical purposes is to use an anti-freezing solution made of one-quarter alcohol, one-eighth glycerine and five-eighths water, which will stand a freezing test of ten degrees below zero. For New York City, where the temperature seldom falls below zero, a solution with slightly less alcohol and glycerine will be found sufficient."

AUTO COMFORT FOR WINTER

Some of the Things Not to Do If You Eschew "Dead" Storage.

Undoubtedly the heir to the throne of success is the man who owns and uses a good automobile, said Thomas J. Fay, Fast President of the Society of Automobile Engineers, the other day.

"At this time of the year," he said, "when the more timid of the car owners are fretting about the possible mischief that Jack Frost may be up to; when some owners, like nature's small fry, would undergo a monotonous hibernation—placing their automobiles in dead storage—it but remains for the wise ones to have a care:

Don't depend upon water in the radiator—use half and half, water and glycerine, or like proportions of denatured alcohol.

Don't purchase inferior "motor" spirits," (gasoline;) the heavier products are non-volatile in cold weather.

Don't run on partly deflated tires; they will crack in the cold.

Don't let dirt accumulate at the joints at any point; it will form a hard crust and cut like a knife-edge.

Don't fold the top down while it is wet; the fabric will freeze and crack.

Don't keep up a high speed on frozen and rough roads; battle-scarred tires will be the product.

Don't leave the lap-robes at home; they long to snuggle up to you in the cold.

NEED DISTILLED WATER.

Storage Batteries of Motor Cars Deteriorate Easily from Chemicals.

Hydrant water should not be used in replenishing storage batteries for electric starting and lighting of automobiles, according to Stewart McDonald, motor car maker.

"Only distilled water should be used in storage batteries," he said recently. "People seem to have the impression that any water that is good enough to drink or wash in is good enough for a storage battery. The presence, however, of chemicals, such as iron and phosphates, while just the thing to tone up a weak digestion, plays havoc with a storage battery. Constant addition of these chemicals, even in infinitesimal amount, will soon weaken the battery so that it is absolutely worthless. Distilled water added to the batteries every two or three weeks is practically all the attention they need. The electrical part of the starter and lighting systems cause little or no difficulty."

RULES OF COMING RELIABILITY RUN

How Equipment Will Be Penalized for Failure to Meet Conditions of Contest.

FIRST TIME IN AMERICA

Fifteen Entries Already for Three-Day Meet to be Held in This Vicinity Soon.

Judging from the interest shown by individual car owners, manufacturers and dealers in the 500 mile New York reliability contest which the Motor Dealers' Contest Association is to hold in the vicinity of New York City, Dec. 3, 4, 5, the event promises to be successful. The committee in charge of the run consisting of David Beecroft, George H. Robertson and E. Lascaris have received many inquiries concerning the contest and thus far about fifteen actual entries are assured.

In a few days the tentative routes selected for the run will be surveyed by Henry Caldwell. The distance for the first day's trip on Long Island will be 164 miles and a noon stop will be made at Riverhead. On the second day the contestants will journey into Westchester County and Connecticut for a distance of approximately 160 miles, with the noon stop at New Haven.

The run will be unique in that equipment will also be subject to penalty. The equipment with which a car is regularly sold will be considered an integral part of the car during the contest, and will include starter, horns, speedometers, wind shields, tire carriers, shock absorbers, lamps, rebound straps, and bumpers. Penalties affecting some of these items will be as follows:

	Points.
WINDSHIELD.
Broken or cracked glass	5
Broken frame or rod	3
Broken or lost support	3
Bent frame or rods	2
Loose bolts or screws, each	1
Lost bolts or screws, each	2
Imperfect operating shield	3
Loose glass	2
LAMPS.
Loose lamps, each	1
Broken glass, each	1
Failure to properly illumine, each	3
Broken or damaged body	2
Lost fount, or broken or lost bulb	5
Loose bracket, each rivet or bolt	1
Broken bracket	5

Entrant must state at start of contest if car is equipped with combination lighting, which system is to be used.

	Points.
SPEEDOMETERS.
Inoperative speedometers, failure to register within 25 per cent. accuracy	10
Entirely inoperative	25
Loose, each screw and nut	1
HORNS.

All-Weather Treads

Treads: Double-Thick, Extra-Tough, Immensely Enduring Grips: Flat-Top, Wide-Base, Sharp-Cut, Very Deep

Like a Smooth Tread on Dry Roads—A Resistless Grip on Wet Roads

Buy Nothing Else This Winter

Here is all the advantage, all the economy of the plain-tread tire. And here is the last word in efficient anti-skids. It is the greatest of Goodyear inventions.

The tread is double-thick. The rubber is extra tough—toughened by a secret process. The blocks are deep and enduring. They last for thousands of miles.

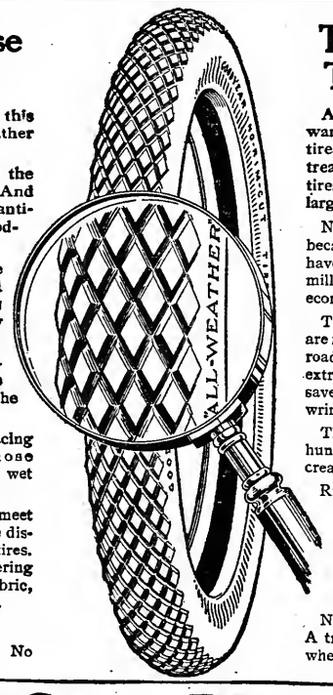
The tread is flat. The projections are broad and regular. Thus we avoid vibration and give you the smooth-tread effect.

The blocks have sharp edges, facing the skidding direction. And those edges stay sharp. Their grip on wet roads is tenacious.

The blocks widen out so they meet at the base. Thus the strains are distributed just as with plain-tread tires. It was separate projections, centering the strain at one point in the fabric, which made anti-skids short-lived.

Come, see and compare them. No man who does this will ever buy the old-type anti-skids.

There is no comparison, in efficiency, in economy, in all-around, long-time service. You can see this at a glance. Yet most anti-skids cost more than these because of smaller output.



GOODYEAR AKRON, OHIO
No-Rim-Cut Tires With All-Weather Treads

The Most Popular Tires Ever Made

All-Weather treads now come, if wanted, on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. They outsell our smooth treads with users. And these great tires are now, by long odds, the largest-selling tires in the world.

No-Rim-Cut tires first won top place because they cannot rim-cut. They have saved motor car owners many millions of dollars by this one great economy.

They are also the only tires which are final-cured on air bags, under actual road conditions. This is done at an extra cost of $1,500 daily. It is done to save the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric.

Rim-cutting is made impossible. Blow-outs and loose treads are minimized in ways that no rival employs. Because of this fact, no other tire compares in sales with Goodyears.

Now comes this All-Weather tread. A tread which safety demands on all wheels at all seasons. An anti-skid tread which has no competition with men who know the facts.

So there are now four economies—four enormous advantages—to win you to No-Rim-Cut tires. You will join the legions who buy these tires when you once find them out.

THE extraordinary supremacy of the 1914 Overland has been officially recognized by the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association.

This organization has awarded the Willys-Overland Company the position of honor at the great National 1914 Automobile Show which opens in the Grand Central Palace, New York City on January 3d.

Do you know that the people of over 50 nations are wiring, writing and cabling to Toledo for Overlands?

Do you know that in response to their repeated requests and urgent demands we are shipping from 50 to 60 carloads a day—which means 200 automobiles every day in the week?

Do you know that the 1914 Overland is today the most sought after car of its type in the entire civilized world?

Even in Detroit, the automobile hub of the world, there are more Overlands being sold than any other car of this type.

The Overland has made, established and won for Toledo with its individual plants alone, the title of the second greatest automobile city in the world.

Detroit, alone, leads and yet the 1914 Overland is outselling, even in Detroit, every competing car.

The Overland factories average 50 shipments to the average maker's one. The Overland factories will build 50,000 cars for 1914. This is more cars than all the factories of France; three times as many as all the factories of Germany and far more than the combined factories of Italy, Holland, Russia and Sweden.

Has it ever occurred to you that there must be some substantial reason for such unparallelled success? There is, and here it is.

No other factory in the world can build a car the equal of the 1914 Overland for less than $1200.

Our price—$950.

That's the reason and the answer.

Now here are the facts.

The 1914 value is increased but the 1914 price is decreased!

It is magnificently finished in dark Brewster green, with running boards and wheels to match, trimmed in polished nickel and aluminum—but the price is lower.

Then there is a larger tonneau, a jeweled Stewart Speedometer—a larger steering wheel, and deeper upholstery—but the price is lower.

There is an Overland dealer near you. See him today.

HAPPENINGS AND EVENTS IN MOTORDOM

ALL EUROPE TURNS TO MOTOR CAR'S USE

In Valencia Famous Carriage Building Plants Are Forced Out of Business.

GERMANS TESTING BENZOL

Cheaper Coal Tar By-Product Proving Good Substitute for Gasoline, Particularly for Heavy Vehicles.

All Europe seems to be turning to the automobile. Comprehensive reports from United States Consular Agents in nearly every European capital have been received by the Department of Commerce at Washington, showing to what astonishing extent the use of the motor car for pleasure and for business has increased in the last year or so.

One of the last official acts of United States Consul General A. M. Thackara before leaving Berlin for his higher station at Paris was to represent in enthusiastic terms the growth of the automobile industry in Germany. Mr. Thackara writes not only of automobiles themselves, but of the recent and successful tests in Germany of benzol as automobile fuel to the displacement of the higher priced gasoline.

According to his information, nearly all the German automobile factories are fully employed, having genuine difficulty in meeting the demands upon them. Some of the factories are unable to make prompt deliveries. Mr. Thackara hears nothing but good repute for the German-made car, but expresses confidence that the cheaper and highly serviceable American car will not long delay obtaining a strong foothold in the Fatherland.

"There can be no question," he says, "that the German types are highly approved in foreign countries on account of the excellence of their construction and finish and their speed and elegance. For this reason the German automobile industry will remain largely unaffected by fluctuations in the home market. The principal countries figuring in this trade beyond the ocean in the last year or two have been Brazil and Argentina. Among European countries Russia is the largest single customer for German automobiles. Thus the export to Russia increased from 7,200 metric tons in 1910 to 13,760 metric tons in 1911. Because of its gradually developing industries and its large proposed expenditures in the building of highways, Russia offers an extensive field for the development of the automobile trade.

"Inquiry is said to show that the competition of American automobiles in Germany itself is not yet perceptible. American competition, if it exists at all, is probably to be found more in the motor-truck trade than in that in pleasure vehicles.

"Under the existing commercial arrangement with the United States American automobiles will be admitted at the present low import duties until 1917. The reputation of the German automobiles and the provisions made for the placing of the product on the market are so excellent that competition, even from so vigorous a competitor as the American automobile, need not be feared. A further evidence of this is the fact that just at a time when general industrial conditions in Germany were affected by the recent war the automobile industry had large orders from the military authorities of other countries. The German automobile industry had in this case taken the lead in competition with the same industry in other countries, and may expect a further market for its product in the same direction."

Mr. Thackara observes that automobilists in Germany are using benzol instead of gasoline to an increasing extent, and the leading auto clubs of Germany, as well as manufacturers, are devoting much time and money to tests and researches to determine benzol's possibilities.

"Unlike gasoline, which is derived from petroleum, benzol," Mr. Thackara explains, "is a coal tar by-product. The magnitude of the coking industry in the United States affords facilities for the native production of benzol and makes some account of progress in Germany with its use as a motor fuel of importance to American motor vehicle interests.

"The growing use of benzol as a motor fuel is a direct result of the advance in the price of gasoline. Its higher specific gravity and supposedly less thorough combustion precluded it from consideration until the demand for gasoline began to approach the limits of the supply. In 1907 about 6,000 metric tons of 2,204.6 pounds each of benzol were used in automobile motors in Germany. In 1911 consumption had arisen to 30,000 tons. The German Benzol Association reports the probable consumption for 1913 at 80,000 tons, and adds that consumption in 1914 will probably rise to 95,000 tons.

"Up to the present the greatest success with the use of benzol as a fuel has been in connection with motor trucks and buses and other heavy vehicles. The consensus of opinion appears to be that, in the case of heavy vehicles, heavy gasoline and benzol are of about equal worth as a fuel. The use of light gasoline is precluded by its price. Benzol freezes at a somewhat higher temperature than does gasoline, but the addition of a small quantity of tolu oil (a kindred coal tar by-product) is said to make a Winter benzol with which there is no difficulty so far as freezing is concerned. The consumption of benzol per horse power mile is said by some to be slightly higher than that of gasoline, while others say that the per-unit consumption of the two fuels is practically identical. One user of benzol reports that it has the advantage over heavy gasoline; that the latter as purchased commercially varies greatly in purity and specific gravity, resulting in irregularity in combustion."

Writing from Hamburg, United States Consul General Robert P. Skinner gives an idea of the growing popularity of the American moderate priced car among Germans. He says:

"During 1912 automobiles of American manufacture were imported into Germany to the weight of 324.5 tons, against 55.3 tons in 1911, all of them probably purchased below $2,400 each. Between January 1 and March 31, 1913, the importations of American motor cars amounted to 102.6 tons, against 39.2 tons during the same period in the previous year. American importations were exceeded only by those from France, 133.9 tons, the total importations for the period being 457.8 tons."

In Spain, where the automobile is driving the coaches and horses from the streets and threatening the closing of the famous carriage building factories of Valencia, United States Consul Claude I. Dawson is informed that an interesting invention relating to automobiles is soon to be tested under Spanish military auspices.

"It consists," Mr. Dawson says, "of an automobile wheel made of steel, with steel tires, which is said to be elastic and flexible, with most of the advantages and few of the disadvantages of the rubber tired wheel. The novelty is in the construction of the tire, which is composed of a number of equal parts or arcs with sharply beveled ends, each of which makes a flush joint with its neighbor. These segments rest on and are attached to strong elliptical springs whose resistance and flexibility are mathematically calculated, as is also the thickness and surface of the tire. The interior of the wheel is cast solid and provides necessary anchorage for the tire and springs. The tire is designed especially for use on motor trucks.

"The cost is said to be only 75 per cent. of that of the pneumatic or solid rubber tired wheel, and the weight 50 per cent. As regards durability, there is no comparison, as the steel tire will last indefinitely. Other advantages claimed for the invention are that it has greater resistance than rubber tires; that the steel tire is perfectly elastic at all points; that the flexibility of the tire can be altered to accommodate varying loads; that it can be used on all vehicles regardless of the load to be transported and the flexibility of the tire will be proportioned to the weight of the cargo; that it is not affected by heat or cold or by the condition of the roads; and that it does away with all accidents caused by tire troubles, and can not be easily damaged, while all repairs can be easily and quickly made at an insignificant cost."

CITIES SAVE WITH TRUCKS.

Experience of Los Angeles and Milwaukee Favors Motors.

Evidence that the automobile truck has brought a great saving to tax payers in service to municipalities is cumulative. Municipal Engineering has recently made inquiries, particularly relating to trucks in the service of city water departments, and some of the replies received are enlightening.

"For the Los Angeles water works, the motor vehicle has made possible the centralization of authority, equipment, men, and supplies," writes Burt A. Heinly of the Water Department, Los Angeles, Cal. "The city to-day extends over a wide area, and the limits continue to broaden. With the continued use of the horse, it would have been necessary to have established three substations in widely separate parts of the city with all the attendant expense of grounds and buildings, additional clerks and the duplication of equipment, stock records, &c.

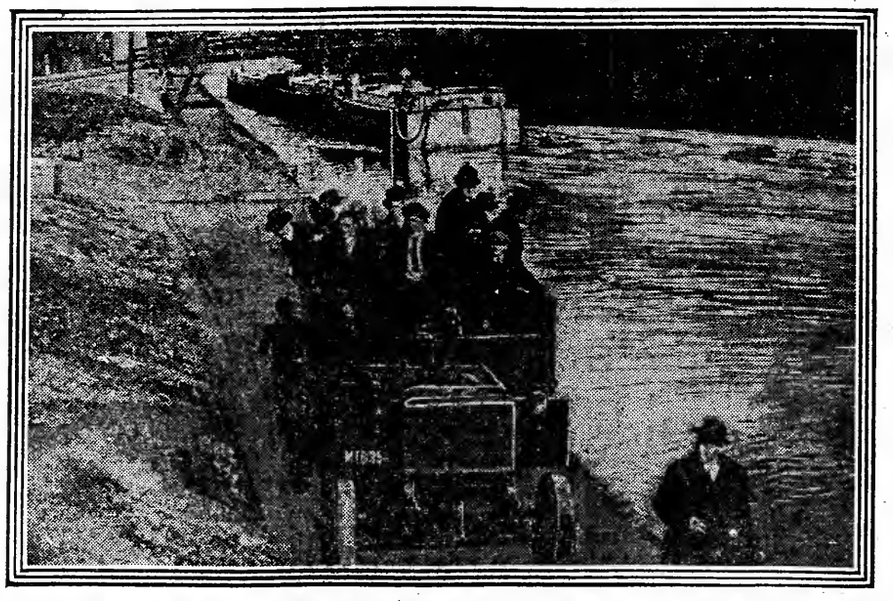
"The horse has been relegated to the rear in the case of breaks, leaks, meter readings, turn-offs and turn-ons, and complaints of all kinds. Now a foreman with his automobile and gang connects his portable telephone with the nearest line and reports to the central office as soon as he has finished a job. He is then directed to the next job nearest at hand. The complainant is often surprised to find that, although he may live ten miles from the water works office, ten or fifteen minutes after he has telephoned his grievance to headquarters there is a department man at the door to help him out of his difficulty. This sort of efficiency is the kind that begets confidence on the part of the consumer and the wholesouled co-operation of the whole city.

"Two forty-horse-power trucks of 1,500 pounds capacity each are used in the meter repairing division. These cars carry four men and replace six horses. The horses in our stables cost us an average of $225 per head. After six years of service on our asphalt streets a horse has served his purpose, and we are glad to part with him for $50. Harness and wagons cost the department on an average of $150 per outfit. It is our belief that the department has the right to expect fifteen years' service from a well-built first-class truck. This would make the annual depreciation amount to only 6.66 per cent."

"This department is operating four trucks with such success that it is the intention of the department to gradually dispense with all horses and wagons," says Henry P. Bohmann, Superintendent of Water of Milwaukee. "Practical demonstration and a tabulated record of work done by horse teams convinced us that it would be beneficial to replace horse teams with auto trucks. Forty-two per cent. of our time was formerly spent in driving the teams to the jobs and back to the shop.

"There is another feature of great importance in favor of trucks. The work can be kept up to the handle at all times. In using teams, we had the city divided into ten districts, while by using motor trucks we are able to cut the city into four districts. The work does not have to wait until it can be closely routed, as was the case when using horses, as the trucks cover a far greater territory."

THEY EVEN TOW BY MOTOR TRUCK



This shows a La France truck, with Manly hydraulic drive, pulling a tow of three canal boats, a load of 731 tons. The truck pulled the boats along easily, at the rate of four miles an hour. A reel of the feat is to be shown in moving pictures houses shortly.

RICHMOND AWAITS A. A. A.

Miami Highway Association Will Also Meet There Soon.

At the time that the American Automobile Association holds its annual convention in Richmond, Dec. 1, 2, and 3, the Miami Highway Association will also hold its annual meeting. The Quebec-Miami Association was born in Richmond two years ago at the first meeting of the American Association for Highway Improvement known as the American Road Congress.

It was at this convention that one of the delegates, Jesse Taylor, arose and scathingly denounced Southern hospitality. He said that there was so much hospitality that it was impossible to get the delegates to attend any of the afternoon sessions. The delegates, however, took the scolding good naturedly and made up by the volume of business transacted the time they lost in seeing Richmond and being entertained.

Richmond promises to outdo itself with the double convention this year. It is the first time that the American Automobile Association has held a national gathering outside of New York and Chicago.

HONOR SYSTEM FOR ROADS A SUCCESS

Convicts in Many States Now Do Highway Work, with Few Escapes.

The practice of putting convicts on their honor, especially prisoners who are at work constructing or repairing highways, has been started in several States and is meeting with much success, according to reports received by the National Committee on Prison Labor. North Dakota, Oregon, New Jersey, Michigan, Ohio, and Colorado are among the States where the honor system has been developed to its highest degree. Under the laws of North Dakota, the Board of Control may employ convicts on the public highways, their expenses to be paid by the respective counties in which they work. The law stipulates that the prisoners perform their duties under the supervision of skilled laborers, who act as guards; but, so far as possible, the law declares, the convicts are to be placed on their honor. Another feature of North Dakota's prison laws is worded as follows:

"Each short-time convict worked upon said State roads shall receive a credit upon his time of ten days for each thirty days that he shall faithfully and diligently work upon said State roads, and in case of convicts serving life sentences, such privileges shall be given them as in the judgment of the Warden is proper, but in case that any convict fails to do faithful and efficient work or attempts to escape, he shall forfeit all or as many of said credits as in the judgment of the Warden shall be proper."

Of 275 convicts who were worked under the honor system in Ohio, only 18—less than 7 per cent.—attempted to escape, according to the report of Preston E. Thomas, Warden of the Ohio State Penitentiary. While these men were thus employed there was no barrier except their own honor between them and freedom. Of the 18 men who broke faith, all but seven were caught and returned to the prison, so that the percentage of those who failed to serve their full sentences was only 2½. This record, says Warden Thomas, compares favorably with trusts in the outside world.

Also in Michigan, where all persons convicted of drunkenness or vagrancy are sentenced to work on the roads instead of to jail, the practice of trusting prisoners has been found successful. Not only that, but, according to W. M. Bryant, Good Roads Commissioner of Michigan, the sentencing of convicts to work on the highways tends to eliminate much petty crime. It was in Colorado, under Warden Thomas J. Tynan, that the honor system was first employed among prisoners at work on the highways, and it is in that State and Oregon that the system has been most extensively developed. Gov. West of Oregon, in a statement to the National Committee on Prison Labor concerning the honor system among prisoners at work on the roads, said:

"Our road gangs are made up of from fifteen to twenty-five men, with a free man as foreman, who lives and works with his crew. His word is law in camp, and his report as to conduct of the prisoners carries great weight with the prison officials. It is most essential, therefore, that great care be exercised in the selection of these foremen. We have had unexpected success in the operation of our road gangs. Some have been maintained as far as three hundred miles from the prison, and nearly all in the hills and mountains, where every opportunity was given to escape. At first we lost a number of men, due largely to the novelty of the plan, and unjust newspaper criticism which made many of them fear the abandonment of the policy and their return to prison. There has been less newspaper criticism of late, and the public, seeing the merits of the system, is accepting it as a settled policy."

Traveled Motor Dog Dead.

Los Angeles mourns the passing of "Ketchel," famous dog motorist, who made a double transcontinental trip last season and had covered, at various times, more than 25,000 miles on the front seat of a car owned by D. L. Fallin. "Ketchel" was a bull terrier. He met his end under a truck, after leaping from the seat of his master's car to do battle with a rival.

MAKERS APPROVE UNIFORM AUTO LAW

Auto Chamber of Commerce Issues Statement Advocating Farsighted Policy.

ATTACKS HIGH FEES

Roads, It Says, Should Conform to Traffic, Not the Reverse—Lower but Permanent Mileage Favored.

H. W. Perry, Secretary of the Good Roads and Commercial Vehicle Committees of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce, has issued the following statement supporting uniform motor vehicle legislation, a subject discussed here on Friday by Commissioners from many of the New England and middle States:

"Automobilists and motor vehicle manufacturers look with favor upon the efforts to produce a uniform motor vehicle law. The many differences that have existed in the provisions of the various State laws governing the use of motor vehicles have been a source of confusion and unnecessary annoyance to hundreds of thousands of law-abiding citizens who drive their cars from one State into another for pleasure or as a matter of convenience or who operate motor delivery wagons and trucks in the delivery of merchandise and long-distance haulage.

"Two-thirds of all traffic over all the highways of Massachusetts is self-propelled, as ascertained by a most careful census taken by the State Highway Commission, and the proportion is practically the same in Connecticut, according to the ex-Commissioner of Highways of the Nutmeg State. It is likely to be as great in many other States soon, if it is not now. So, on the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number, it is evident that the regulation of motor vehicles should be as simple and liberal as public policy will permit.

"It must be patent to all that the citizens of New York State have not voted for the issuance of $100,000,000 bonds for improvement of the highways for the benefit of traffic by horse-drawn vehicles, because the agitation for better roads has been conducted mainly by the motor vehicle owners.

"It is becoming recognized quite generally that the water-bound macadam road which has been the standard type of improved road for the last century is not suited to present mixed traffic conditions, and to that extent is becoming obsolete. And there is no doubt that there still exist many old bridges that ought to be rebuilt or strengthened without delay. But if laws are passed for the protection of these antiquated bridges and obsolete roads, the country and town authorities are likely to take advantage of the statute to neglect their improvement indefinitely.

"One serious objection to existing laws is that, by imposing heavy registration and licensing fees on motor vehicles and their owners and operators, they carry the implication that self-propelled vehicles are the only ones that do any damage to the roads. These fees have been increased so often that they are now far in excess of the actual cost to the State of registering and licensing automobiles purely for identification as a police measure, and are frankly admitted to be in the nature of a tax for road repair and maintenance. The Supreme Court of Alabama and one of the lower courts in Ohio have this year declared this feature of the respective State laws unconstitutional. Obviously, if there is to be a tax on road users for road maintenance, it should be imposed on all types of vehicles, and not on motor vehicles only. The Road Commissioners of Massachusetts and other States call attention in their official reports to the fact that horse-drawn vehicles also damage the roads. Unless a special road tax is in lieu of other taxes on vehicles, it constitutes double and unjust taxation, and is invalid.

"If the Road Commissioners and Legislators will eliminate graft from all road work and build roads of a type or types that will be durable under the increased volume and changing character of highway traffic, the annual savings in cost of repairs, which now average more than $500 a mile in some States, will offset in a few years any excess in first cost of such roads over the present impermanent roads. There is no reason to doubt that when the public has enjoyed the benefits of good, permanent roads for a time and has received confidence in the integrity of the Highway Departments, money will be forthcoming to extend the mileage of such roads as fast as the needs of the people require. It is wiser and more economical to build a lesser mileage of improved roads each year and to make them of permanent character than to build a large mileage of temporary roads that will be costly to repair and will require resurfacing in the course of a few years."

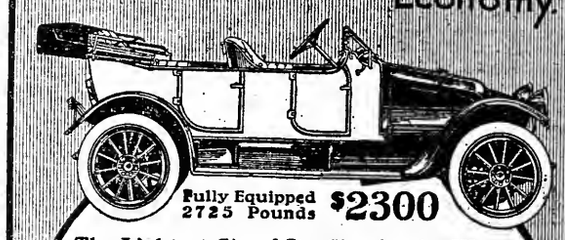
Eclipses All Records in UPKEEP Economy.



Fully Equipped 2725 Pounds $2300

The Lightest Six of Its Size in the World

—light at the expense of superfluous weight, but not strength. The saving alone in using a direct cooling, instead of a water circulating system, illustrates how and where we have saved in weight.

Another instance is the motor—small, light, but wonderfully powerful, an adaption of the Franklin Motor used in the celebrated test made by the Automobile Club of America, establishing the almost unbelievable record of 83.5 miles on one gallon of gasoline!

LEGATIONS MAKE DEFENSE PLANS

Ministers of Germany and Austria in Mexico Issue Formal Notice of Preparations.

NO PLANS BY AMERICANS

NO BATTLE NEAR JUAREZ

Gen. Villa Says He Has His Army Posted, but No Federals Come to Meet It.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 23.—Evidence of the apprehensions of danger felt by the foreign diplomats in the capital was afforded to-day by the action taken by two Ministers to safeguard their nationals here.

The Austrian Legation sent out a circular urging all Austrians to co-operate with the German and other European colonies in organizing for defense. In this circular it is stated that the troops in the city are so few, and the likelihood of uprisings against foreign residents so possible, that the legation deems it wise to adopt defense measures.

Accompanying the circular was another, issued by the Germans, detailing the plan of organization. Men who served in the German Army have been put in command, and will direct affairs. The Germans have a fair supply of rifles and ammunition and two machine guns.

The Americans have made no systematic attempt to protect themselves, the disposition of the majority appearing to be to trust to Gen. Huerta and his forces or to luck.

Resigned, apparently, to conditions making it necessary to carry on a dilatory campaign against his enemies, President Huerta and his official dependents appeared serene to-day, convinced that the United States would not take more drastic measures toward the Mexican Government than those already initiated.

It had been rumored that Congress would not continue to meet; that it would be automatically dissolved, and that Gen. Huerta was about to quit office. All these reports have been disproved by Congress launching itself into what promises to be a prolonged session. It is expected that to-morrow it will take up the ratification of nullification of the Presidential elections. It is understood that these will be annulled, that new elections will be called, and that President Huerta will remain at the head of affairs.

Huerta's "Last Ditch" Policy.

According to his intimates, no one realizes more fully than Gen. Huerta the desperate straits of his Government; but he has reiterated his intention of pounding away at his enemies until he or they have won. At the National Palace the idea of intervention is scoffed at, and the suggestion of a blockade is received with skepticism. Gen. Huerta himself is credited with having said that, while the ports might be easily taken, it would be impossible for invaders to get as far as the capital.

How large Gen. Huerta's army is at present is not known, but the last official report placed the number at 80,000. The campaign of drafting into service individuals of all stations has added, according to unofficial statements at the palace, 30,000. But it is certain that no such number as this is under arms, as the Government has had difficulty for some time past in obtaining rifles.

Men are more plentiful than arms, and Gen. Huerta is looking forward anxiously to the receipt of rifles purchased abroad. A large Japanese consignment should begin to arrive here about Dec. 1.

The army levy has created something like a panic among the men and women of the lower classes, since even women are being forced into service as "soldadeas." The streets of the city at night are practically deserted, and innumerable subterfuges are resorted to by workmen to escape the clutches of the drafting agents.

The financial situation is the most serious that Huerta is facing. The fact that the national treasury is practically empty is not hidden from even the most ignorant peon in the city, and the measures recently adopted to obtain funds have been such as are calculated to remove any doubt remaining. The new stamp tax, which will go into effect on Dec. 1, will practically double the revenue from that source. Special taxes have been imposed, and the taxing of articles imported by parcel post is being discussed.

Every possible opportunity for raising money is being carefully considered by the Department of Finance. Silver is scarce, and it is feared that the launching of one-peso and two-peso bills throughout the republic will not serve to restore general confidence in the banks. Behind each of these bills there is presumed to be a metal reserve, but there is a fair proportion of the public which is skeptical of this.

Employers of labor have found themselves seriously embarrassed by the shortage of silver, and their cashiers are carefully hoarding every coin against pay day. Often it has become necessary to group three or four men and pay them the total of their wages in bills, leaving them to divide as best they can.

These conditions have resulted in an increase in the prices of ordinary commodities, and the best promise merchants hold out is that there will be a still further increase.

Local Papers Under Censorship.

The military situation throughout the country is little understood in the capital. It is almost impossible to obtain accurate news of operations not fifty miles away, and practically all the news published in the local papers is distrusted by the public, who realize that it is given out by the departments of the

BOILED ALIVE AT HIS POST.

Engineer Carr Stuck to It in Scalding Steam and Saved His Train.

Special to The New York Times.

METUCHEN, N. J., Nov. 23.—With seven coaches full of passengers swinging behind his engine in the express train he was taking from Philadelphia to the Pennsylvania station in New York, Engineer William Carr had run past Trenton and was making up lost time on the stretch of track between Millstone Junction and Metuchen this noon when the steam chest of his locomotive exploded. And this happened when Train 140 was going at a rate of fifty miles an hour.

With the explosion came a great outpouring of steam that enveloped Carr, and scalding water streamed over him. But the veteran engineer did not think of leaping to safety. He thought instead of the passengers in the seven coaches behind him, and for all the steam and boiling water he stuck to his post, throwing on the emergency brakes and closing the throttle.

As the train came to a jarring standstill, trainmen and conductors came running along the tracks to see what had happened. They found Carr unconscious in his cab. His flesh was horribly scalded, but his hand was still upon the throttle.

They lifted him out tenderly, and as soon as possible he was moved to St. Peter's Hospital, where to-night he lies between life and death, rather nearer death, for he had been through a great ordeal and, though still a streng, hardy man, he is 60 years old.

The passengers who rode with Train 140 this morning will be interested to know that Carr is married and that his home is in Philadelphia. How much they owed him, they seemed to realize full well, to gather from the talk that buzzed in the knots of men along the tracks beside the stalled train. They knew that Carr had prevented a wreck by going blindly through with his emergency work in the face of the steam and the scalding water.

The accident held up traffic for an hour and the passengers on Train 140 were transferred to others. This train had left Philadelphia at 10:30 o'clock this morning and was due at the terminal in New York at 12:53.

WOMAN DIES IN AUTO CRASH

Motor Car Falls on Mrs. Otto Schultz of Morristown.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, N. J., Nov. 23.—Otto Schultz, of Morristown, Secretary and Treasurer of the Morris County Traction Company, was driving his automobile along the Morris Turnpike late this afternoon when, about a mile to the West of this place, the auto crashed into that of G. C. Johnsen of New York. Mr. Schultz had seen the Johnsen auto slow down because of trouble, but he was unable to swerve to one side in time to avoid crashing into it. Mr. Schultz's automobile was overturned and Mrs. Schultz, who had been sitting beside him, was thrown through the windshield. She and her husband were caught beneath the wrecked auto and Mrs. Schultz was killed. Mr. Schultz escaped with painful bruises.

Their companion was William Blake, who was thrown clear of the wreckage. He was not hurt seriously. Mr. Johnsen was not injured.

FOUR U. S. SOLDIERS KILLED

Struck by a Train at Texas City—Chauffeur Also a Victim.

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 23.—Four United States soldiers and a civilian chauffeur were killed and another soldier was seriously injured late to-day when the automobile in which they were riding was struck and demolished at Texas City Junction by a Galveston, Harrisburg & Henderson passenger train. The automobile attempted to cross the track ahead of the train and was struck squarely in the centre.

The dead are:

JOHN M. LIVINGSTONE, private, Battery D, Fourth Field Artillery.

J. M. PARKINGSON, private, same command.

FREDERICK D. PROCTOR, orderly, Eleventh Infantry.

A. FREDENTHAL, private, Company M, Eleventh Infantry.

WYLY SLOMAN, chauffeur, Texas City.

The other man in the car, Henry L. Smith of Company L, Twenty-sixth Infantry, although badly hurt, will probably recover. All the soldiers were stationed at Texas City.

DIES OF FRIGHT IN AUTO.

Car Hits Wagon and Horse's Head Brushes Mrs. Walker's Face.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Fright is believed to have caused the death to-night of Mrs. Gertrude Walker, 34, when the automobile in which she was riding collided with a wagon. Dr. Thomas H. Walker, her husband, who was driving the machine, was thrown to the street, but Mrs. Walker merely swayed forward.

She screamed as the head of one of the horses attached to the wagon brushed against her face. When her husband reached her he found that her heart had ceased to beat.

TRYING TO AVERT STRIKE.

General Electric Co. and Employes to Renew Conference To-day.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 23.—A second conference between representatives of the General Electric Company and a Grievance Committee representing employes laid off recently, is to be held to-morrow morning, pending the result of which the men, who had threatened to walk out Saturday morning, will remain at work. Labor leaders reassert their intention of calling the men out if those laid off be not reinstated.

The men charge the company with having shown discrimination, alleging that certain prominent trades unionists were laid off because of their activity in organizing the employes.

DREADS NEW SILK STRIKE.

Paterson Awaits Anxiously Outcome of Weavers' Demands.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 23.—The authorities in this city are awaiting anxiously the outcome of the demands which ribbon weavers in this city will make to-morrow morning upon their employers. The workers inspired by the I. W. W. will insist upon an answer by Dec. 1 to their demand for a nine-hour day. A general strike will mean ruin for hundreds of houses and mills, it is said, as the silk industry has not recovered from the previous strike.

The demands to be presented to-morrow will be made on behalf of about 5,000 ribbon weavers. Broad silk weavers will present the same demands later in the week. Altogether, about 12,000 silk workers in Paterson are affected.

RAILROAD WIRELESS PROVES A SUCCESS

Lackawanna Limited's Conductor Ill, It Gets a Substitute; Cars Needed, It Has Them Ready.

CONVINCING EXPERIMENTS

The conductor in charge of the Lackawanna Limited that left Hoboken for Buffalo yesterday morning at 10:15 o'clock was taken ill while his train was running fifty miles an hour, thirty miles this side of Scranton, Penn. Ordinarily a delay for changing conductors would have been necessary—either a stop this side of Scranton while a telegram was sent ahead asking for a relief conductor or else a wait in Scranton while the relief conductor was being obtained. And every delay of a train that is scheduled to run from Hoboken to Buffalo in nine hours and forty-three minutes is considered a serious matter.

But there was no delay. The train was equipped for wireless telegraph service; it is the only train so equipped in the world. The conductor notified the wireless operator and, while the train was rushing fifty miles an hour and although mountains rose high between him and Scranton, the operator sent a message to the railroad Superintendent there. When the train pulled into Scranton a little more than half an hour later, a relief conductor stepped aboard, grip in hand and ready to take charge. The other conductor stepped off and sought a physician.

The train was crowded when it left Hoboken yesterday morning and forty miles this side of Scranton the conductor saw that he needed another coach. He did not have to stop to send a message by telegraph and no delay was necessary in Scranton while the needed coach was being brought up from the yards. The wireless operator was notified, a wireless message was sent ahead to Scranton, and by the time the train reached that station the extra car was waiting near by for a quick coupling.

L. B. Foley, the Lackawanna's Superintendent of Telegraph, who was on the train in charge of the wireless testing, decided to get off at Scranton and return to New York on the eastbound limited due there two hours after his arrival. David Sarnoff, Chief Inspector of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, was operating the wireless instrument on the train and went on to Binghamton to make further tests. As the limited was due to leave Binghamton an hour before he arrived, he planned to catch a midnight train back to New York.

But Mr. Foley while in Scranton learned that the eastbound limited was an hour late, and a wireless message was immediately sent from the station at Scranton to the one at Binghamton and from there back to Mr. Sarnoff on the train. All ready for a quick connection when he arrived in Binghamton, Mr. Sarnoff made a run for it and caught the eastbound limited as it was pulling out. He and Mr. Foley returned together last night on the same train.

Second Experiments.

The first wireless experiments were made on the limited which left last Friday and yesterday's were the second and more successful. Scranton and Binghamton are sixty miles apart, but while the train was between the two stations it was always in communication by wireless with one or the other of them. When Mr. Sarnoff was notified of the late train the message was sent to Binghamton and then back to the train because at that time the train was in the Binghamtcn "zone."

When Mr. Foley and Mr. Sarnoff stepped off the train in Hoboken last night they were jubilant.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Foley, "the wireless will revolutionize railroading. We won't do the revolutionizing this week, maybe not this month, but the time is coming, and it is not far distant, when the wireless telegraph on trains will make the safety and convenience of railroad travelling 100 per cent. greater than they are to-day. And as a preventive of accidents I think the wireless will prove of the greatest value.

"In the Hudson tubes and Subway, for example, the train dispatcher sits in his room and by the flashing of lights knows exactly where every train is. If two trains get dangerously close together he can send a signal that will almost instantly stop one or both of them. I believe that the same thing can be done on railroads with the wireless. The dispatcher can sit in front of a board on which the location of each train on the line will be shown by wireless telegraph. If he sees trains getting too close together for safety he can send a wireless message that will stop one of them anywhere—out in the country miles from a telegraph station.

Doubtful Points Cleared Up.

"But of course all this is in the future. At present we are only experimenting. As far as they have gone, however, the experiments justify the predictions. Our first doubt, when we contemplated installing the wireless, was about using the rails for grounding the electric current. You know there is a ground wire at every wireless station, but you can't have one from a moving train. So we tried sending our ground current to the rails when we made our first experimental trip last Friday. The scheme worked well and the first difficulty was overcome.

"And another problem was settled at the same time, that of supplying the electric current for the messages. We simply used the dynames already in the train for lighting purposes. We had feared that they would not furnish sufficient current for the wireless or, if they did, that using it would weaken the lights. But we used all the electricity we needed and the lights were not perceptibly dimmed. I think it is certain that we can use the rails for ground wires and the ordinary lighting dynamoes for our current. This was demonstrated on our first trip.

"Our next problem, the one we attacked to-day, is to get our instrument on the train in tune with those in the stations at Scranton and Binghamten. You see on account of the tunnels and low bridges over the tracks we cannot have a high aerial on the train. But high aerials are necessary if messages are to be sent any great distance, so we have built them high at the stations and are trying to work them with low aerial on a train. This makes the transmitting of messages between the train and the stations more difficult. The instruments have to be adjusted until they are in tune, but I believe this difficulty can be overcome.

"To-day we sent and received messages so easily that we are convinced that the only thing required to perfect the service is an adjustment of the instruments until they are in tune. We shall make an experimental trip every other day until this adjustment is satisfactory. Then the wireless service on the Lackawanna Limited will become a regular thing."

The wireless apparatus has been installed in the forward part of the train. The aerial consists of a wire rectangle over each of four cars supported at each car corner by a stanchion two feet high. In the rear end of the second car from the front an operator's room has been built, so that the receiving and sending instruments are under the centre of the aerial.

Anti-Tammany Forces Received $131,787, Spent $129,519, and Owe Only $1,156.

Charles L. Bernheimer, Treasurer of the Citizens' Municipal Committee, yesterday made public a list of receipts and disbursements showing that during the recent Fusion campaign the committee had received from various sources the sum of $131,787.10, and had expended $129,519.41, leaving a cash balance of $2,267.69. There remain outstanding liabilities amounting to $1,156.67, which when paid will still leave a balance of $1,110.74.

The report shows that the committee began work with a balance of $8,450.04 which remained from the primary fund. From political committees the following contributione were received:

Israel Feinberg Campaign Committee	$50
Irish-American Mitchel League	55
Marcus M. Marks Campaign Committee	250
McAneny Campaign Fund	250
Mitchel Campaign League	5,000
Mitchel College Men's League	1,000
Republican County Committee of New York County	1,000
William A. Prendergast Campaign Committee	250

From 1,260 individual contributors the sum of $114,191.28 was received; from agents' unexpended balances was received the sum of $37.10, and by the sale of furniture and office supplies at the close of the campaign $1,422.70 was realized.

Headquarters maintenance in all amounted to $26,395.46. Publicity, including the cost of printing The Voters' Weekly, a campaign paper, cost $21,493.42. Meetings and branch headquarters, automobile and truck hire, music, fireworks, rent of halls, salaries, and similar items of expense involved the expenditure of $13,198.51. Disbursements to political committees for meetings were as follows:

Fusion Committee, Queens County, $1,300; Anti-Tammany Jeffersonian Alliance, $1,000; College Men's League, $170; Queens Fusion Committee, for general expenses, $1,000; Mitchel Campaign Committee, $2,000; Mitchel League of Foreign-Born Citizens, $150.

Other disbursements to political committees and organizations for general campaign expenses were as follows:

Women's Fusion League for Good Government, $25.

Mr. Bernheimer said last night:

"This report breaks a record, in that it shows no deficit; in fact it shows a slight surplus.

"The pervasive, fundamental, and controlling idea of the Treasurer has been to collect enough money to handle the Fusion campaign with economy, and with the best business methods possible in a hastily assembled organization containing many raw recruits in its elements; and also sufficient for the purpose of safeguarding the ballot at registration and election times, and at the count. Another and most important principle upheld was that the moneys should be collected from sources where no obligation was attached, so as to allow the electoral candidates an absolutely free hand, with no feeling of obligation and a sense of duty only to the electorate. The larger sums given by individuals were given as a contribution to pure citizenship and for the good and better Government of the city, and I am glad to attest to their liberality and civic spirit in this regard.

"During the last week of the campaing about $40,000 was collected, largely as a result of the strong appeals made to the public to come forward and help us protect the ballot.

"The contributions to political parties are offset by contributions from political parties in part. As we were the central collection agency, the Republican and Progressive speaking campaigns, involving expenses of halls, decorations, bands, &c., were financed by us."

ITALIAN WARSHIP RUNS ON A REEF

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

MILAN, Nov. 23.—The San Giorgio, one of the finest armored cruisers of the Italian Navy, lies stranded on a reef off the fishing village of Santa Agatha near the northwestern extremity of the Straits of Messina. Some serious doubt appears to exist regarding the possibility of salvage.

This is the same unfortunate warship which Capt. Albenga ran on the rocks in the Bay of Naples two years ago while enabling a woman guest to take snapshots of the coastline. Such enormous rents were then torn in the vessel's hull that besides occupying several weeks in getting off the repairs are said to have cost more than $1,000,000.

The present disaster happened soon after leaving Reggio, Calabria, where the officers and crew had been participating in a local festival banquet. Instead of steering between Scylla and Charybdis the sub-officer who was guiding the ship while the commander was busy entertaining Admiral Cagni committed the error of making a mistake in the lighthouses on Cape Peloro and Cape Pezzo, and thus ran the vessel practically full length on the shoals lining the Sicilian coast.

Both propellers were disabled and the holes in the hull caused the immedite flooding of the boiler rooms and the adjacent compartments.

Fisherfolk ashore were amazed to see the San Giorgio speeding toward them at the rate of twenty miles an hour. They waved lanterns and shouted a warning, but, despite the calm, starlit night, their signals apparently were unnoticed. Soon they heard a terrific crash and a prolonged crunching, and then excited voices giving orders.

It was found that any attempt to drag the vessel off the submerged rocks was bound to enlarge the rents in the hull; so it was decided to lighten her. This work is going on as rapidly as possible. The stern of the vessel is sinking in the sands, and the high tide may render her position very dangerous. Her prow is facing directly inland, high up out of the water.

The San Giorgio, which was launched in 1910, has a length of 462 feet, a displacement of 9,830 tons, and a speed of 22.5 knots an hour. It carries a battery of four 10-inch guns, eight 7.5-inch guns, and smaller pieces.

JUMPS OFF FERRYBOAT.

Man Cries "Good-Bye" Before Leaping—Searchlight Hunt in Vain.

The ferryboat Leonia had reached midstream on its way from West 129th Street to Fort Lee at 8:30 o'clock last evening when the passengers on the lower deck saw a man who had been standing at the stern climb over the railing. Before any of them had a chance to put out a staying hand, he cried out "Good-bye," and jumped into the North River.

There was a scramble to send the word to the bridge, but Capt. McCabe was helpless, for the Leonia is without a searchlight. He tooted a call for help to the Edgewater, then just leaving the slip at Fort Lee. The Edgewater came alongside, her searchlight swept the surface of the Hudson, and with this light playing steadily, the two ferryboats floated down stream for a mile, hoping always for some sight of the man who had jumped overboard. While the searchlights swept the water, Quartermaster Hallworth of the Edgewater, with two of the crew, went out in a rowboat. Their work was fruitless, and at midnight last night the harbor police were searching for the body.

None of the passengers appeared to have seen the stranger's face. They said that he wore dark clothing and that he might have been about 30 years old. That was the sole description the police had.

GIRLS SWEPT FROM BUS TOP

Two girls riding on the top of a Riverside Drive bus were swept from their seats by the overhanging branches of a tree and painfully injured shortly after 9 o'clock last night. They were Miss Amelia Arnold, 19 years old, and her sister, Gertrude, '17, of 111 West 105th Street. They were taken home in a taxicab by their brother James, who was riding with them on the bus. The accident occurred as the bus was nearing Riverside Drive in Ninetieth Street.

The course of the motor buses since they stopped crossing Seventy-second Street to the Drive has been across Eighty-eighth Street, but for some reason James Callahan of 516 West Fiftieth Street, driver of the bus, made the trip to the Drive through Ninetieth Street last night. The young women were sitting on a front seat. The branches struck them in the face. Miss Amelia was severely cut on the neck and her front teeth were loosened. Her sister was cut on the lips and several teeth were knocked out.

The bus was stopped, and Policeman Schneider of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station was about to summon an ambulance when the brother of the two young women hailed a taxicab and took them home, saying they would be treated by the family physician.

MITCHEL COMES OUT FOR T. W. CHURCHILL

Tells Times Correspondent in Panama He Strongly Indorses Him for School Head.

NOT DR. MAXWELL'S FIGHT

Abraham Flexner Denies That Superintendent Is Behind Movement to Prevent Reappointment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 23.—John Purroy Mitchel, the Mayor-elect of New York, and his party arrived this morning at Colon and were met by a delegation of the Knights of Columbus and escorted to church. Afterward they came to Panama by a special boat train.

When questioned by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent regarding the fight against the reappointment of Thomas W. Churchill as President of the Board of Education, Mr. Mitchel said:

"I heartily and thoroughly indorse the appointment of Mr. Churchill. You can't make it too strong. Is that emphatic enough?"

Mr. Mitchel greatly enjoyed the trip. This afternoon he and his party were taken in autos to various old Panama points and to the canal city by Col. Goethals. To-morrow they will visit the canal. Mr. Mitchel will sail next Tuesday, visiting Colombia for two days. Then he will start for New York, where he hopes to arrive about Dec. 4.

Superintendent of Schools William H. Maxwell had nothing to do with the campaign to prevent the reappointment of President Thomas W. Churchill of the Board of Education, according to a dispatch received by THE TIMES last night from Abraham Flexner, one of the signers of the letter asking Mayor Kline not to reappoint Mr. Churchill. Mr. Flexner is now in Hampton, Va. This is his dispatch:

HAMPTON, Va., Nov. 23.—The statement by Mr. Churchill and his friends that Dr. Maxwell is responsible for the endeavor to prevent Mr. Churchill's reappointment is absolutely without basis. Neither directly nor indirectly has Dr. Maxwell had the least connection with the movement, nor has he had knowledge of it. This is not a fight waged in Dr. Maxwell's behalf. Its sole object is to purify the Board of Education. ABRAHAM FLEXNER.

Mayor Kline announced on Saturday that he would make known his decision as to the reappointment of Mr. Churchill on Wednesday of this week. He could not be reached last night.

A sharp campaign between Churchill and anti-Churchill factions was started about a week ago when the Women Teachers' Association circulated a petition calling upon Mayor Kline to reappoint the President of the Board. On Nov. 19 President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University and twelve associates including Henry S. Pritchett, Felix Adler, Julius Sachs, Frederick J. E. Woodbridge, Dean of the Graduate Faculties at Columbia, ex-Mayor Seth Low, Henry W. Taft, Felix Warburg, Frederic R. Coudert, Otto T. Bannard, Wallace Buttrick, Charles L. Burlingham, and Abraham Flexner, sent a letter to Mayor Kline protesting against Mr. Churchill's reappointment, asserting that during the past two years the Board of Education had steadily and rapidly deteriorated. The intimation that politics was beginning to play a part in the school board was very strong.

Mr. Churchill was quick to issue a letter of denial, and the Board of Education announced its intention to answer Dr. Butler, alleging that the charges were without foundation.

Next came the charge that Supt. Maxwell was really behind the move to prevent Mr. Churchill from returning to the Board of Education, it being alleged that Mr. Maxwell saw his support in the board dwindling away, and was making an attempt to break the forces opposed to him. Further moves are contemplated by both sides to-day and to-morrow to influence Mayor Kline in his decision.

Otto T. Bannard, Treasurer of the Republican County Committee, who was one of the signers of the letter to Mayor Kline advising against the reappointment of President Churchill as a member of the Board of Education, commenting upon the statement of Mayor-elect Mitchel favoring the reappointment of Churchill, said last night:

"I think it would be a mistake to reappoint Churchill. I regret that Mr. Mitchel has seen it necessary to interfere in the matter. I think the others who wrote to Mayor Kline objecting to his reappointment, I am opposed to him."

Frederic R. Coudert, another of the signers of the letter to the Mayor against Churchill, declined to make any comment on Mr. Mitchel's announcement.

ALARM FOR STOVER GROWS.

Friends Expected News Yesterday, but Heard Nothing.

No word was received yesterday concerning Park Commissioner Charles B. Stover, who has not been seen in this city since Oct. 15. The last account of him was from John N. Bogart, ex-Commissioner of Licenses, who said that he saw Mr. Stover in Washington on Friday and that Mr. Stover then said that he would be back in New York very soon. Accordingly, friends of Mr. Stover believed that he would apppear yesterday or the day before and tell how he came to disappear without notifying any of his fellow members of the city officials. Those who were interested in the Park Commissioner's welfare were disappointed yesterday, however.

Relatives of Mr. Stover at Easton, Penn., said that they had no information regarding the missing man, and were becoming much concerned about him. Mayor Kline said at his home yesterday that he had not yet received a communication of any kind from Mr. Stover.

ROBINS IN NOVEMBER.

Mrs. Sipe, 100 Years Old, Never Heard of the Like Before.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 13.—"I never saw or heard of the like; the world must be coming to an end," exclaimed Mrs. Ann Sipe, 101 years old, as she looked out into her dooryard to-day and saw robins hopping about.

"I can remember back ninety years, and I never heard of such a thing as strawberries blooming, trees budding, and robins cavorting around in November. Land sakes alive! Spring's come back when Winter ought to be here."

Spring weather reigns all over the Cumberland Valley, and Mrs. Sipe is not the only one of the old inhabitants who never heard of the like before.

PEER'S SON TO WED ACTRESS

Baron Grantley's Heir Said to be Engaged to Maggie Jarvis.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—It is rumored that the musical comedy actress, Maggie Jarvis, is engaged to marry the Hon. R. B. Norton, heir of Baron Grantley.

Mr. Norton, when interviewed, did not contradict the rumor, but at the same time refused to authorize a definite announcement.

The Hon. Richard Henry Brinsley Norton was born in 1892, and is a son of John Richard Brinsley Norton, fifth Baron of Grantley. His mother was a daughter of the late Commodore McVickar of New York.

Mrs. Bell will go to Milton, Fla., where her yacht, the Bells, is being prepared for her to cruise eastward, through the Santa Rosa Sound, where she intends to fish and hunt. Mrs. Bell is an expert with rifle and shotgun.

HORSE THROWS GEN. WOOD.

Army Chief Falls, but Is Unhurt When Mount Makes Bad Leap.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff, was thrown from his horse to-day while riding near Fort Myer, Va., but aside from a slight shock he was unhurt. Accompanied by his little daughter, Miss Louisita Wood, who recently took the ninety-mile riding test with her father, Gen. Wood continued his ride.

The accident came when the General, who is a bold and skillful horseman, put his charger over a wide ditch. The horse, instead of taking the ditch in regular style, leaped high in the air, almost falling backward.

FIRE IN A MAIL BOX.

Policeman Finds Letters Smoldering In Madison Avenue.

A policeman walking up Madison Avenue at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon saw smoke coming from the mail box on the southwest corner of the avenue and Seventy-second Street. Another policeman joined him and they were trying to find some way to put out the fire when William Felix, a postman, came along on a mail collecting tour. When he opened the box it was found that the letters inside were smouldering. Some twenty-three letters had been damaged.

The mail was taken to Post Office Station Y, at Sixty-seventh Street and Third Avenue. There it was found that all but four of the letters could be sent to their destination. An effort will be made to find the senders of those that could not be forwarded. According to the Post Office authorities, there was nothing to indicate what started the fire in the box.

STUDENTS WIN BIG PRIZES.

First, of $1,000, to A. E. Suffern of Columbia, for Labor Essay.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Prizes amounting to $2,000 awarded to winners of essay contests were announced to-day by a manufacturing house. The first prize offered, $1,000, was won by Arthur E. Suffern, a graduate student of Columbia University, with a paper entitled "Conciliation and Arbitration in the Coal Industry." The second prize of $500 was given to G. P. Watkins of Cornell.

In the contest among the undergraduates the first prize of $300 went to Jesus Waldo Myers of Cornell, and the second prize of $200 to Fred W. Eckert of Northwestern University.

FIRE DAMAGES A CHURCH.

Priests Brave Flames to Save the Host from Altar in Brooklyn.

Some one walking in Luquer Street, Brooklyn, at 1 o'clock this morning saw smoke coming through the cracks of the windows in the vestry of the Church of St. Mary Star of the Sea, a Roman Catholic Church in that borough. The police were notified, and the sleeping inmates of the rectory were awakened.

Mgr. Joseph O'Connell, rector of St. Mary, followed by Father O'Malley and two other priests entered the church from the front. Already the flames were crackling fiercely in the vestry in the rear, and smoke was filtering out into the body of the church over the altar. The rector and his assistants made straight down the aisles through the smoke and took the host from the tabernacle and the sacred vessels from the altar.

With these in their arms they returned to the rectory before they took any further steps toward saving the church. Meanwhile, the firemen had arrived, and they confined the flames to that part of the church building. In addition to th edamage to the building, there was a heavy loss involved in the destruction of costly testments kept in the vestry. Altogether, the damage was estimated at $25,000.

DROWNED BY GREAT FISH.

Dragged Into Sea, Victim Bewailed His Fate.

While fishing last night from a bulkhead at a point about midway between Coney Island and Brighton Beach, an unidentified man, 55 or 60 years old, tumbled into the water. As he sank he shouted that he had been pulled in by a great fish tugging at the other end of his line. He disappeared before other fishermen on the jetty could help him.

William Hyde, well known about Coney Island as a fisherman, happened to be sitting next to the stranger. He started wildly up Surf Avenue shouting that a man had been dragged into the sea by a huge sea serpent. His cries attracted the attention of Policeman William Major. They got grappling irons and a boat and at 10:30 o'clock last night dragged the body of the drowned fisherman ashore. He was about five feet eight inches in height, 150 pounds in weight. He wore a black suit and a gray sweater.

Hyde said that the man had come to the jetty first at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Half an hour later he said that he felt some great fish tugging at his line. At dusk he went away and returned at 8 o'clock. It was just 9 o'clock when he was pulled off the bulkhead.

SEEKS TO INDICT JAMES K. M'GUIRE

Whitman Will Take Case of Syracuse Ex-Mayor Before Grand Jury.

CHARGE HE ASKED "TOLL"

Violated Law, It Is Asserted, in Soliciting Political Funds from Corporation.

STATE BUSINESS THE STAKE

Brother Says Ex-Mayor Is Now Out of Country—Contractors Hard to Find.

District Attorney Whitman, it was learned yesterday, will lay before the General Sessione Grand Jury this morning evidence which he has discovered in his campaign-graft investigation and will ask the Grand Jury to indict James K. McGuire, former Mayor of Syracuse and one of the powerful Democratic poloticians of the State. "Jimmy" McGuire, as he company. The Barber Asphalt Company has furnished practically all of the oil and asphalt used on the State highways of New York, to the exclusion of the products of other companies, of which Coy company was one."

When James K. McGuire, according to Mr. Condit, visited the office of the Union Oil Company in the Whitehall Building on or about Aug. 5, 1912, he asked for Mr. Condit. They had known each other for several years. McGuire started to talk about the bids for work on State highways which were to be opened a month later. These bids, it was recalled yesterday, were for the construction of nearly 500 miles of roads.

"James K. McGuire told me," said Mr. Condit," that the bids would be opened early in September. He said that it had been agreed and arranged that the specifications for these contracts were to be drawn up by the State Highway Department in such a way as to let in the products of four other companies in addition to the Barber company, each company getting about one-fifth of the work, and that the Union Oil Company could come in as one of the five favored companies if it would agree to the terms proposed."

The "favored" companies named by James K. McGuire, according to Condit, were the Barber company, the Union Oil Company, the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, 79 Wall Street, the United States Asphalt Refining Company, 90 West Street, and Warren Brothers of Boston. It was recalled yesterday that George H. McGuire, in the John Doe proceedings, acknowledged that either he or his brother had attempted to deal with three of these companies, the Union Oil, the United States Asphalt, and the Warner-Quinlan Company.

"I told McGuire that that sounded very encouraging to me," said Condit yesterday. "We had been trying to furnish asphalt to public contractors for nearly ten years without success, and I asked McGuire what the terms would be."

Gives Terms to Condit.

McGuire replied, according to Condit:

"The terms are a campaign contribution of $5,000 for use in the campaign to be conducted this Fall, and a commission of 1 cent per gallon on all products furnished by your company to the contractors, this commission of 1 cent a gallon to be paid to George H. McGuire of McGuire & Co., Syracuse."

Condit explained that his company had always refrained from getting business except openly and above board and that his mind was made up at the very instant that his company would not accept any such proposition. So desirous was he of getting some "inside information," he explained, that he was anxious to hear more about McGuire's proposal.

"That's why I questioned him further," said Condit. "I asked McGuire when this toll would have to be paid."

McGuire then replied, according to Condit:

"The $5,000 campaign contribution will have to be paid at once. The one cent per gallon can be paid as the material is furnished by your company."

Condit wanted to know from McGuire, according to his story, what guarantee the Union Oil Company would have that the arrangement would be carried out if the $5,000 were paid.

McGuire replied to this, Condit said, that it would be purely a "matter of honor" and that Condit would have to rely solely on McGuire's word.

"I did some figuring on the quantity of material which my company would furnish under such an arrangement," continued Condit, "and found that the commission of one cent a gallon would amount to about $15,000 and that this, together with the $5,000 campaign contribution, would therefore make a total of about $20,000.

"McGuire was interested in knowing what bid my company proposed to make. He seemed to take it for granted that the whole toll of $20,000 should be served for in the bid. I made the suggestion that, anyway, I proposed a figure under which my company could pay the $20,000 and still make a good profit on the transaction.

"McGuire, on hearing that figure, said it would be too low. He said that it would make trouble for other bidders and that if my company put in a bid it should be for a much higher figure, such as the other companies would make.

"After considerable conversation I allowed McGuire to believe that the Union Oil Company would come into the proposition as suggested. McGuire then said that he was to go immediately to Tennessee on a business trip and that the arrangements would have to be made with his brother, George H. McGuire of Syracuse."

The following day, which was Tuesday, Aug. 6, a long-distance call came to the Union Oil Company and a voice at the other end of the wire asked for Condit. This is what the voice said, according to Condit:

"This is George H. McGuire of McGuire & Co., Syracuse. I understand that my brother, James K. McGuire, had a conference with you yesterday in regard to your company furnishing materials to contractors engaged in the construction of public highways."

"I replied," said Condit yesterday, "that my company had not come to a final decision in the matter and the man who purported to be George H. McGuire replied that it was of the greatest importance that a decision be reached at once; that if the Union Oil Company was to come in on the proposition their acceptance must be given immediately.

"On the following day," continued Condit, "I again was called on the telephone and the one speaking announced himself as George H. McGuire of Syracuse, and said that the decision of the Union Oil Company must be had at once. I then told the man purporting to be George H. McGuire that my company had decided not to accept the proposition offered by James K. McGuire."

Condit Seeks Whitman.

Condit, it appears, said nothing about the conference with James K. McGuire or the subsequent telephone calls until the present investigation got under way. Then he went to District Attorney Whitman, unsolicited, and told the whole story. Whitman referred to Condit's affidavit when he had George H. McGuire on the witness stand in the John Doe proceedings last Friday afternoon. McGuire brought his brother, James K., into the testimony a number of times. As Whitman read the names of the other companies said to have been approached for campaign contributions, McGuire acknowledged dealings with some of them, and explained in reference to others that he could not recall the details, but that his brother might be able to do so.

It also came out at this hearing that McGuire, in a talk with the District Attorney, had asked Whitman whether he intended to call his brother as a witness. Whitman flatly told him that he had no intention of calling James K. McGuire. When McGuire later was asked about his brother's whereabouts he explained that he had sailed for South America immediately after he had been assured that the District Attorney did not want to call him.

James K. McGuire was born in this city 46 years ago, but went to Syracuse as a boy. In 1885 he was elected Mayor of Syracuse by the Democrats and Independents for the first time and was re-elected twice.

Mr. McGuire was known as "the youngest Mayor of a large city in the United States." He served a term as Chairman of the State Democratic Committee, and has been mentioned at times as a candidate for Governor and Lieutenant Governor. For years he was the leader of his party in Syracuse and Onondaga County. William H. Kelley, the present Democratic boss of the county, did not take the reins until James K. McGuire moved to New Rochelle. In recent years McGuire has been known best as the agent of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company.

Assistant District Attorney William Dean Embree was sent up-State on another flying trip yesterday. It was learned that he had gone directly to Syracuse, and it is expected that he will look for any long-distance telephone calls entered at Syracuse for "Rector 3569" during the month of August, 1912. This is the telephone number of the Union Oil Company of California, represented here by Fillmore Condit. Embree, it is expected, will also try to find some of the contractors whom Mr. Whitman is anxious to call before him. If the process servers have succeeded in serving any additional subpoenas over Sunday, there may be a continuance of the John Doe proceedings this afternoon before Magistrate McAdoo. The hearing is scheduled for 2:30 P. M., but if no contractors appear Mr. Whitman probably will ask for an adjournment until after Thanksgiving. It was planned to have twelve contractors on hand for to-day's hearing.

Another witness whom Mr. Whitman expects to see to-day is James S. Johnson, sales agent in this State for the Barber Asphalt Paving Company of Philadelphia. McGuire has testified that he received $750 from Johnson and that this was a partial reimbursement for the Sulzer "gift" of $2,500 made by McGuire.

Mr. Whitman is looking for other bank accounts of George H. and James K. McGuire. So far he has found record of only $20,000 in deposits by these two brothers to their joint account. It was to this joint account, according to the younger McGuire's testimony, that all the commissions on oil and asphalt and cement collected from various companies selling to State contractors were deposited. Mr. Whitman has found that the McGuire brothers' commissions were large. If Mr. Whitman can find that any man or men shared with the McGuires in these commissions then the investigation, so far as he is concerned, practically will be completed.

FULLER SCOUTS CHARGES.

Denies Story Regarding Instructions to Contractors.

ALBANY, Nov. 23.—Gov. Glynn has not changed his decision not to make public the charges against John N. Carlisle, Commissioner of Highways, until after Carlisle has had an opportunity to answer them.

Not all of the allegations have been made public, Gov. Glynn said to-night.

Roy K. Fuller, Secretary of the Highway Department, said that it could be proved by 150 witnesses that Mr. Carlisle was in Watertown on July 5, when the reported conference was held in Cooperstown between Sulzer, George H. McGuire, and himself.

Carlisle was out of the city to-day. Gov. Glynn probably will send him a copy of the charges to-morrow, when he is expected to return here.

One of the principal charges implicating Fuller is that after the alleged Cooperstown meeting he was ordered to send a notice to contractors regarding asphalt. The contractors were notified in thirty telegrams, the charges now in the Governor's hands say, to use only "solid, natural" asphalt. This kind is sold only by the Barber Asphalt Company.

It has been asserted that copies of these telegrams were in the hands of the Frawley Committee last Summer, but no evidence relating to them was produced at the trial of William Sulzer.

"Thirty telegrams of the nature described never were sent from this office on July 5, or on any other day," Fuller said to-night. "Only one telegram was sent that day. It was to a contractor, notifying him that a carload of material had been rejected. It was sent merely in the course of routine business.

"Probably more than 100 telegrams of similar import have been sent out since Carlisle took office. This particular one was not signed by me, but by the Assistant Secretary, and I did not know it had gone until several days later.

"It was concerning this message that I was questioned before the Frawley Committee and then I testified that although I was not aware that the telegram had been sent the Assistant Secretary had authority to sign my name to such communications.

"As far as my having repudiated any signatures, that allegation is manufactured out of whole cloth. The one telegram referred to is the only one the Frawley Committee questioned me about."

Fuller said that on July 2, several letters were sent to the various division engineers directing them to compel contractors to live up to the specifications in carrying out their contracts. These he had signed, he said.

"I was with Commissioner Carlisle in Watertown on July 5," Fuller continued, "and there are 150 or 200 people who can testify to his presence there, if necessary.

"Furthermore there were no officials or employes of the department in the office on the afternoon of July 5, as it was a half holiday."

OSBORNE PLANS WORK.

Will Report Graft Testimony to Glynn, Who Will Sift Cases.

ALBANY, Nov. 23.—The first witness in Gov. Glynn's graft investigation probably will be examined by Commissioner James W. Osborne on Tuesday. He will come here that day prepared to remain indefinitely; and while much of his work will be in outside counties, it is likely that the Albany County cases first will be taken up.

Osborne's assistant, Arthur T. Warner, will examine some witnesses tomorrow, but merely for the purpose of learning what they know regarding alleged graft in order that he may report to Osborne. He now is in the city, and to-night he completed reading all of the reports of John A. Hennessy, Sulzer's special investigator.

Hennessy will not be made an assistant to Osborne, it was said to-night, but he may be called upon to help get at the bottom of some of the graft charges he has unearthed.

The method of procedure in the inquiry will be for Osborne and Warner to examine witnesses and then report the results of their work to the Governor. He will then select such cases as he believes justify the Grand Jury inquiry and submit them to such a body. Osborne may be named a Deputy Attorney General to present this evidence. Gov. Glynn held a long conference to-day with District Attorney Rollin B. Sanford of Albany County. They refused to discuss the result of their conference.

MURPHY'S FOES CONFER.

R. F. Childs Urges Consideration of His Short Ballot Plan.

Under the auspices of the Samuel J. Tilden Democratic Club, at 256 West 116th Street, Richard F. Childs, President of the National Short Ballot Association, delivered a lecture yesterday afternoon to a group of independent Democratic leaders who are active in the new movement to depose Charles F. Murphy from political power.

Mr. Childs told of the merits of the Massachusetts ballot on which candidates are grouped by office and not by party. He said that such a ballot naturally necessitated a reduction in the number of elective offices.

He advocated the appointment of Secretary of State, Attorney General, State Treasurer, State Controller and State Engineer. This, he said, would fix the responsibility for the good administration of these great departments of the Government directly upon the Executive.

Assemblyman Murray of the Nineteenth District spoke upon the proposed primary reform whereby the election district will be made the unit of representation in any political organization. At present, he said, a certain number of representatives on the Democratic General County Committee are chosen from each Assembly District. Every voter throughout that district votes for all of these men.

Stewart G. Gibboney outlined a plan for the independent Democrats to defeat Tammany Hall. He aroused loud applause when he announced that William F. McCombs, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, had assured him of his entire sympathy with the new movement.

"The National Chairman informed me that there was no doubt in his mind of the need for a reorganization of the Democratic Party in this city," said Mr. Gibboney. "Dudley Field Malone, the new Collector of the Port, is also in complete sympathy with us. It is not necessary to say that Mayor-elect Mitchel will give us his moral backing and practical assistance."

The Woodrow Wilson League of the Thirty-first Assembly District was organized yesterday afternoon at a meeting held at Mount Morris Hall, 1,364 Fifth Avenue. The object of the league will be the overthrow of Tammany. President Wilson and Mayor-elect Mitchel were elected honorary members. About forty residents of the Thirty-first Assembly District enrolled as charter members.

MARKS SAYS CHANCE WON FUSION VICTORY

Good Government May Not Be So Lucky Again Unless Well Supported, He Tells Judaeans.

BUSINESS MEN DIDN'T HELP

Rabbi Lewis of England Speaks for the Co-operation of Jews in All Countries.

Marcus M. Marks, President-elect of the Borough of Manhattan, told the Judaeans at their meeting last night at the Hotel Astor that the success of the Fusion ticket was due largely to the revelations of John A. Hennessy and to the exposures of Tammany by the Sulzer impeachment. He said that in a way it was a negative victory, because it was founded on the mistakes of Tammany rather than on the strength of the cause of good government, and gave the warning that the victory would not produce permanent results if the people who favored good government lost the enthusiasm that caused the landslide this year.

"I have heard the Chairman tell of the great honor that has been done me," said Mr. Marks, "and I wish I could believe that my election was a reward of merit and service. But I cannot help feeling that the last election was carried, not because the voters appreciated what a good government they had for four years, but because they learned how bad the other side was.

"The public opinion which was expressed at the last election was the result primarily of the exposures that followed the impeachment of Gov. Sulzer and of the revelations of John A. Hennessy. They showed the people how much worse Tammany was than they had supposed, and the result of the election was not so much a recognition of merit and service as it was a condemnation of the methods of the other side.

"That is a matter that is worth considering seriously. If it had not been for the mistake of judgment by Murphy in impeaching Sulzer things might have been different. The result was, therefore, to some extent an accident. But we cannot expect that such accidents will come at such a fortunate time for us in the future. If the forces of good government, which got together just before this election, disband immediately after the election we cannot hope for a repetition of this success. We should not rely on lucky incidents to give us good government.

"Now I will tell you how you should be concerned with this. I went to a good many meetings during the campaign and I tried to meet the Fusion workers, especially the members of the Progressive and Republican organizations. Now, I am sorry to say that I found very, very few business men among them. There were not a few professional men, but the business men were notably absent. The business men in New York, as a rule, are so much engrossed with their own affairs that they will give little or none of their time to public affairs, and so I say to you business men that as a rule you are not fulfilling your duties. Although you probably be interested most of all in having a good business administration, you are generally unwilling to do anything to bring it about.

"That is the condition at present in this city, and if it is not changed it will be hard to secure a continuance of good government in years to come. Only yesterday a Tammany man said to me significantly, 'We have been beaten before.' Tammany has been beaten before and has returned to power again, and we cannot hope to put an end to its career if the citizens who are on the side of good government quit paying attention to public affairs and rely on an accident to come to our rescue again."

Rabbi Harry S. Lewis of London, the first Lewisohn Lecturer to the United States, made an appeal for a closer union among the Jews of all nations, and suggested that an international commission should be established to bring the Jews of different nations in touch with one another. He said:

"The Jews of America made a protest against the discrimination against Jews by Russia on the passport question. How much more powerful that protest would have been had the Jews of all nations joined in the protest. Of course, the objection you will hear to this is that the charge would be made that the Jews are actuated more by race feeling than by patriotic feeling for the various nations to which they belong. But that fear I think I suggest is a craven one, after all, and should not be allowed to influence us as it does."

If the Jews scattered among many nations should be more closely knit into one world-wide community, Dr. Lewis said that the leadership in the movement would, in his opinion, be in the United States. At one age, he said, the leading community of Jews was in Palestine, later in Babylon, then in Spain, and then in Germany.

"Some would say," he continued, "that the hegemony among the Jewish nationalities would be in England, but others consider, and I think they are right, that it should rest in America. In this country would certainly be the largest centre of population. But another thing is required for leadership and that is the spiritual inspiration. That is seldom found in the masses of the people, but it is the responsibility of organizations like yours to supply the light and leading."

Dr. Lewis said that the problems of the Jews to-day were the same that they had been centuries ago. The phrase "the wandering Jew," according to Dr. Lewis, contained an element of truth, but that one side of the Jewish character was more finely described by the Germans in a phrase that suggested the quality of always persisting and always remaining the same.

The problem discussed last week by the Federation of Jewish farmers, that of keeping the children of Jewish farmers from returning to the cities, was one which caused concern to the Jews of Alexandria two thousand years ago, he added.

Dr. Lewis strongly urged his hearers to favor admittance to this country of all suitable immigrants. Most of the Jews in England and in this country, he said, would find a few generations back that their own forefathers had been admitted as immigrants. In England, he said, if some of the immigration restrictions had not been removed during the nineteenth century, the parents of Israel Zangwill would have been excluded.

Government, and that the proofs of all the Mexican newspapers are revised by censors. The public has not yet been told through the press that Victoria, the capital of the State of Tamaulipas, has been taken by the rebels. On the contrary, optimistic reports are published of the campaign being waged against that city by Gen. Rubio Navarrete.

Confirmation of the report of the fall of Juarez was received from Government sources only a few days ago, but the advance upon the border town by the Federals for the purpose of retaking it is detailed at great length. Torreon and Durango are still in the possession of the rebels, and it is only occasionally that anything is heard of the Government's determination to recapture these important points.

Those distrustful of the Government reports are inclined to believe that the predicament of Monterey and Chihuahua is serious, and the capture of these towns by the rebels would be no surprise here. From time to time railroad communication throughout the length of the National Railway has been restored; but it has almost always been interrupted within a day or two. Most of the cutting has been done between San Luis Potosi and Saltillo, where the rebels ride apparently at will.

Rebels' Wives Movable Hostages.

A private letter from San Luis Potosi gives an account of the protective measures resorted to by the Government to deter the rebels from interfering with traffic.

The families of Mariano Sandoval and Santos Coy, well-known rebels, are being conveyed as passengers up and down the line continually. This is known to the rebels, and the Government authorities assume that so long as the women and children of the rebel chiefs are likely to be the victims in any attack, their work trains will not be molested.

Capt. W. A. Burnside, Military Attaché of the American Embassy, who accompanied John Lind to Vera Cruz, returned to his post here to-night.

The methods of warfare of both rebels and Federals have ceased to shock the people of the country, although they have not been altered. In some cases prisoners are being killed, and in others they are pressed into the ranks of their captors. The warfare in the State of Morelos is unchecked, many regions being described as scenes of slaughter by those who have recently passed through them.

Conditions in the capital of Morelos are quiet, but the city is not too well garrisoned, and the drain made upon the local arsenal by the commanders in the field has greatly depleted the military stores.

Huerta Attends a Bull Fight.

Gen. Huerta attended the bull fight today. Accompanied by only two members of his staff, but guarded by a score of detectives, the President entered the bull ring, where 20,000 persons had gathered to see Gaona, Mexico's greatest matador, open the season. He occupied a box close to the arena. The band played the national hymn, and the people rose to their feet, but there was no cheering. The President left after the killing of the fourth bull.

VILLA AWAITS FEDERALS.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 23.—Gen. Francisco Villa will leave Juarez early tomorrow morning on a special train to join his troops, which are below Tierra Blancas, twenty-six miles south of Juarez, and on his arrival will give the order for the advance against the Federal forces under Gens. Salazar, Caravaeo, Rojas, and Landa, which is at Samalayuca, six miles south of the rebel positions. The Constitutionalist commander said to-night that he expected that the battle would begin soon after his arrival.

On the train which will carry Gen. Villa and his staff to the front there are ten cars, loaded with provisions and supplies for the rebel soldiers, as well as horses and several thousand rounds of ammunition. Part of the ammunition was captured by Juarez outposts last night from Federal smugglers, who were trying to run it through the rebel lines from El Paso to the Federal forces at Samalayuca. The smuggled ammunition escaped.

From deserters from the Federal ranks Gen. Villa said he had learned that Gen. Pascual Orozco and Gen. Mercado, with only 200 men, were defending the city of Chihuahua, and that it was possible that his own men, under Gen. Urbino, would move northward from Santa Rosalia to attack the city with its weakened garrison.

Villa's troops in Juarez were reinforced to-day by 500 rebels from Ojinaga, Chihuahua. The reinforcements were commanded by Col. Carlos Herransa, a nephew of the Commander in Chief of the Constitutionalist forces in Mexico. The Ojinaga rebels will be sent south to assist in the impending battle with the Chihuahua Federals.

"I have placed my army in position twelve miles south of Juarez," said Gen. Villa. "The extreme right wing rests at Bauche, on the Mexico Northwestern Railway, twelve miles from Juarez. The extreme left is at Mesa, thirteen miles from here, and on the Mexican Central Railway. The front extends for a distance of twelve miles between these two points.

"Between 5,000 and 6,000 men, cavalry, infantry, and artillery, are camped along this line, which has been fortified with the cannon I took from the Federals at Torreon and Juarez. The country in that region is hilly and admirably fitted for defense.

"The story that I am planning to evacuate Juarez is absolutely false," continued the Constitutionalist commander. "When I do evacuate, it will be only because Federal bullets drive me out, and that is highly improbable. I have left my army twelve miles outside the city so that I can give protection to families living here and across the river.

"If the Federals enter Juarez, it will only be over my dead body. I do not know whether or not the enemy will come to attack us. In case they do not, I intend to starve them out, for they have no way of getting supplies, cut off as they are from the border and from communication south of Chihuahua."

Juarez was quiet and full of Americans all to-day, although absolutely deserted last night. A prize fight in the Juarez bull ring drew many Americans. Assurances that no harm will come to Juarez or El Paso as a result of any fighting are given constantly to foreigners by all rebel officials, and the best of order is being maintained.

TYRRELL CALLS ON WILSON.

Sir Edward Grey's Secretary Presumably Discusses Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The opportunity of clearing up any misunderstanding that may exist between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain in regard to the attitude of the British Ministry in the Mexican situation was afforded to-night when Sir William Tyrrell, private secretary to Sir Edward Grey, his Majesty's Minister for Foreign Affairs, had a conference with President Wilson at the White House.

The incident was unusual, not only in that a direct representative of the British Foreign Minister should have a private talk with the President, but in that he was received by the President on Sunday. It is the practice of President Wilson not to discuss official affairs on Sunday with anybody except members of his Cabinet, and with them only on very important occasions.

Sir William Tyrrell had previously talked with President Wilson, and it is the understanding here that on his first visit the Mexican situation was discussed frankly. He has been in the United States for a month or more, and, while it is given out that he is here merely on a personal visit, it is suspected that the protracted illness of Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, has caused him to take an active part in looking after matters pertaining to the diplomatic relations of Great Britain and the United States.

After the interview at the White House, Sir William declined to furnish any information as to the nature of his conversation with President Wilson. He said that their talk was personal and private and not to be discussed.

The military situation has taken a leading place, for the time being, in the interest of officials here. While no news came to the State Department or the War Department to-day about the conditions at Juarez and its vicinity, there is a belief at both places that a battle between the Federals and the Constitutionalists is on, and that important developments may be expected soon.

Juarez is just across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas, and in the recent fighting there, which resulted in the capture of the place by the revolutionary forces under Gen. Villa, the battle was viewed by people on the American side of the international boundary. Federal forces are reported to be advancing from Chihuahua to make an attempt to retake the place, and Constitutionalists have gone out to meet them.

It is the expectation here that the prospective engagement will take place about twenty miles from Juarez. The evacuation of the town by the Constitutionalists will quickly follow a Federal victory, according to the view in Washington. Officials seem to have some reason to believe that the Constitutionalists in the event of their defeat will not fall back upon Juarez or attempt to defend it.

The reports of the engagement aimed at the retention or capture of Juarez are interesting to officials chiefly as indicating renewed military activity on both sides. Apparently the revolutionists are encouraged over the belief that their chances of obtaining aid from the United States will be improved if they show an aggressive spirit; while the Federals, it is supposed, are seeking to prove that they are prosecuting vigorously the effort to suppress the insurrection against President Huerta's authority.

In the fighting at Juarez when the Constitutionalists captured the place no person on the American side was injured by the fire of the combatants across the river. Since then, however, this Government has taken the precaution of notifying both Federals and Constitutionalists, through Consul Edwards at Juarez, that they will be held accountable for any injury done to persons on the American side of the Rio Grande in any future engagement. This is in accordance with previous practice. Gen. Bliss, commanding the United States regular forces on the border, has standing instructions to disarm any Mexican combatants who may seek refuge on the American side.

WARNING BY COVARUBBIAS.

Tells English Not to be Misled by Tales of Rebel Savagery.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 24.—Miguel Covarubbias, former Mexican Minister to Russia, in a letter to The Daily Telegraph, warns the English public against accepting the many "unfounded and wildly exaggerated" reports emanating from Mexico City.

He points to the reported massacres at Victoria and Juarez, and continues:

"A set of unthinking upholders of the present régime in Mexico, who have been so active in the campaign carried on with the object of having Huerta recognized by the United States, have now apparently given up all hope of attaining their first end, and appear to be concentrating their efforts upon giving the present civil war the semblance of a savage struggle or anarchy, in order to obtain what they consider the next best thing, namely, intervention.

"By spreading these wild rumors of wholesale massacres of Federal troops by Constitutionalists, they expect not only to bring about that result, but also to make the resistance of the Huerta supporters more fierce by creating the impression that nothing is gained in timely surrender at a moment when such resistance ceases to be courage and is merely foolhardiness.

"Under a play of 'peace at any cost,' the President of Mexico does not care to what length he may go. After having out-Heroded Herod, he is plunging Mexico deeper and deeper into ruin and desolation, but, laboring under a fatal delusion of mind, he pretends he is saving the country, and has not hesitated, 'Napoleon like,' to justify his lawlessness."

REBELS RAID BRITISH CAMP.

Pillage Electra Mills Company—Many Refugees Return to Capital.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 23.—A small band belonging to the forces of the Constitutionalist Gen. Aguilar, has broken up the camp of the Electra Mills Company, a British concern, at Saladero, taking everything it contained. Gen. Aguilar is still demanding money contributions from the oil companies.

The refugee colony in Vera Cruz was considerably diminished to-night by the return to Mexico City of about sixty Americans, including many women. Most of these had fled here at the first alarm, and, being weary of the suspense, decided to return to the capital and look after their business interests.

CARRANZA GIVES A BALL.

MAGDALENA, Sonora, Nov. 23.—Daylight was shining on the tiled roofs of Magdalena this morning before the Sonora State Band finished its last number at the ball given by Gen. Carranza and his officers to the people of the town. The Constitutionalist leader himself did not dance, but promenaded in Spanish fashion on the floor surrounding the patio of the hotel.

To-morrow he expects to depart with his staff on a special train for Hermosillo, the State capital, and after a short stay there to proceed on a military expedition into the few west coast districts still garrisoned by Federal troops.

The prolonged stay of the Constitutionalists in this place remains unexplained except for Carranza's promise to entertain the people of Magdalena at a ball.

Before the dance there was a banquet with speeches praising Carranza.

ARMY DOESN'T WANT WAR.

Gen. Schuyler Says It Is Against Intervention in Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, Nov. 23.—The United States Army does not want war with Mexico, says Brig. Gen. Walter S. Schuyler, U. S. A., retired, who has only recently returned from the Mexican border, where he was stationed for several years.

The army, according to Gen. Schuyler, agrees with President Wilson's Mobile speech against the taking of any more territory by conquest.

"We should probably be able to subdue Mexico," he said, "but it would be a great undertaking and very expensive to the people of the United States. The people of Mexico are to a great extent Indians—6,000,000 out of 12,000,000—and it took the United States troops many years to overcome a much smaller and more scattered number of Indians in this country. The Mexicans would take to the mountains and resort to guerrilla warfare."

PHILADELPHIA'S 'WAR SCARE.'

Rumor of Impending Mobilization Promptly Denied by Gen. Wood.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—A rumor is current here that a call to arms, as a result of the Mexican situation, is expected by officers of the First Brigade, National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Through some channel from Washington, which has not been divulged, Adj.-Gen. Thomas J. Stewart and Brig.-Gen. William G. Price, Jr., Commander of the First Brigade, are said to have been notified that the services of the troops will be requested, and that an official mobilization order may be expected at any hour.

These rumors, which are considered seriously by the officers, have excited the guardsmen, some of whom expect that they will be concentrated in a Southern mobilization camp.

The Philadelphia guardsmen, the rumor has it, will be concentrated in their respective armories, in the event of receipt of orders from Washington, the officers, "non-coms," and enlisted men being permitted leave of absence only on short furloughs.

A conference of the regimental officers is said to have been held with Major Frank L. Mueller, Brigade Commissary, at which the commissaries were authorized to make estimates of the rations required by their respective regiments.

Gen. Stewart, whose headquarters are in Harrisburg, was in this city on Friday and held a conference with officers of the First Brigade.

Plans for the formation of a regiment the nucleus of which is to be composed of men of the Philadelphia police force were discussed to-day at a conference of Supt. Robinson and seaveal Lieutenants of the department. The word was passed around seavral days ago, and more than 1,200 policemen said that they would be willing to go aboard the first train transport for Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Lieut. Gen. Wood to-night made an emphatic denial of the report that orders looking to the mobilization of Pennsylvania troops had been issued. He said there was not even a "routine basis" for the report.

F. H. SMITH CONDEMNS WILSON

Novelist Says He and Bryan Make Us Ridiculous in Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—The policy of the Wilson Administration in the Mexican situation is absurd, ill-advised and ignorant, in the estimation of F. Hopkinson Smith, who expressed his views while a guest last night at the banquet in honor of John Bach McMaster, the historian. Mr. Smith has traveled extensively in Mexico, and has made the country the subject of one of his books, "A White Umbrella in Mexico."

"I think," he said, "that the President has fully shown to the country that he lacks the experience and the knowledge with which to deal with the situation beyond the Rio Grande. His adviser, Secretary Bryan, has not handled the matter well. But, then, what can be expected from a Secretary of State who humiliated his country and shamed his office by entering into a private money-making scheme?

"Huerta is a strong man, and the only man who can bring order out of chaos. The Administration should have recognized him. It has gone too far now to back out, and it must abide by the consequences. I believe the proper step for this country would have been to recognize Huerta, and, if he was to be overthrown by Carranza, to recognize Carranza, and, if Carranza was overthrown, to recognize his successor, until in time a stable Government would be established in Mexico.

"Some one question answers this by saying that it cannot recognize a Government whose acts are stained with blood. That is foolish. The Administration did not hesitate to recognize Servia and the sanguinary Governments of other countries torn by revolutions.

"Some day a drunken Mexican rebel soldier will invade a hacienda, its inhabitants will flee to the coast and be taken on board an American warship. A landing party of American sailors will go ashore, an American will be shot, and then the fat will be in the fire.

"Perhaps there will never be a drunken rebel soldier who will invade a hacienda, but the crisis will come, and it will come through the ignorance and the absurdity of this present policy.

"I have been ashamed, as I sat in the clubs of London, to hear America discussed and ridiculed because of the Wilson Mexican policy. Wilson and Bryan have made this country the laughing stock of all Europe.

"Mr. Bryan has declared that this country shall not go to war, no matter what the provocation or the insult to national honor. Who is Mr. Bryan, that he should say whether or not this country should enter into a war? Congress declares war.

"It is an outrage," said Mr. Smith, in conclusion, "that America should be humiliated and made a buffoon before the eyes of the world by this Administration of theorists at Washington."

LANE WILSON ASSAILS POLICY.

Calls Wilson-Bryan Plans a Scholastic Dream.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—In a lecture to-night at a local theatre Henry Lane Wilson, who resigned as Ambassador to Mexico at the request of the Administration, said President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were unable to form sound views of the real situation in Mexico or any other Latin-American country. Both had been misled, he said, by their theories and moral idealism, and the Wilson policy in Mexico had been destructive rather than constructive, both for Mexico and America.

Mr. Wilson predicted that as a result of the present situation the United States would be involved in a responsibility for the kind of government existing in every country south of the Rio Grande. This would be brought about, he contended, because the Administration's policy would not be acceptable to the Latin-Americans and might not be supported in the United States.

The ex-Ambassador told his audience that he would speak only with the greatest respect of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. Nothing he would say, he said, would violate the trust imposed upon him not to divulge confidential official matters. Concerning the present Mexican policy of the Administration, which he declared to be one of unprecedented interference in the affairs of a friendly Government, Mr. Wilson said:

"Whenever before has this Government attempted to impose or depose chief executives of sovereign friendly or independent States—whenever before has this Government attempted to exercise the right of passing upon the elections of a neighboring friendly republic, or of deciding whether a de facto chief executive has not been made so by constitutional methods?

Misled by Theories.

"Whenever before, misled by vain theories, has this Government endeavored to prescribe a standard of morals for the government of the domestic affairs of a friendly nation? Whenever before in the history of this Government has it dispatched envoys, official or unofficial, to the enemies of order and disturbers of peace in a neighboring republic?

"Whenever before have the representations from our American people living abroad, fallen upon deaf and unsympathetic ears? Whenever before have we ordered by Presidential proclamation Americans out of any country in the world, refusing to afford them or their property protection? Whenever before has this Government announced a policy of supervision over the affairs of neighboring States, which must lead us to interference in the affairs of every unruly republic from the Rio Grande to Cape Horn, and must eventually bring in protests and odium from every quarter?

"Whenever before has this Government attempted, by that which is equivalent to violence, to destroy the credit of a neighboring and friendly republic, aiming to overthrow a Government on the ground that it was established by violence?

"Andrew Jackson would not have done those things. Samuel J. Tilden would not have done these things. Grover Cleveland would not have done this, nor would Champ Clark if he were to-day President of the United States.

"These are policies born of [illegible]

Ought to— But Don't

CALL ON THE A. P. A. TO RISE UP AGAIN

Circulars Sent Out Attacking Mitchel, Malone, Glynn, and Catholics in General.

NEW SOCIETY IS FORMED

Much interest was manifested yesterday by politicians and others in the report that an organized effort was being made throughout New York City to revive the American Protective Association of twenty years ago, better known as the "A. P. A." In the last four days circulars have been mailed to carefully selected persons appealing for support. The circulars bear the name of George P. Newman as President of the organization and John N. Parker appears as Vice President and General Manager. Daniel Kennedy, who is a prominent member of the Loyal Orange Order in this city, is the Secretary and Treasurer of the association, which has opened temporary headquarters at 3 Fifth Avenue. The headquarters, which is at the home of the President, were closed yesterday when a TIMES reporter visited there.

The circulars contain an attack upon Mayor-elect John Purroy Mitchel because of his membership in the Knights of Columbus and his connection with the Roman Catholic Church. It is noticeable that Mr. Mitchel's name is misspelled in the circular. Mr. Mitchel is not only a Roman Catholic, but is a member of Corrigan Council, No. 50, K. C., of which Edward Everett McCall, his Tammany opponent in the recent Mayoralty campaign, is also a member. The circular also attacks Gov. Glynn and Dudley Field Malone, newly appointed Collector of the Port of New York, because of their adherence to the Roman Church. This is the circular:

GEORGE P. NEWMAN, President.
JOHN N. PARKER,
Vice Pres. and Gen'l Mgr.
DANIEL KENNEDY, Sec'y and Treas.
AMERICAN PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.
Office: Res. of President, 3 Fifth Avenue.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!!

A call to arms is being sounded for every American patriot to save the country from the blighting hand of the Roman Catholic Church. Can you not discern the signs of the times? It is putting its puppets in office all over the country.

John Purroy Mitchell, Romanist and member of the Corrigan Council, Knights of Columbus, has been elected Mayor of New York.

William Sulzer was deposed as Governor because he was a Protestant, so as to allow Glynn, a Roman Catholic and a Knight of Columbus, to become New York's first Roman Catholic Governor. Malone, another Knight of Columbus, has been appointed Collector of the Port of New York, at the behest of the "system."

Mitchell, under the K. of C. oath, is bound to appoint only Papists, when possible, to offices under his administration.

The cry was "Tammany has been defeated!" But has it?

What is Tammany? Simply the fighting arm of the Romish Church, and Mitchell himself has said that he is "one of her loyal sons." So what may we expect?

The American Protective Association has been organized by a large committee of patriotic citizens to revive the splendid work of the old A. P. A. of twenty years ago, and already the various secret societies under the ban of the heads of the Romish propaganda have offered their earnest support.

There is more need for A. P. A. work now than there ever has been. Our Declaration of Principles are (1) We unite to protect the institutions and Government of our country from the operations the Roman Catholic Hierarchy Political Machine, which is working under the guise of the Knights of Columbus, and similar Papal societies. (2) We are resolved to maintain a complete separation of Church and State by securing legislation to tax all church property and prevent any public money being given to Roman Catholic Orphan asylums, parochial schools, or other sectarian institutions.

Third (3) It is our aim to fill every office of the nation, state, and municipality with men of ability, integrity, and pure patriotism. Roman Catholics, members of the Knights of Columbus, swear allegiance to the Pope, above any other earthly authority, and, therefore it is impossible for such men to be American patriots. (4) All patriotic citizens, who believe that the Roman Catholic political machine is the deadliest manace to American liberties and civilization are invited to join this association.

A prominent member of the Knights of Columbus said last night: "The whole movement would be ludicrous if it were not so pitiable. It is sad to reflect that in this enlightened age there are men so blinded by religious bigotry as to publish such an appeal to creed prejudice. I suppose by the secret societies mentioned in the circular the writer refers especially to the Masonic order. Naturally, I have not title to speak for that great fraternal organization, but I desire to say that the Church has placed her ban upon Masonry simply as an act of discipline to her children.

"For my own part I have scores of personal friends who are Masons and in their name I desire to repudiate any suggestion that the order of which they are loyal members would lend support to such a movement as the revival of A. P. A.-ism. Every member of the Masonic or any other fraternal brotherhood knows full well the aims and purposes of the Knights of Columbus. It has absolutely no political ambitions and its members would repudiate any effort on the part of any one to make the society a semi-political force. We include in our membership men of all political faiths, except Socialists. In fact the Church in this country has never issued any political propaganda except to denounce the Socialistic doctrine as a menace alike to Church and State—as essentially un-American and materialistic. Great Americans such as ex-Presidents Taft and Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Joseph H. Choate, William Jennings Bryan and others have praised the fearlessness of the Church in this particular fight and the purely patriotic motives which have actuated her."

TO REORGANIZE DISTRICTS.

The committee appointed by the Cleveland Democracy two weeks ago to consider plans for the reorganization of Tammany Hall, made its report yesterday. The committee was appointed to confer with other organizations and persons interested in establishing an independent Democracy in New York City, and it recommended that the reorganization should be carried out through the district representation; that each Assembly District should be considered a political unit and that the voters of these districts should obtain the right to select their leaders.

committee asserted that strong sentiment was felt throughout the city against the movement set on foot by what the committee called "self-constituted leaders." Under that plan, it was said, the voters had no choice in the selection of leaders and the men who constituted themselves leaders were strangers to the persons they represented. The committee on organization consists of Commissioner of Records John F. Cowan and Deputy County Clerks W. B. Seldon and Nat D. Jacoby.

Mr. Jacoby said yesterday that a meeting of the delegates selected by the district committees would be called in a short time at the headquarters of the Cleveland Democracy, to select a central committee. Mr. Jacoby said that the plan of the Cleveland Democracy was to organize from the bottom upward, rather than from the top downward. The political forum established by the Cleveland Democracy, he said, would enable the Democratic leaders to express their views on the subject of reorganization.

Invitations to the dinner to be given by the organization to Mayor-elect Mitchel at the Hotel Savoy on Dec. 29, have been sent out. County Clerk William F. Schneider, founder of the Cleveland Democracy, said yesterday that more than 500 applications for tickets had been received on the first day the dinner was announced.

HOBOES TO MEET IN CHURCH

Their Organization Accepts Offer Made by Bishop Greer.

The Brotherhood Welfare (Hoboes) Association, which has been meeting at the Manhattan Lyceum in East Fourth Street to discuss plans for furnishing employment to the unemployed, will hold its last meeting there next Sunday. By a unanimous vote after a long debate, the hoboes decided yesterday to accept the offer of the ministers and vestry of the free use of the basement of the Church of All Saints, at Henry and Scammel Streets. This basement is being fitted up as a refuge for the down-and-outs who have no other shelter. The offer was made through Bishop Greer after a special service in the church for the hoboes.

A week ago the hoboes decided to take no action in the matter, because of a speech made by the Rev. Mr. Novak, a well-dressed member of the association, who asserted that the church wanted to run the organization of hoboes.

At yesterday's meeting Novak made a general attack on clergymen, whom he called "non-producers."

Alexander Law, secretary of the association, read a letter from the Rev. Robert C. Masterton of All Saints' Church, renewing the offer, and stating that the hoboes would be cordially welcomed any time they wished to use the basement of the church for their meetings, or as a shelter.

Secretary Law explained that the ministry and vestry of the church had no desire to proselytize, that the question of religion did not enter into the matter, and that the offer was made solely in a spirit of good will. It was then accepted and a vote of thanks to the ministers and vestry was passed.

IS IN FEAR OF MEXICANS.

Charles Maher Asks Yonkers Police to Protect Him from Soldiers.

Trembling all over, his face ashen white, a man who described himself as Charles Maher, 36 years old, of Boston, appealed to Lieut. Henry Blatzheim of the Yonkers police last night for protection from a Captain and some hundreds fo Mexican soldiers who, he said, were quartered on a boat at Pier 52, North River.

Maher said he had just come from Mexico, where all the members of his family were tortured and burned at the stake. He was afraid he had incurred the enmity of Gen. Huerta. He will be examined to-day as to his sanity.

LEADERS FEAR FUND WON'T REACH GOAL

Chairman Perkins Urges Need of General Subscriptions to Make a Success.

ONE CHURCH GIVES $75,000

Workers for Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. Have About a Million Dollars to Raise In Limited Time.

It was announced at the services of the Church of the Incarnation, at Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, yesterday, that the congregation had contributed $75,000 toward the campaign for a $4,000,000 building fund for the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations of this city.

The Executive Committee of the campaign held a meeting last night in the home of George W. Perkins, the Chairman, at 76 Park Avenue. All the committee chairmen and most of the team leaders attended. While the men and women had worked hard all day they had nothing definite to report concerning large subscriptions which must be forthcoming if the fund is to be completed by to-morrow. At the luncheon on Saturday the total subscriptions to date, it was announced, were $2,991,342, which means that more than $1,000,000 must be raised in the next forty-eight hours to make the great project complete. The leaders are gloomy and despair of complete success.

The women workers met yesterday in the home of Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan at 113 East Thirty-eighth Street. The leaders among the women still hope that there will be other great gifts.

Mr. Perkins issued a statement last night in which he urged the people of New York to contribute before it was too late.

"It is important," said Mr. Perkins, "that the people of New York should realize that the success of the fund depends on getting a large number of general subscriptions in the next forty-eight hours. I hope to impress on all New Yorkers who are inclined to contribute that they should not wait to be visited in person by our workers.

"Although we have 1,000 voluntary canvassers who are laboring day and night, it is a physical impossibility for them to see everybody who is likely to aid the movement. I hope such people will mail their subscriptions to our Treasurer, Henry P. Davison, at our headquarters at 25 Broad Street, or else call us on the telephone—2660 Broad—so that we can send somebody for their contributions.

"It is extremely important for New Yorkers to help and help without delay. We must reach the $4,000,000 mark because many of the subscriptions already pledged are conditional upon our getting the entire amount; and this money will be lost to the two associations if we do not succeed.

"We need many gifts of from $1,000 to $10,000, and there are hundreds of New Yorkers able to contribute such sums. Last Saturday we fell a little over $8,000 short of the $3,000,000 mark, and I am sure that there are many people in this city who would have been glad to have made up the deficit if they had known we would fall short. Fortunately, the time was extended on the two $50,000 gifts conditional on our reaching $3,000,000, but it was only extended until Monday noon and conditional upon our obtaining $3,400,000."

Mr. Perkins pointed out the importance of the work done by the two associations, and said it was imperative that the fund should be raised, not only for the good of young men and young women, but for the good of the city itself.

ADVISES WOMEN WORKERS.

Think in Big Figures, Says Mrs. Passemore, to Win Success.

That women, as a rule, do not think in big enough figures was the criticism made last night by Mrs. R. H. Passemore, a business woman in Minneapolis, one of the most successful women financier in this country, in discussing the part women have played in getting subscriptions to the $4,000,000 building fund for the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations of this city. Mrs. Passemore has devoted much of her time and money to aiding the Young Women's Christian Association in different parts of the United States, and she came East expressly to help in the campaign here, which ends to-morrow.

Mrs. Passemore does not come within the boundaries of her own criticism. She does think in big figures—figures so big that they startle many men.

"The trouble with women," she explained last night, "is that they think only in one or two figures. They ought to think in amounts of four or five, because it is when they focus their thoughts on large amounts that they are of real use in campaigns of this kind.

"A woman who is working to raise money for a philanthropic purpose should hold her head high and realize that she is offering the prospective giver a splendid opportunity. She should not ask a man for $25 when he might give $5,000."

Mrs. Passemore believes in intelligent giving, and in her opinion, it is not desirable for rich or poor to give indiscriminately.

"If you are to ask for money," she continued, "you must be enthusiastic. That is the chief point—enthusiasm. The compelling power of great enthusiasm is irresistible. You must believe in giving. You must be persistent. You must not take no for an answer. I do not believe in taking money from any one just because I have asked him to give it. If I do not feel that he wishes to aid the cause I would rather leave his money in his pocket than take it. When I ask a man to help the Y. W. C. A. I want more than his money I want his friendship for the organization. If I permit him to dash off a check unthinkingly or to fish in his pocket and hand out a bank note merely to get rid of me, I lose a chance to make a friend for the association."

Mrs. Passemore said a great deal more could be done in financing Y. W. C. A. work than was being accomplished.

"I believe in intelligent presentation of a cause when I am asking a man to give to it. I try to put my case to him so well that he will wish to make a contribution. The gift that comes grudgingly, though it may be large, is not half as valuable to the association as the freely bestowed contribution of smaller size that is accompanied by good will.

"At first there was the aristocracy of physical force; then the aristocracy of blood; next the aristocracy of wealth, and now we are passing into the aristocracy of service. No one is shut out of this new aristocracy. The test of greatness is the power to serve others, coupled with a willingness to do so. Women and men who give to a cause like ours are magnificently effective for the betterment of our social, civil and industrial conditions."

Mrs. Passemore is a member of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. and is also Chairman of the Finance Committee of the North Centre field. She has carried on campaigns in St. Paul, Omaha, Denver, Birmingham, Trenton and Indianapolis. In Omaha she raised more than half the desired fund herself. A flood stopped the Indianapolis campaign and the money that had been collected was turned over to the refugees. On one night there were 250 temporarily homeless women housed in the Y. W. C. A. Building.

"Real financing should be a spiritual awakening to the entire community," she continued. "If it does not rise to that altitude, it has failed of its highest purpose. Psychology plays an important part in financing these campaigns. The big thing is to create a desire to give. Think of New York City having 500,000 women in industrial work and the Y. W. C. A. in such a financial condition that it can only take care of 6,000 of them.

"I am especially interested in the work being done for girl immigrants by the International Institute of the Y. W. C. A. at 113 East Thirty-fourth Street. Those twenty-three class centres maintained in lower Manhattan are of great value to the immigrant girl. She is under the watchful care of the institute from a few days after her arrival in America to the time when she becomes an independent, high-minded American girl. I think the work Miss Edith L. Jardine, General Secretary of the Institute, is doing among those girls is one of the finest activities of the entire work of the association in New York."

Mrs. Passemore told of one man upon whom she called who threw up his hands as soon as he saw her and said: "I might just as well give you a check now and get through with it."

"I asked him to let me explain the work to him," she went on, "and at the end of fifteen minutes he said he would send me a check that day. I had estimated $5,000 as the probable size of his gift, but when I got it it was for $25,000."

THROWN BY RUNAWAY.

Woman's Skull May Be Fractured by Fall from Buggy.

Mrs. Rosa Jacobson was thrown from the buggy in which she was driving with her husband, David Jacobson of 193 Hart Street, Brooklyn, about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the horse took fright at a passing automobile at Franklin Avenue and Bergen Street, Brooklyn, and ran away. Mrs. Jacobson struck the ground on her head and became unconscious. She was attended by Dr. Gray of the Jewish Hospital, who said she had a possible fracture of the skull and internal injuries. Her condition was said to be serious.

The horse ran north on Franklin Avenue. At Brevoort Place, Policeman Daniel O'Leary of the Grand Avenue Station tried to stop him, and was dragged several feet. The effort of the policeman, however, gave Jacobson time to get the animal under control. O'Leary was cut and bruised, but not seriously injured. He was attended by Dr. Gray.

WILL ASK CONGRESS TO BARE EGG TRUST

McKellar Charges That Carloads of Eggs Are Smashed to Raise Prices.

FOR CURB ON COLD STORAGE

Says Manipulation of Markets by Food Interests Causes Present High Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Alleging that there is an egg trust and that carloads of eggs are smashed to raise prices, Representative Kenneth D. McKellar of Tennessee will ask to bring about an investigation by Congress of the cold storage interests immediately after the regular session of Congress convenes next week. Mr. McKellar said to-day that he has information which convinces him that manipulation of markets by the cold storage interests has caused the present high prices for food products.

A part of the information which Mr. McKellar has obtained is now in possession of the Department of Justice, which has also decided to investigate the cold storage situation through District Attorneys and special agents.

Mr. McKellar said he had been informed that one concern had actually destroyed eggs by the carload after its warehouses had become taxed to their capacity, rather than allow the eggs to go on sale at retail and thereby curtail the plan of "cornering" the egg market.

"I believe the Federal Government can, by a simple law," said Mr. McKellar, "largely do away with this unjust use of cold storage. The scheme is simply to prohibit interstate shipments of all kinds of fresh meats, fish, butter, eggs, and the like, that have been kept in cold storage for a longer period than three months, with fine or imprisonment, or both, for violation. Food gambling cannot be excused on any ground."

Mr. McKellar referred to an interview in which Director Brand of the United States Office of Markets was quoted as blaming the hens of the country for the shortage in the egg supply.

"I think any Egg Trust magnate or pork packer would agree with the view of the Government official," said Mr. McKellar. "I do not believe the consumers will agree with him at all. The census shows that the production of eggs has constantly increased within the last few years. While there was an increase of 21 per cent. in population, there has been an increase of 23 per cent. in the production of eggs. I believe an officer of the Government should be very careful of his facts before even seemingly upholding the food trusts.

"I find also that there are now stored in cold storage warehouses in Pennsylvania 10,000,000 dozens of eggs, and that 80 per cent. of these have been in storage since April 1. This is probably relatively the case in every State in the Union, and the cold storage men seem to be simply manipulating the market by creating an artificial scarcity. What is true of the egg situation is also true of fish, meat and butter.

"I have received many letters and newspaper clippings indorsing my bill, and, of course, I am delighted that so many approve. I understand that women's clubs are taking hold of the matter, and I hope all good citizens will co-operate with me."

Mr. McKellar has a resolution pending before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House providing for heavy fines and prison punishments for cold storage operators who keep perishable foodstuffs more than ninety days. Since the introduction of this measure he has received hundreds of letters containing charges, which, he says, even if partially substantiated, make out a serious case against storage monopoly.

STARTS AN EGG BOYCOTT.

Housewives' League Urges Consumers to Fight Against Exploitation.

A country-wide boycott against egg dealers has been started by Mrs. Julian Heath, national President of the Housewives' League, who sent out three hundred telegrams on Saturday to leaders of branch organizations of the Housewives' League calling their attention to the high prices charged for eggs, and asking consumers not to buy eggs until conditions changed. The consumer, she said, in these telegrams, had been exploited, and an egg boycott should be inaugurated as a protest against the manipulation of the market.

The telegrams were prepared at a meeting of the national Executive Committee of the league held on Saturday, and they were inspired in part by a letter to The Produce News from James E. Wetz, an egg speculator of Chicago. In the letter Mr. Wetz said:

The egg game is certainly going to be a hummer. The price will go higher than you ever saw it. I sold twenty-one carloads of eggs the other day and made only $840 a car, so I concluded to wait until trade thought better of the game and would pay me more money. Several years ago, when Joseph and Pharaoh had all the corn in Egypt and pilgrimages were made to get corn, you will remember that Joe and Pharaoh soaked the people. That is what the trade will get from us when it is necessary for people to have a few eggs for their breakfasts or custards for their dinners. We shall not sell another carload of eggs until we make $1,200 a car. When the deal is over it will be one of the biggest ever pulled off in the United States.

Mrs. Heath said last night that the crowning fallacy in Mr. Wetz's letter was contained in the paragraph about Joseph and Paharaoh. She pointed out that there was no famine now, as there was in Egypt, and that eggs were not necessary for breakfast nor custards for dinner.

"We have been fighting," she said, "to get the price of storage eggs down to 30 cents a dozen. At present cold storage eggs range in price from 32 to 50 cents a dozen, 'fresh' eggs from 35 to 70 cents a dozen, and fancy eggs from 75 to 80 cents a dozen. The egg market is chaotic because the consumer has no way of telling what he is buying. I wrote not long ago to the State Board of Health asking that the law requiring that cold storage products should be marked should be enforced. I learned that there was no such law, as a regulation to that effect had been repealed. A dealer must now tell his customer, whether he is asked or not, whether eggs are cold storage eggs or fresh, but this regulation is hard to enforce. In calling for the boycott we have done all that can be done for the consumer."

HAS A RABBIT PRESERVE.

New Jersey Farmer Lets Hunters Shoot Them at 50 Cents a Head.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTVILLE, N. J., Nov. 23.—John G. Van Riper, a farmer, has put in three years organizing a rabbit preserve, and is just now reaping the benefits of it. Three years ago, when there was a scarcity of rabbits, a number of New York business men who at considerable expense came out here with dogs and guns failed to get many rabbits. They told Van Riper that any man who acquired sufficient land and made a rabbit preserve could make money by charging each hunter so much for every rabbit brought down.

Van Riper bought a few Belgian hares and tamed them as much as he could. At considerable expense he built a mesh wire fence about fifteen acres of meadow and brush land. Into this he turned the rabbits, and upon every post he pasted a "No Hunting" sign. He daily dumped a load of produce into the inclosure to feed the rabbits, which multiplied until they now number several hundred.

With the advent of the hunting season Van Riper advertised that he could guarantee any hunter all the rabbits he cared to shoot for the nominal charge of half a dollar a head. A number of wealthy New Yorkers jumped at the chance, and hardly a day goes by, but half a dozen hunters are out on Van Riper's meadow land. So far 212 rabbits have been shot on the place, bringing the farmer in $106.

Mrs. Pankhurst Here To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst spoke at the Columbia Theatre this afternoon on the suffrage cause. She was introduced by Miss Alice Paul of Philadelphia, who had been imprisoned in England for militancy. Mrs. Pankhurst said that President Wilson in admitting her to the United States admitted that the movement was a revolution and not a movement marked by malice. The suffragette leader left for New York on a midnight train, accompanied by Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr, who will go with her to England, whence she said she would sail on Wednesday.

Plain Color Carpets
Imported From England

The increasing use of Plain Color Carpets lends especial interest to our superb assortment, including the Baroda, Saxine, Angora, Saxonia, and Mosaic weaves, sold exclusively by us in the United States.

A distinct advantage is the generous widths in which these carpets are obtainable—up to 15 feet inclusive. This feature minimizes the number of seams, often obviating them entirely.

Decorative effects now very much in vogue are obtained by using these English weaves, which are in demand because of the richness of their colorings, and the exceptionally fine quality of their texture.

All the desirable colorings, in a large variety of shades, are shown.

How to buy cards for records

1. First of all, be sure that the form of card is right. We can help you.

2. Remember that it is as extravagant to use cheap cards for permanent records as it is to use expensive cards for temporary records.

3. Do not judge the quality of a card by merely looking at it. White clay in cards covers a multitude of sins.

4. Insist that cards for record purposes be uniform in size, have a perfect writing surface, and yet will withstand erasure.

No other manufacturer makes a card that is as good as Library Bureau's best.

On the other hand, we have cards at surprisingly low prices.

Living Over Again

his youthful enthusiasms, William Dean Howells visited Spain, and the result is a new book called "Familiar Spanish Travels." Howells wanders about the Spain of to-day, but back of it all is the history of its romantic past. If you ever heard that Howells was the "dean of American literature" do not let that make you think his new book is for the elect. It's a live, human book for you. And there's splendid humor in it, more than in the books which are called popular.

THE HOUSE OF HAPPINESS

¶ A live cricket is the red-headed Cricket, full of freckles and fun. You will find him in a new book called "The House of Happiness." The book has a man in it and a girl, too, and some Southerners who'll soon be friends of yours. Kate Langley Bosher tells us about them, and she knows.

THE IRON TRAIL.

¶ Next time you build a bridge it will save time if you get Murray O'Neil, a builder and something more—in Rex Beach's new novel, "The Iron Trail." This is O'Neil's story. He's no handsome, dashing hero, but a tall, heavy man of forty, with slightly graying temples and the facial marks of strenuous endeavor. But he can love and fight and build. The story certainly is Alaska.

SYLVIA WITH A MOB DEFIES THE POLICE

Guarded by 2,000 Armed with Knouts and Sticks, Miss Pankhurst Addresses Meeting.

"ARMY" TO RAID COMMONS

She Threatens Armed Demonstrations There—Suffragette Fires at Bristol and Blackburn.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Sylvia Pankhurst dramatically defied the police in the East End of London this afternoon. After addressing a meeting in a Bow Road theatre she was escorted with much cheering and singing by a crowd of 2,000 to a house situated a mile away, where she lives.

In her speech she said that drilling of the "people's army" would begin this week. She promised a "no rent" campaign and hinted at armed demonsrtations in Parliament Square and at the House of Commons. Many men in the crowd were armed with knouts and short sticks.

The police made no attempt to stop the procession. When her house was reached, Miss Pankhurst appeared at a window, and, pointing to half a dozen policemen at the corner of the street, exclaimed: "There they are—discomfitted officers of the Criminal Investigation Department."

LONDON, Nov. 23.—At the Pankhurst meeting in the Bow Road this afternoon the strictest precautions had been taken to exclude detectives from the hall, and throughout the proceedings Miss Pankhurst looked nervously alert, clutching at her chair at the slightest noise.

Miss Zelie Emerson of Jackson, Mich., also made an address.

Incendiary outrages by the suffragettes occurred yesterday, the boathouse at Eastville Park, Bristol, and a portion of the grand stand in the sports ground at Blackburn being burned.

Shoemakers Reject New Schedule.

LYNN., Mass., Nov. 23.—Unions of shoe and leather workers in this city have declined to agree to a new graded price list for piece work proposed by the shoe manufacturers, who wished to place certain grades of welt shoes on the market at the figures quoted by Western and Southern manufacturers, said to be paying lower wages. The decision of the unions was reached after conferences extending over two months. The manufacturers had offered to guarantee stendy work the year round if the operatives would agree to the new list.

M. Guenadieff said Bulgaria would accept M. Poincare's decision unreservedly.

Bulgaria complains that Greece still holds and refuses to release Bulgarian prisoners of war, contrary to international law.

OMITS QUEENSTOWN CALL.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sunday, Nov. 23.—Again a Cunard liner has failed to call at Queenstown for mails. A mail tender with 705 sacks of mail went out today to intercept the Lusitania, and found that the vessel had proceeded on her voyage. The mails will be taken on the White Star liner Thursday, which means a delay of a week in delivery in New York.

Much dissatisfaction is expressed at Queenstown over the incident, as it is held that although the weather conditions were bad outside of the harbor, the conditions in the inner harbor were ideal for transferring mails.

According to a dispatch received in this city last night, the mail left behind by the Lusitania at Queenstown included letters for Japan, China, Korea, and the Philippines. These were to have been forwarded by the Empress of Russia of the Canadian Pacific Company from Vancouver on Dec. 3 and the Oceanic Mail Steamship Sierra from San Francisco for Australia and New Zealand on Dec. 2, so as to get to their destinations by Christmas.

Capt. W. I. D. Irvine of the Cunard liner Laconia, which arrived yesterday from Boston to start on Dec. 2 on her Winter trips to the Mediterranean, said that if the mail which the Mauretania was unable to call for at Queenstown because of bad weather had been put on his ship instead of being held back for the Majestic it would have been delivered in New York on last Wednesday evening. The Majestic did not arrive until Friday morning and her mail was delivered late in the afternoon.

"We sailed from Queenstown on Wednesday, Nov. 12, with 500 bags of mails out of the 3,000 sacks left by the Mauretania on the previous Sunday," said Capt. Irvine, "and landed it in Boston at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning. This mail was chiefly for Boston and the New England cities. If the postmaster at Queenstown had given the Laconia the rest of the Mauretania's mail it would have been received in New York by 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon."

This would have saved much inconvenience to New York bankers and merchants as they would have had time to open their English correspondence and answer it by ships sailing on Saturday.

In addition to the mails for the United States and Canada there were about 400 sacks of mail for China and Japan and the Philippines left behind by the Mauretania which would have caught the fast Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan from Vancouver on Nov. 19 if they had been sent by the Laconia.

A report was brought here on Friday by the Majestic, which carried mail left at Queenstown by the Mauretania that the British Postmaster General had given notice to the railway and steamship companies which carry the mails to Queenstown that in the future the American mail on Saturdays would be put on board the ships at Liverpool. It was said that a notice of sixty or ninety days was required to make the change. By that time the stormy weather will have passed.

LARKIN RAILS AT LOW WAGES

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—"Jim" Larkin, the labor agitator, was enthusiastically received at Cardiff, where he addressed a large meeting this afternoon. He denounced the low wages paid to many shop assistants, although they had to dress, he said, like Dukes—whatever that might mean—and the women like Duchesses—though all Duchesses he had seen had been in undress.

Speaking of Dublin as the richest town of the United Kingdom, he said that it had at the head of the Castle clique the Earl of Aberdeen (the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland) and his good lady, who got $25,000 a year and who had no children to keep. Their only function, so far as he could gather, was calling meetings and having exhibitions. At these exhibitions, he said, they had lecturers who received $25 or $50 to show how to feed a family of seven on $2.25 a week.

BRITISH ARMY TO ADVERTISE

Northcliffe's Hint for Getting Recruits to be Acted Upon.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Lord Northcliffe in a recent speech conveyed a hint to the Government that its difficulty in getting army recruits might be overcome by an alert advertising campaign in the press.

It is now announced that the Government is about to start a publicity campaign on these lines, and advertisements will soon appear in the newspapers inviting men to join the army and setting forth the army's attractions.

NEW TALES OF CRUELTY

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 24.—The newspapers this morning give prominence to the Aborigines' Protection Society's appeal for an inquiry into the new rubber horrors on the Amazon.

The Daily News says these grave charges call for the immediate attention of the Government. A Daily News correspondent who recently made a voyage along the Amazon to the Bolivian frontier says that more than once he was asked on the Amazon, "Who made all this fuss about Putumayo? It was not much worse there than you would find up any of the more inaccessible rivers."

The correspondent expresses the belief that the Brazilian Government at least is anxious that its Indian subjects should be juatly treated by the traders, and he continues:

"I know it sent soldiers to apprehend an American subject—a man I met there—for shooting two half-breeds, and hanged him, but it allows free slavery, known as peonage, and it is that sort of labor which obtains nearly all the rubber exported from the American tropics."

The correspondent, in describing life in the dismal South American forests, especially the district of Acre, says it is all a dense jungle, and the fevers are of such virulence that official Brazilians themselves shrink from the mere idea of going there. Labor, he sasy, is very scarce, and the Indians won't work unless they are forced to do so.

"The life of a rubber-getter is as gloomy, famished, and cruel an existence as there is on the earth," he says. "The slave is entirely subject to the will of his master. He is bound to his master by the twilight and silence of the limitless junge, and escape is utterly impossible. Bany Brazilian rubber-getters are natives of Ceara, Southern Brazil, who have been persuaded to emigrate. They are imported into the upper Amazon country and planted in a forest clearing as remote from their kind as though they were on a desert island, and there they stay until they die.

"They are put into debt for their clothes, food and all they require. The prices charged are fantastic and they must pay off the debt with the rubber they get which they never do. In some of the more remote districts these laborers are whipped for the most trivial offenses.

An English traveler on the Beni told me he saw a woman cruelly beaten for upsetting a lamp. Other travelers in the same country told me of 500 lashes as a common punishment. All these men referred to the slavery quite casually, and spoke of the consequences of it as daily occurrences there. They said the padrone of an estate could give a whipping to a slave for anything he liked. Each of these men affirmed that they had seen men and women bought for gold.

WITNESSES TAMPERED WITH

Wiretapping Collusion Cases to Go to Grand Jury Next Week.

At least a dozen witnesses in the alleged cases of collusion between the police and the wiretappers have been corralled by District Attorney Whitman and Assistant District Attorney Groehl. It was said yesterday that each of the witnesses had been approached and tampered with. So closely are some of the witnesses allied with the prosecution, however, that information of this nature is bound to reach the District Attorney almost immediately.

The collusion cases, it was said yesterday, would not go to the Grand Jury till next week. It is expected that they will be presented after the Thanksgiving recess, and that at least one indictment will be asked for.

DOUBT VERA SCOTT'S STORY

Clevelanders Say She Married There the Day After Alleged Shootng.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—That Mrs. Vera Scott, now under arrest in Los Angeles, did not shoot and kill Marshall Field, Jr., is the belief of Clevelanders who remember her and the man she married, divorced, and eventually killed on a train. According to the dispatches from Los Angeles, she says she shot Field on Nov. 23, 1905. As a matter of fact, Field was shot on Nov. 22, 1905, in Chicago. On Nov. 23, 1905, a marriage license was taken out in Cleveland for "Miss Clark," as she was then known, and Reese H. Prosser. The marriage ceremony was performed the following day.

Soon after that the couple went to Lisbon, Ohio, to reside. The marriage followed a friendship of about five weeks. As Miss Clark, the woman had been known for some time in this city in hotel circles. She maintained considerable mystery about her past and seemed always amply supplied with money.

Prosser, convinced that his wife's past had been spectacular, removed with her to the Pacific Coast. There, in 1910, Mrs. Prosser obtained a divorce on charges of cruelty. One allegation she made was that Prosser threw out of a bedroom window a phonograph on which she had insisted upon playing over and over the one record to which her husband objected.

Shortly after the divorce Prosser was shot and killed on a train at Libby, Mont., by Mrs. Prosser. She was tried for murder, but acquitted. Prosser's mother soon died of grief.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 23.—Stanley Field, nephew of the late Marshall Field, and cousin of Marshall Field, Jr., whom Mrs. Vera Scott, now in jail in Los Angeles, says she shot and killed in 1905, was at the Belvedere Hotel today on his return from a hunting trip. He said he did not believe the woman's story. Mr. Field had discussed the affair with members of his party. One of these said to-night:

"Marshall Field, Jr., cared a great deal for books and spent most of his time reading. He did not mix with the gay set. Stanley Field told me that when Marshall Field, Jr., received the gunshot wound that caused his death, he was alone in his room getting his guns ready for a hunting trip. It is thought that one of them was loaded, and that it was fired by accident, the charge entering his body. Mr. Field was never known to associate with women of the class to which the Los Angeles woman belongs. She is evidently trying to gain notoriety."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Nothing has developed here to corroborate Vera Scott's story that she shot Marshall Field, Jr. There never has been any proof that he was not shot as announced—by the discharge of one of his guns at his residence. Both the police and the attending surgeons deny that he met his death elsewhere or in any other way. Mr. Field's widow is now Mrs. Maldwin Drummond and is living in London.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23.—While Mrs. Vera Scott, who says she killed Marshall Field, Jr., in Chicago, was bombarded with questions all day to such an extent that she became hysterical toward night, she adhered to her story. She declared that the shooting was accidental and occurred in a scuffle over the revolver. The woman, Alice, she says, also was involved in the struggle.

The police have taken a stenographic report of the so-called confession and have notified the Chicago authorities, but no reply has been received as yet.

Mrs. Scott told several stories about the date of her marriage to Prosser, declaring first that she married him in 1904 and then that she married him in 1905, directly after the shooting, and left him the following day.

SLAYS WIFE AND HIMSELF.

Glove Cutter Shoots After Seeking Reconciliation with Her.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Frank Mills of Gloversville, aged 25 years, shot and killed his wife, Margia Fancher Mills, 20, here this afternoon, then turned the weapon on himself and died a few hours afterward.

The tragedy occurred at the home of Mrs. Mills's cousin. The couple had been married less than a year. Because of unpleasantness Mrs. Mills left her husband some weeks ago and was on a visit to her cousin here. Her husband came yesterday and pleaded with her to return home with him. The argument was resumed this afternoon in the absence of her cousin and resulted in the double shooting. A boy entered the room looking for a scarf pin and found the young woman on the floor with a bullet wound in the back of her head. The husband was lying with two bullets in his head and still grasped a .38 calibre revolver.

Mills was honorably discharged from Troop C, Fourth Cavalry, and was a glove cutter. His wife was a handsome young woman and a gifted pianist.

PRAISES JOSEPH SCHOOL.

Judge Rosalsky Says It Will Be of Value to the East Side.

Judge Rosalsky was the chief speaker last night at the exercises held at the Rabbi Jacob Joseph School at 165 Henry Street to celebrate the opening of its new building. Judge Rosalsky said that the new school would be of great value to the east side, as it would instruct its pupils in Jewish institutions and in the institutions of this country. Other speakers were Joseph S. Marcus, who last night gave $1,000 to the school; Prof. Soloman Schecter of the Jewish Theological Seminary, Rabbi Elias Solomon, and Rabbi S. E. Jaffe.

More than 700 persons attended the ceremonies last night. It was announced that $3,000 had been subscribed to the school in the day, and this, with what had been given before, made a fund of $15,000.

'BEDFORD ST.' ENDS LONG CHURCH LIFE

Veteran Methodists Take Part in Old-Time Experience Meeting.

DOORS SHUT FOR GOOD

Organization Which for 108 Years Worked in Greenwich Village Will Lose Its Identity.

Nicholas Onderdonk, a white-bearded patriarch who joined the church sixty-six years ago and is its oldest member, was the leader of an old-fashioned experience meeting held yesterday afternoon in the historic Bedford Street Methodist Episcopal Church, one of the landmarks of old Greenwich Village at Morton and Bedford Streets. It was the last day in the life of the church, for the building is to be torn down in the march of improvements. The experience meeting began 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon after luncheon had been served to 300 old friends of the organization who came from a distance.

On the wall above the pulpit the dates "1805-1913" were formed of white flowers with a border of green between two draped American flags. On the platform, as guests of honor, sat fifteen men and women who have been associated with the church for fifty years or more. They were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Benedict, Mrs. Sarah E. Childs, Robert W. Courtney, Mrs. Caroline Cropsey, Miss Isabella Greenlaw, Daniel Kile, Miss Phoebe Lounsberry, Charles H. Mead, Mrs. Fanny A. Peacock, William Pollard, Mrs. Mary K. Robinson, Mrs. Mary E. Rogers, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sketchley.

Mr. Onderdonk, who has seen thirty-one pastors come and go during his association with the church, told of the old times when the edifice was so crowded—even to the stairways—that the minister had to climb a ladder to a rear window to get to his pulpit.

After a few personal reminiscences he epitomized the history through 108 years of the church organization. He told how, in 1805, the few scattering houses on that part of Manhattan Island, formed what was then known as Greenwich Village, bounded by the Hudson River, Greenwich Lane (now Greenwich Ave.) Bank Street, and a brook which flowed where Canmine Street is now. At that time, said Mr. Onderdonk, there was but one place of worship, a Dutch Reformed Church, on the corner of Bleecker and West Tenth Streets.

In the year 1805 the Methodists of Greenwich Village began holding meetings at the home of Samuel Walgrove on the north side of Morton Street about 150 feet west of Bleecker Street. The congregation soon became too large for his house so Mr. Walgrove opened his carpenter shop for its use. There they worshipped until the first church edifice was constructed in 1810 on its present site. The church was a frame building with shingled sides. It faced Bedford Street and thus got its name and it was there that the fathers of American Methodism preached as they made the circuit of the towns.

In 1830 the old church was enlarged and in 1840, under the pastorate of Rev. Phineas Rice, the present edifice fronting on Morton Street was erected. The cornerstone was laid by the celebrated Robert Newton of England, and the dedication sermon was preached by Bishop Hedding.

William Pollard, President of the Bedford Street Association, told about seeing the assistant superintendent of the Sixth Avenue Railway Company, on one occasion, sitting in the gallery and looking down on the members who told in enthusiastic words of their conversion. "He thought us a lot of lunatics," said Mr. Pollard, amid laughter, "and I told him it was very contagious. And when he got religion himself and became converted he came to believe that we were sane after all."

The last sermon in the old church was preached last night by Rev. Allan MacRossie, superintendent of the New York District of the New York Conference. Supper was served by the women of the church to former members who, from a distance, came to attend the final service.

The Trustees have approved a plan to consolidate the church society with the Metropolitan Temple at Seventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street. The Rev. George W. Downes, pastor of the Bedford Street Church will be associated in the pastorate of the Metropolitan Temple with the Rev. Arthur Bruce Moss.

ZOO LLAMA FORGETS WHO AND WHAT HE IS Peon Had a Dreadful Shock, Snyder Thinks, Then Lost His Identity.

IMITATES OTHER ANIMALS

The conduct of Peon, the pride of the llama enclosure in the Zoological Park in the Bronx, has become so strange in the last week that Charley Snyder, keeper and student of wild animals, has come to the conclusion that the animal is suffering from amnesia. Peon does not even remember his own name. Snyder said yesterday, when he was recounting the budget of weekly happenings among his wild charges, that he was convinced it was a well-defined case of lost identity. Snyder, it may be noted, is a great friend of the afflicted llama and his strange conduct has caused him much worry.

It was about ten days ago that Frank, one of the oldest of the keepers, discovered that Peon was evidently "off his head," to quote his first unofficial report upon the subject. Peon, he noticed, had lost a certain sprightliness of disposition that had made him a favorite. Then he would stand for hours gazing out upon the world with a vacant stare. Another symptom he noted was that Peon would not respond to his name and again that he had given up his friendship for the alpaca and no longer paid any attention to his former playmate. So Frank reported the matter to Snyder and the latter placed Peon under observation.

The llama has been a zoo attraction for a number of years. He was at first an exceedingly vicious animal, with a fondness for trying to bite pieces out of unsuspecting visitors. Upon his arrival he refused food and the authorities had a time in pulling him through. It was really Snyder who accomplished it. It was he who persuaded Peon to eat and take an interest in his new surroundings. In time he brought the llama into a charming state of docility and from a vicious zoological exhibit the animal became a real attraction.

"I and Peon were just like real friends," said Snyder with much feeling. "I named him and we got to be real proud of each other."

So it was that when the llama keeper told Snyder that Peon had "gone wrong" the interest in the case was instantaneous. Snyder went over to the llama house and verified the truth of Frank's observations. To his surprise Peon did not even recognize him. He greeted his friend with a vacant stare.

"It was most touching," said Snyder "the old boy would stand and look clear through me. There was not the slightest sign of recognition though I called him by name very often. But I was convinced that Peon had in no sense lost his mind. He had simply lost his identity.

"I came to this belief the third day after I had the llama under observation. For I discovered that he was entering upon another phase of his trouble—he was groping about for another identity. This was first manifested to me in the strangest way. Coming softly to the fence of the inclosure one day I discovered the llama crouched down upon the ground and in the most catlike way working his body forward. I watched him for a minute. Peon was actually trying to catch a bird. What do you think of that? How do I account for it? I don't. I am simply the narrator of facts. In my own mind I put it down to the fact that Peon was groping about for an identity. But then I am not an alienist."

Now, according to the ever truthful Snyder, Peon entered into another stage of his search for an identity. In his zeal to re-establish himself Peon disregarded his own kind and began to imitate the animals about him. Even Snyder admits that in some cases the imitations were pretty poor, his most successful effort being to reproduce the rasping cry of the peacock.

Some distance from the llama inclosure, but, now that the trees are bare, within sight of the place where Peon is kept, is a prairie wolf den. In it are three restless beasts that, when not hid from view in an artificial rock cave, spend their time pacing restlessly up and down. Snyder discovered that Peon, from watching the animals, had come to imitate them. Back and forth he would pace in front of the inclosure. Snyder says he would keep his eyes fixed always on the other animals, keeping pace with them and turning when they turned.

It was laughable, Snyder said, to see Peon watching one of the park peacocks that had established a promenade near the llama house. It was from the peacock that the animal got the cry it sometimes tries to imitate.

"It's a sort of hopeless task," said Snyder to Frank.

But it was not so hopeless as Snyder thought, for on Saturday morning Frank burst into the reptile house all excitement.

"Hey, Snyder," he called, "Peon has just answered to his name."

"What!" exclaimed Snyder, and in a minute both were racing down the path to the inclosure. Sure enough, there was Peon standing near the bars. "Peon, Peon," called Snyder. The animal paid not the slightest attention.

"Peon," again shouted the keeper almost in the animal's ear. Peon looked rather languidly around. "Look, Frank!" shouted Snyder, "it's like he was recognizing an old freind."

But Peon still walks like a wolf and sings like a peacock, and Snyder and Frank are now facing the task of teaching him that he is really a llama.

"He's got to learn all over again," said Snyder.

Snyder is convinced that Peon suffered some shock that brought about amnesia, and the subject is one that is no longer discussed between him and Frank. In searching about for a cause Snyder came to the conclusion that the shock was really afforded by Frank appearing suddenly before Peon with his whiskers shaved off. This theory almost caused a fight.

"There, I don't blame Peon," said Snyder yesterday rather sadly. "Frank was such a good looking man with his face hid behind a curtain. Now look at him." But Frank, choking with suppressed indignation, had fled down the path.

UNION FOR CHORUS FOLK.

Temporary Organization Formed—Broadwayites Quit the Meeting.

Seventeen chorus girls, five of them from Broadway, and thirty-seven chorus men answered the call for a meeting to form a union yesterday afternoon and assembled at the Women's Trade Union League headquarters at 43 East Twenty-second Street. Before the meeting was over the five Broadwayites had withdrawn, but despite this setback a temporary organization was formed and the first steps taken for obtaining a charter from the American Federation of Labor.

Yesterday's meeting was called by J. F. Duffy, general organizer of the A. F. L., at the request of a number of chorus girls and men, who complained of the poor treatment they were getting from theatrical managers. Why so few assembled to take part in starting the union was explained in several ways by those present. One young woman, who insisted that she couldn't lose her job because she owed her managers $180, said that various stage managers had warned the chorus girls that if they attended the meeting they would be dropped from their companies. Another girl, who arrived late in a taxi and left early, said that the day was too fine to spend indoors, and that most of the girls were out automobiling.

The enthusiastic ones, however, set to work to get things going, and after newspaper men had been excluded from the rooms Miss Melinda Scott of the Women's Trade Union League called the meeting to order and spoke of the advantages of forming a union. She was followed by Mr. Duffy, who outlined the strength of the musicians and stage hands because of their organizations, and said that the American Federation of Labor would do everything in its power, free of charge, to aid the chorus people in getting together.

While the meeting was going on the chorus girls in H. H. Frazee's production of "The Madcap Duchess" held a meeting on the stage of the Globe Theatre and agreed to refuse to join either he association or any other contemplated union of players.

Harry Mountford, a former head of the White Rats, a strong vaudeville organization, is launching a new association made up chiefly of vaudeville and burlesque folk, which will aim to bring about reforms in the present system of booking acts. The system now is a costly one for the actor.

GEN. STUART-WORTLEY HERE

Noted Soldier Will Go to England in an Oil-Burning Cruiser.

Major Gen. Edward Montagu Stuart-Wortley, C. M. G., D. S. O., arrived yesterday from the West Indies on the Atlas steamship Prinz Eitel Friedrich, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Louise, and his son, Rothsay. He said that he had been traveling for pleasure, as he had given up his command of the infantry brigade at Shorncliffe in Kent, England. In Halifax he will join the British cruiser New Zealand and travel to Portsmouth in her by permission of the Admiralty.

The General said that the New Zealand burned oil and was completing a voyage around the world to test the new fuel for the navy. She took on a store of Jamaica oil at Brighton, and the water was so shallow that the fuel had to be taken out to the ship in small tanks.

Gen. Stuart-Wortley is one of the most distinguished soldiers in the British Army. He served in the Afghan war under Lord Roberts, the first Boer war in 1881, the Nile expeditions of 1884, 1885, and 1896, and the last Boer war. In addition, he has participated in frontier fights in India. He has many medals and decorations, including the Distinguished Service Order, which he received from Queen Victoria.

To Build Havana-Key West Ferryboat.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—A local shipbuilding firm announced to-day the receipt of a contract to build what it is said will be the largest ferryboat ever constructed in this country. The specifications call for a speed of 16 knots an hour. The boat will be 350 feet long and 70 feet beam, will cost $500,000, and will be used to ferry trains between Key West and Havana.

COURT TO INTERPRET EINSTEIN'S WILL

Counsel for Lady Waldstein and Mrs. Spingarn Differ as to Its Terms.

ESTATE WORTH $2,000,000

The will of David Lewis Einstein, a manufacturer, who died in May, 1909, at the home of his daughter, then Mrs. Theodore Seligman, now Lady Waldstein, at 47 South Street, London, by agreement of the trustees of the estate has been submitted for construction to the Supreme Court in this city. Arguments in the action will be heard to-day. There has been a difference of opinion as to the terms of the will between the counsel representing the two daughters of the late Mr. Einstein. Morgan J. O'Brien represents Lady Waldstein and ex-Justice Leventritt Mrs. Joel Elias Spingarn, wife of Prof. Spingarn, formerly of Columbia University. Lewis Einstein, formerly First Secretary of the American Embassy at Constantinople, a son of the testator, was a beneficiary under his father's will, but the provisions affecting him are not involved in the court proceedings.

Mr. Einstein, accompanied by his wife, went to London on May 2, 1909, to attend the wedding of his daughter and Sir Charles Waldstein, a professor in Cambridge University. Mr. Einstein died suddenly, and the wedding was postponed. Mr. Einstein was President of the Raritan Woolen Mills in Raritan, N. J., and had an office at 14 White Street. He was also head of the Somerset Manufacturing Company. His will was executed on Jan. 14, 1907, and was filed in the Surrogates' office in this city in May, 1909. To his wife, Mrs. Caroline Einstein, who has since died, Mr. Einstein left all his household goods, furniture, supplies, automobiles, and other vehicles. Under the second clause of the will Mrs. Einstein received $25,000 outright, with this suggestion as to the disposition of it:

I suggest that a good use to be made of it would be to distribute it among any charitable institutions she may think fit, but the gift to her is absolute and free from any trust or restriction in regard to its use.

Mr. Einstein left to his widow for her lifetime the home at 39 West Fifty-seventh Street, which, after her death, was to pass to the residuary estate. The executors were empowered to sell the house after this event, but Mr. Einstein authorized either of his two daughters or their husbands to buy it.

To Lady Waldstein he bequeathed the income from a trust fund of $126,000. On her death the principal was to go to her issue. A like sum on similar conditions was left to his second daughter, Mrs. Spingarn. To his son Lewis he left $125,000 on the same conditions as those governing the bequests to the two daughters.

The income from the residuary estate, which was said to have been very large, went to the widow for her life. After her death the residuary estate was to be divided into three equal shares, and these were to go to the children. Mr. Einstein provided that any advances he had made to his children were to be charged against the amounts they received under his will, but without interest.

Regarding his stock in the Somerset Manufacturing Company and the Raritan Woolen Mills Company, Mr. Einstein authorized his executors to hold it in their discretion, but he directed that if they sold the Somerset stock it should be offered to the other stockholders in the concern in accordance with an agreement he entered into with them.

Mr. Einstein named as his executors Lady Waldstein, Kalman Haas and Solomon A. Fatman. By a codicil to his will he named Prof. Joel E. Spingarn as executor and trustee to his will in lieu of Theodore Seligman, who died after the will was executed. The value of the estate was not made known, but it was said to be more than $2,000,000.

SPONGERS WIN STRIKE.

65,000 Garment Makers Made Idle by It Will Resume Work To-day.

Michael Brayer, President of the Textile Shrinkers Employers' Association, the strike of whose 330 employes had made idle 65,000 garment workers, announced last evening that all the shops would be opened to-day, all the demands of the Cloth Spongers and Examiners' Union having been conceded. A memorandum of agreement was signed by representatives of both sides on Saturday, but before Dec. 1 an agreement for five years will be signed embodying the new conditions.

"After the meeting of our association in the Hotel St. Denis on Saturday," he continued, "we asked the union to reconsider the open or closed shop conditions or agree to arbitration of the closed shop demand, but the union, after a meeting last night, notified us that the closed shop demand must stand. We are helpless in the matter, as the garment manufacturers have been bringing pressure to bear on us to end the strike and, to prevent a condition of chaos in the garment industry, the closed shop will rule."

DRAIN CANAL, FIND BODY.

Boy Disappeared Last Monday from Home in Passaic.

PASSAIC, Nov. 23.—The water was drained from the Dundee Canal in this city this afternoon by the police in the hope of finding the body of seven-year-old John Wasnok, who was believed to have been drowned in the canal on Monday last. When practically all the water had been removed the body was found lying at the bottom of the canal. The police used grappling irons in the canal on Friday in the hope of finding the body, and when they failed they decided to run out the water to-day.

HEAR BISHOP VINCENT.

Chautauqua Founder, Guest of Edisons, Preaches in Orange Church.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 23.—Bishop Thomas Heyl Vincent, of Chicago, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, at their home, Glenmont, in Llewellyn Park. He arrived here last night and will remain until Thursday. This morning he preached in the Orange Methodist Church, which is attended by the Edison family.

On Tuesday night Bishop Vincent will speak at the prayer meeting in Miller Chapel, which was built by Mrs. Edison in memory of her parents. He will be the guest at a dinner of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Stephen Joseph Herben, and will also attend the golden wedding anniversary reception to be tendered the Rev. and Mrs. William D. Bridge of Orange.

It was Bishop Vincent, who in 1874 with the late Lewis Miller, father of Mrs. Edison, founded the Chautauqua movement. He is 81 years old and has been preaching since he was 18 years old.

J. L. CROUSE HURT IN AUTO.

Banker's Car Crashes Into a Team of Horses in Buffalo.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 23.—J. Lansing Crouse, a member of the banking firm of W. C. Langley & Co., of New York and Syracuse, was injured early this morning when an automobile in which he was riding struck a team of horses.

The machine, driven by Peter J. Streitcher, was taking Mr. Crouse from the Central railroad station to his hotel when, at South Division and Elliott Streets, a garbage wagon suddenly drove in front of the car. The driver tried to avert a collision, but ran into the horses, and the automobile then crashed into a telegraph pole.

Mr. Crouse was stunned and cut. The driver was also bruised. Mr. Cruise was taken to his hotel, but had recovered sufficiently this afternoon to return home.

Atmosphere, said an old writer, is one of the finest necessities for home comfort. And where is this so important as at that Thanksgiving Dinner of yours?

Among a score of things, including platters, dishes and table ware of all sorts, that are delights to the eye of the epicure, is this necessary addition to the equipment of the serving or dining table,—the Plate Warmer. It is made in English Electroplate, from eight to twenty-six inches in length. One end contains an opening over which you can boil the tea, coffee or what not. The alcohol burner is movable and can be placed at any point along the tracks. Truly a thing of beauty, it is doubly a delight in its practical usefulness. Made also in copper, 24 and 36 inches, and for either alcohol or electricity.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY CONCEALS HER EARS

Photos in The Times Christmas Number Show She Dresses Her Hair to Hide Them.

HER EXPRESSION A PUZZLE

Masters of the art of camera portraiture who have seen proofs of the special rotogravure section of the Christmas number of THE NEW YORK TIMES are enthusiastic in their praise of the splendid results obtained by the use of this newest method of photographic reproduction. The Christmas number will be issued on Sunday, Dec. 7, and the special rotogravure section of eight pages is devoted to twenty-nine of the pictures of typical American girls selected by a jury of seven distinguished artists from the vast number of photographs sent in to THE TIMES in response to its invitation.

These seven artists—C. Allan Gilbert, Hamilton King, James Montgomery Flagg, Clarence F. Underwood, Penrhyn Stanlaws, Philip Boileau and W. L. Jacobs as was recently announced, selected in all ninety pictures which they regarded as typical American girls. Twenty-nine are reproduced in the special rotogravure section of the Christmas number, and the remaining sixty-one will be pictured in another special rotogravure section to be issued the following Sunday.

This Girl of To-day supplement is one of three pictorial sections which will be parts of the Christmas number, for besides the reular pictorial supplement which closely follows the news of the day, there will be another devoted to a reproduction, in the three original colors, of John S. Sargent's famous frieze "The Prophets," one of the most attractive features of the Boston Public Library. As reproduced the complete frieze will be in three parts, the whole 55 inches long and 10 inches wide, and, there being no printing upon the back, it will be suitable for framing.

An inspection of the twenty-nine pictures of types of American girls contained in the Christmas number shows a collection of fine representatives of young womanhood. The picture of the young woman whom the seven artists selected as that which most nearly embodied their ideas as to what The Girl of To-day is like, covers the entire cover page. The other twenty-eight are grouped four to a page.

The photographs sent in embrace an almost infinite variety, from the veriest amateur snapshot to the expensive portrait-size pictures of the best known artistic photographers. In many cases photographs had to be enlarged, while not a few had to be reduced in size to be reproduced. Naturally color photographs have to appear in the same tint as all the other pictures, but by the rotogravure process these seem to lose none of their original attractiveness. The variation in costumes is also striking. One might conclude, however, that the average American girl, when she has her picture taken, likes to appear in a low-necked evening dress and without a hat, for seventeen are thus attired. Four wear afternoon or evening dresses with hats, and three are in afternoon dresses without hats. Two wear street dress with hats, and one is in a street dress without a hat. One is in outing costume, and one wear a riding habit.

Some will be interested in how the typical American girl wears her hair, judging from the twenty-nine photographs. Of the whole number, only one shows her ears. Five, by showing the lower parts, indicate that they really possess ears, but there is no sign of even a lobe in the case of the others. Most wear the hair low, though as many as four show the forehead. One wears her hair down her back.

It is interesting to note that only one of the twenty-nine is actually laughing, and of the remainder only one is smiling. Some few are sadly pensive. The most look out with a steady, thoughtful gaze, which is neither sad nor joyful. In searching for an apt description, one thinks of a word used by one of those authorities who defined The Girl of To-day in a recent interview in THE TIMES. He said her expression was apt to be just a little inscrutable. Inscrutable—that is the word that applies here.

AS HAMILTON SAW BURR.

A remarkably fine holograph letter of Alexander Hamilton to Robert G. Harper was obtained for $155 by Dodd & Livingston of this city at the executor's sale in Baltimore on Thursday of the rare books and autographs of the late William C. Pennington. The letter is dated Albany, Feb. 19, 1804, and reads as follows:

Dear Sir: Since the receipt of your letter on the subject of the impeachment of the Judges, this is perhaps the first moment that indifferent health and excessive occupation have permitted a reply.

I view the attempts, which are making, completely in the light you do, and have very little doubt that they are in prosecution of a deliberate plan to prostrate the independence of the Judiciary Department and substitute to the present Judges creatures of the reigning party, who will be the supple instruments of oppression and usurpation under the forms of the Constitution. This being my apprehension of the matter I shall not be backward to give the scheme all practicable resistance; and certainly if an impeachment shall be instituted and other prior and indispensable duties will permit, I shall cheerfully aid in the defense of the accused as a very high obligation. It is not, however, in my power to promise absolutely attendance, because the possibility of it must depend on the time of trial. There is hardly a sitting of our Circuit or Supreme Court at which there are not causes depending which involve the whole fortunes of individuals who place a material reliance on my affairs. Propriety or good faith would not permit me to be absent during these periods, and though the public cause might call me elsewhere I should be convinced that it would be in hands (exclusive of mine) in which it would have every possible advantage.

But notwithstanding the opinion I have expressed it will not surprise me if the execution of the plan is suspended. It is certain that in this State leading men of the popular party either disapprove the attempt or are fearful of its influence upon the affairs of the party. Hints will probably go to the prompters at Washington which may induce, if not a relinquishment, a postponement.

The Republican Party (sol disant) are greatly distracted in this State. The violence of these measures, added to the disappointment of the partisans who have been candidates for office, have produced a mass of discontent which threatens their power. Col. Burr intends to profit by it, if he can, and has no bad chance of being lifted to the chair of government by the united efforts of the personal adherents among the Democrats, malcontents of the same party, and Federalists too angry to reason. One consequence at the distraction of the party is the declining of Gov. Clinton to be a candidate of the next election. A very respectable man as to private character, Chancellor Lansing is the substitute. He has secretly many competitors, and is far from being a general favorite of the party. From this moment it is destined to be split into fragments unless hereafter reunited under the more skillful, adroit, and able lead of Col. Burr.

You will conclude from this that I do not look forward to his success with pleasure. The conclusion will be true. It is an axiom with me that he will be the most dangerous Chief that Jacobitism can have, and in relation to the present question a full persuasion that he will reunite under him the popular party and give it new force for personal purposes—that a dismemberment of the union is likely to be one of the first fruits of his elevation, and the overthrow of good principles in our only sound quarter, the North, a result not very remote.

I had rather see Lansing Governor, and the party broken to pieces. This will be no bad state of things for those who really love their country and understand its true interest. Yours, with sincere regards,

A. HAMILTON.

P. S.—Since writing the foregoing Chancellor Lansing has declined and Chief Justice Lewis is the substitute. Burr's prospect has extremely brightened.

Five months after this letter was written Hamilton was mortally wounded in a duel by Aaron Burr at Weehawken, N. J. He died the following day.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF THE TIMES.
The remarkable edition on Sunday, Dec. 7, will be sold out far ahead of time. Order it in advance, or you will be unable to get Sargent's "Prophets," reproduced in the original colors, and The Girl of To-day Section, illustrated by the new rotogravure process.—Adv.

CLAN-NA-GAEL CELEBRATES.

Decries Peace Celebration at Meeting for Manchester Martyrs.

The Clan-Na-Gael of New York had a demonstration last night in the Central Opera House in Sixty-seventh Street near Third Avenue, in commemoration of the forty-sixth anniversary of the death of the Manchester Martyrs. John Delahunty was the Chairman of the meeting and the principal speaker was Congressman James A. Hamill. The meeting also emphasized the contention of the Clan-Na-Gaels that there has not been a hundred years of peace between this country and England, and adopted the following resolution:

We, citizens of New York, protest against the attempt to turn the centenary of Mc Donough's glorious victory of Plattsburg into part of the so-called Hundred Years of Peace celebration, as has been announced in the public press, and repudiate the claim of the self-constituted Executive Committee, of which Senator James A. Foley is Chairman and former Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Conway and Francis Lynde Stetson are members, to represent the State of New York in making it a demonstration of Anglo-American amity which has no real existence.

We deny that there has been a hundred years of peace between the United States and England. During eighty-five years of the ninety-nine which have elapsed since the Treaty of Ghent was signed England was bitterly and steadfastly hostile to this republic, and availed herself of every opportunity to inflict injury upon it. In the civil war she practically levied war upon it. She hastened to recognize the belligerency of the South and was only prevented from armed intervention by the timely sending of Ruselan fleets to New York and San Francisco. She fitted out in British shipyards the swift cruisers which drove American commerce from the sea. In 1896 she attempted to smash the Monroe Doctrine by the military coercion of Venezuela, but was brought to time by the splendidly vigorous action of President Cleveland.

To-day England is the only European power which contests the right of the United States to pass American coastwise vessels free of tolls through the Panama Canal, an American waterway built through American territory by American engineers with American money, and her Government and concessionaires have obstructed and retarded President Wilson's laudable efforts to bring about peace and order in Mexico.

We are, therefore, strongly opposed to the appropriation of American money for a celebration which has a sinister international significance and is intended to prepare the way for joint military action against Germany, which has been friendly to the United States since the Revolution, when Von Steuben made the Continental Army fit to win the final victory which made this country free.

The meeting was enthusiastic. In addition to the speech making there was an interesting programme of vocal and instrumental music.

The so-called Manchester martydom occurred in 1867, at the time of the Fenian invasion of Canada. An uprising in Ireland was suppressed. The rescue of two Fenian leaders by a band of Manchester Fenians resulted in the killing of a police officer. For this three of the rescuers were hanged.

CALLS HIMSELF A COUNT.

Accused of being an opium dealer, a man who first gave his name to the police as Albert Hulsen, but afterward said he was Count Albrecht von Hulleshein, formerly a Major in the Imperial German Dragoons, will be arraigned this morning before United States Commissioner Shields. He was arrested on Saturday night in his rooms at 193 West Ninety-seventh Street, and yesterday in the Essex Market Court he was turned over to the Federal authorities by the New York detectives. The police arrested him by the use of stool pigeons.

Just before his arrest the police captured two men who said they were Walter A. Irman of 130 East Twenty-fifth Street and Curt Merhart of 233 East Thirteenth Street. The arrests were made when these two men met plain clothes men by appointment at Third Avenue and Thirteenth Street to deliver for $2,000 five pounds of opium and six pounds of hasheesh.

Hulsen, or Count Hulleshein, said he would have counsel to talk for him at to-day's proceedings. He complained that the police had grossly insulted him by appearing to doubt his nobility. He said that after squandering his patrimony he had come to America three years ago to recoup his fortune.

SINGER IN A SWEATSHOP.

Daughters of Indiana to Help Girl Who Couldn't Find a Place.

Miss Nina Barbour, a young woman who came here two months ago from Southwestern Indiana filled with the ambition to make a career for herself as a church singer, told reporters yesterday that after she had tried in vain to get a place in a church choir she was forced to go to work as a sweatshop worker in a factory on the Bowery.

The case of Miss Barbour was called to the attention of the Daughters of Indiana by the Big Sister Committee of that society, which seeks to help native daughters in distress. Mrs. George A. Wyeth, Vice President, said yesterday that the society had heard of the case and that it would be looked into.

"I spent five weeks trying to get a place with the churches," said Miss Barbour, "and then my funds gave out and I tried to get work in a department store. In one of them I met a girl who suggested that I do sewing at home. I did this for a time, but by working ten hours a day I was unable to make more than $3 or $4 a week. Two weeks ago I went to work in a factory on the Bowery, near Broome Street, at $6 a week."

TO DEPORT MOTHER AND SON

He Is Sickly and Mrs. King Won't Leave Him to Join Husband.

Mrs. Emily Eliza King, who arrived on the Philadelphia yesterday from Southampton with her twenty-two-year-old son, Douglas Arthur G. King, to join her husband in Boston, went to Ellis Island and probably will be sent back on the Philadelphia on Friday to Bournemouth, her home.

The immigration officials, who boarded the ship at Quarantine, decided that her son was too sickly to be permitted to land, as he was over age and might become a public charge. They offered to allow Mrs. King to land and go to her husband, but she preferred to go to Ellis Island with her son.

NEW GUESTS AT THE ZOO.

Leopards and Other Animals Arrive —Buffaloes to Depart.

Animals and birds, which formed a large shipment brought to this country from Hamburg, were placed on exhibition in the Zoological Park in the Bronx yesterday.

The new arrivals include a male giraffe, two yaks, two snow leopards, a tree kangaroo, a harteheast, an emu, a white rhea, a group of vultures, two leopard tortoises and several snakes.

Fourteen of the herd of forty-eight buffaloes in the zoological park will be shipped to-morrow to South Dakota, to be turned loose on a reservation. They will be in charge of Frank Rush, a former cowboy.

SUICIDE NOTE ON PIER.

Writer Hints at Trouble in Club and Says He Never Killed a Dog.

An unsigned note written in pencil and found under a stone on the pier at the foot of East Twenty-third Street, a brown hat seen floating in the East River, and the story of a man who said he had heard the splash as of some one jumping into the water were the evidences before the police yesterday morning of a man's suicide. This was the note:

I have the nerve, but life is sweet, and I went to see the sun go down. I can do it better at night. I did not think of dying last night, or I would have gone to Central Park, where it is better. I may have done some bad things, but I never killed a dog. I hope my mother, brothers, and sisters hear of my death. As the Bible says: "Christ seeks me at the last moment." The men at the club are awful men. I never did one of them an injury, as one of them said this morning.

The police have no other clue to the man's identity.

THE MOHAWK RUNS ASHORE.

Hudson River Boat Delayed Three Hours by Accident Due to Fog.

The dense fog that blanketed the Hudson River early yesterday morning caused great delay to river traffic between this city and Albany, and forced several boats to anchor until the mist cleared. At 2:30 o'clock in the morning the steamboat Mohawk of the Manhattan line, carrying 150 passengers, which sailed from Albany for this city at 8 o'clock on Saturday night, lost her bearings in the dense fog and stuck her nose into the sand of the east shore at Stony Point, six miles from Newburg.

The steamboat Frank Jones of the Capital City line, which was on her way to this city, heard the Mohawk's whistle of distress half an hour after she went ashore, and steamed to her aid. Capt. William Gates of the Mohawk assured the captain of the Frank Jones that his boat was in no danger, that the passengers were not frightened and that the boat had not been damaged. Passengers of the Mohawk, leaning over the rail, talked with passengers of the Frank Jones and laughed over the plight of their boat.

A line was made fast to the Mohawk from the Frank Jones and another was made fast by a tug. After much straining, helped by the engines of the Mohawk, the steamboat was pulled into deep water, some three hours after she had run aground.

Both the Frank Jones and the Mohawk arrived in this city three hours late. The Mohawk was undamaged, and sailed on her return trip to Albany in the afternoon.

CITY BREVITIES.

Capt. Fritz E. Ultmark, who has been master of steam and sailing ships under different flags, as well as master of a war correspondents' ship, has been selected as Principal of the New York Nautical College, a part of the educational work of the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, at Eighth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street.

The first two of a series of lectures under the auspices of the Jewish Religious School Union will be delivered in the vestry rooms of Temple Emanu-El this evening, one on Jewish theology and the other on pedagogics. The lecturers this evening will be Prof. Richard Gotthail and Dr. I. E. Goldwasser.

The Public Service Commission of the Second District will hold a public hearing at 10 o'clock this morning in the assembly room of the Metropolitan Building on the question of revising the rates charged by the New York Telephone Company, at the request of M. H. Winkler of Winkler & Rogers, of 90 Wall Street.

Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting of women school teachers to-night at Cooper Union, under the auspices of the Civic Service League for Women. She will speak in defense of the women teachers who bear children.

TO REDEEM UNUSED TICKETS

Pennsylvania Will Take Them Back at Stations Where They Were Issued

To make it easier for passengers to redeem unused tickets, the Pennsylvania Railroad announced yesterday that the unused part of an excursion ticket might be redeemed at the office at which it was bought, if presented by the original purchaser.

Until this rule was established, if any one wished to redeem a ticket, it was necessary to forward it to the General Passenger Agent at Philadelphia. On Aug. 7 the company announced that it had established a rule under which an unused ticket might be redeemed by the original purchaser at the office at which it was bought. Now this privilege has been extended to passengers holding unused parts of excursion tickets.

ECHO OF GREAT SEA FIGHT.

The story of a famous sea fight, which has been popularized by a well-known poem of Mrs. Hemans, was recalled by the sale for $11, of a small quarto letter, written by Louis Casabianca, the disposal of William T. Lata's collection of Napoleonana at Anderson's last week. Casabianca was a French naval officer, born at Bastia, Corsica, in 1755. With the Comte de Grasse he took part in the American Revolution. He was a member of the National Convention, and later one of the Council of Five Hundred. As Captain he commanded the Orient, the flagship of the fleet which transported Napoleon and his army to Egypt. In the battle of Abukir, Aug. 1, 1798, when the French fleet was attacked by the British, Admiral Brueys was killed and Casabianca had command of the fleet. Even when he was wounded and the ship caught fire he remained at his post. His ten-year-old son refused to leave him, and both were killed by the blowing up of the ship.

This thrilling incident forms the theme of Mrs. Hemans's famous poem, beginning "The boy stood on the burning deck."

The letter is signed "Luzio," is dated Beatia, Aug. 25, (1791,) is written in Italian and is addressed to his uncle, Signor Caccaldi, commenting on his aristocratic sentiments and mentioning "La Couragouse" and her commander, M. de Gracse Briancon.

Casabianca letters are rare.

DR. HILLIS ON EUGENICS.

Expects an Autocracy of Health to Result from Movement.

The prediction that eugenic marriage laws would be in operation in this State within a short time was made by the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis of Brooklyn in an address yesterday in the auditorium of the West Side Y. M. C. A. on the influences of heredity and right living for the correction of the social evils of modern life.

"The bill submitted to the last Legislature should have become a law," he said, and added: "I suspect that some of those opposed to the bill dared not encourage the passage of the measure. Men are growing stronger and better, and women are more beautiful and healthy here than at any previous time in the history of the country."

The aristocracy of health, he said, was the coming heritage of the men and women of America. According to Dr. Hillis the finest types of humanity the world has ever seen will develop from the campaign of education on social conditions, and will compose the larger part of the population of this country.

Motion pictures were used to illustrate points in the lecture.

Gerry Recovering from Operation.

Peter Goelet Gerry, member of Congress from Rhode Island, who was operated on for appendicitis on Saturday, rested comfortably yesterday. Mr. Gerry was stricken suddenly on Friday morning at Lake Delaware, Del., and was brought to the home of his father, Elbridge T. Gerry, of 2 East Sixty-first Street. The operation was performed by Doctors James, Gibson, and Beeckman. It was said that Mr. Gerry's condition was at no time alarming. Mrs. Gerry, who was Miss Mathilde S. Townsend of Washington was with her husband when he was taken ill, and came with him to this city.

Pastor Gives Moving-Picture Show.

The Rev. Dr. George Drew Egbert, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Flushing, made an attempt yesterday afternoon in Flushing to overcome the moving-picture opposition by holding the first of series of moving-picture vesper services. They were given in a local theatre. Moving pictures of Bible scenes were presented and music was furnished by a quartette. Hymns were thrown on the screen between the moving pictures and everybody joined in singing them.

STERLING

THE GORHAM COMPANY

When one thinks or speaks of silverware, we naturally think of Gorham's. Other great firms may come first in the sale of Diamonds, others in Pearls and still others in the manufacture and sale of Watches. In the commercial world it is an American Institution, founded by an American, manned by American workmen; it typifies what solid worth can achieve in America.

But Gorham's holds undisputed pre-eminence in the "solid" silverware field. In the matter of silverware alone, those who know do not undertake to institute comparisons with Gorham's. It stands alone in the volume and quality of its silver output.

The Gorham stock of sterling silverware is unequalled anywhere else in the world. In the Gorham shops at Providence and in this city have been assembled an army of the finest silverware craftsmen and designers in the world. These men have given American craftsmanship a new meaning. They have even evolved a new art in the production of Martele silver — a treatment created and produced only by the Gorham shops.

You never compare the great with the greatest, and when you think of silverware you do not compare Gorham's with the other excellent but smaller firms engaged in the making and sale of silverware.

Gorham's supplies not merely its own two great stores in this city, but its shops supply 6,000 leading jewelry firms throughout the United States as well. The sheer volume of production required to supply this demand is staggering. And all of this output is of the established high Gorham Quality.

These things are not said in disparagement of any other silverware makers — it is a mere statement of fact. Every one connected with the silverware trade knows the facts. Perhaps the general public might be interested in knowing them.

Well known as the Gorham Company is, many persons in search of silverware might consider Gorham's as one of perhaps half a dozen firms of nearly equal rank. Perhaps it might make a difference if those persons knew that Gorham's was the greatest silverware establishment in the world — the headquarters of silverware designing and production.

That is a very proud position for an American firm to occupy. It is not so many years ago that we had a notion in this country that our finest silver had to come from England. When one of the early Gorhams told the silver merchants of Sheffield nearly half a century ago that he expected to take their market away from them, and even invade England, they laughed at him.

But there is now a Gorham factory in England, and the Sheffield merchants of to-day are accepting as a fact the prediction their fathers considered a joke.

Would you not be interested in seeing for yourself in the Gorham stores the reasons why this distinction was won? You will be very welcome.

SLIDES HANDICAP OPENING OF CANAL

DANGER OF FRESH SLIDES

Water Turned in to Check or Hasten Surface Movement—Why Steam Shovels Were Displaced.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—No definite date for the official opening of the Panama Canal is set in the annual report of Col. George W. Goethals, Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Canal Commission, just submitted to Secretary Garrison. Neither is there any prediction of when ships may first pass from ocean to ocean. The first day of the canal's actual operation still depends upon the treacherous slides of Culebra Cut and upon how fast the dredges can work to keep the channels open.

"It has been the general belief that the effect of the water in the cut would tend to retard slides, and experience below the Gatun locks fully justifies this belief," said Col. Goethals. "On the other hand, the geologist is of the opinion that the water may to some extent develop new slides. Again, much ado was made in 1909 over the seamy character of the rock on the Isthmus, through which water flows quite rapidly, in consequence of which the question was raised that the lake might leak out through seams and crevices.

"If these things are liable to occur, the sooner the better, if the official opening of the canal is to occur Jan. 1, 1915; for if water were not admitted this Fall but were deferred until May 1, 1914, the full height could not be reached until October, 1914, leaving little time for the determination of these questions. These considerations led to the conclusion that the water should be turned into the cut at the earliest date practicable for getting the dredges to work on the slides.

Depends Upon Slides and Dredges.

"The present plans therefore, are based upon the blowing up of Gamboa dike on Oct. 10, its removal by dredges immediately thereafter, the transfer of two suction dredges and a ladder dredge to the Cucaracha slide, the small dipper dredges to work on the other slides until the full width of the channel is attained, and the passage of vessels through the canal as soon as channels of full depth and of sufficient width have been secured.

"Before boats can be passed it will be necessary to remove the Gamboa dike by dredges and to remove the slides as already outlined. The passage of commercial vessels is dependent, therefore, upon the time when proper channels can be dredged through the slides; should additional ones occur, they will necessarily advance the date when this will be accomplished."

The Canal proper, exclusive of the approaches, the machine shops and warehouses and great ocean docks at either end, would have been completed during the last fiscal year, but for the extensive slides in the Culebra Cut. And to deal with the great problems involved in the removal of the slides, no efective way was found except the bodily displacment of vast hills. The slides and breaks increased as the cut was deepened.

"No treatment has proven effective for slides when once developed except that of excavating and hauling away material from the moving mass until the slides come to rest, or until the angle of repose for the particular material in motion is reached," said Col. Goethals.

Slide of 2,000,000 Cubic Yards.

It was asserted by geolollists last year that the slides had been conquered and that little more activity could be expected because nearly all the loose surface soil and stone had slid off, exposing great ridges of solid basalt rock which would act as barriers to further earth movements. Yet, when all was most promising and the canal excavation had gotton within sixty feet of the bottom of the cut on the east side, the rocks broke under the tremendous pressure and 2,000,000 cubic yards of material slid into and closed up the cut.

Since then, the canal workers have been digging away that material, and though there have been several slides, steady progress has been made, for not only did giant dredges work on the face of the slides, but powerful hydraulic monitors, such as were extensively used in hydraulic mining on the Pacific Coast were brought into play to wash away the treacherous hills from the rear, carrying the material into unused valley distant from the canal.

A great engineering problem was involved in the solution of the question of continuing the excavation of the canal by steam shovels or by hydrauilc dredges, and Col. Goethals for the first time makes an official statement of the reasons which impelled him to choose the wet method. In brief, these were based on the apprehension that Gamboa Dike would not be strong enough or high enough to keep the water out of the cut as the Gatun Lake rose in the wet season. Also, steam-shovel operations would be retarded by the seasonal rains, which would not affect the operation of the dredges, and, finally, the measure was one of economy. It would have been possible with the shovels to remove all of the slides by Jan. 1, 1914, except the Cucaracha slide, which could not have been entirely carried off before April, 1914.

The financial operations of the canal are told in big figures. Congress so far has appropriated $349,503,223 for canal construction, of which $10,676,050 went for fortifications.

In great detail Col. Goethals tells the story of the engineers' work during the last year, and with particular satisfaction it is reported that the mechanism of the vast locks and dams was tested with perfect success. The gates at Gatun were swung in one minute and fifty-one seconds for each leaf. The heavy iron chains which are depended upon to prevent an unruly vessel from crashing into the locks were raised and lowered in ample time to meet any emergency and demonstrated their ability to check or stop any vessel unless of very great size and moving at excessive speed. The locomotives which will tow the ships through the locks were tried out and proved their ability to easily handle the largest of vessels, and the electric installation, which will involve the use of a current of 44,000 volts, was completely successful.

Altogether the technical sections of the report seem to demonstrate the accuracy of Col. Goethals's statement that practically nothing but the great slide at Cucaracha remains to prevent the successful operation of the canal.

ENTITLED TO FORTIFY CANAL.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—In connection with the discussion of the declaration a few days ago by Charles Stuart Nairne in an address in London before the Royal United Service Institution that "despite the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the world is now faced by a fortified Panama Canal," it was pointed out here today by officials interested that, while the treaty itself did not specifically give the United States the right to fortify the canal, the correspondence which passed on the subject at the time between the British and American negotiators showed most unmistakably that Great Britain conceded the right.

As originally drawn, the treaty contained a definite proviso that "no fortifications shall be erected commanding the canal or the waters adjacent." This was omitted from the final draft, however — "purposely left out," Senator Lodge declared in discussing the matter. "The omission of the prohibition of fortifications in the second treaty," he added, "was considered all-sufficient."

The fact that the United States under the treaty is called upon to maintain the neutrality of the canal in time of war as well as in time of peace, and, furthermore, the specific language of the treaty that "the United States shall be at liberty to maintain such military police along the canal as may be necessary to protect it against lawlessness and disorder," it is asserted here, make the right to fortify clear. As to large fortifications with big modern guns constituting "policing," it is argued that there can be no other proper interpretation. The "policing" could not be done without force equal to the task of maintaining neutrality against any odds.

"Now that the United States has become the practical sovereign of the canal," said Sir Edward Grey in a communication which he submitted to the American Government on the canal tolls question, "his Majesty's Government does not question its title to exercise belligerent rights for its protection." He added that "it certainly was not the intention of his Majesty's Government that any responsibility for the protection of the canal should attach to them in the future."

To date $3,000,000 has been appropriated for the defense of the canal against naval attack and $200,000 for land defenses.

RABBI DENOUNCES CAMPAIGN ETHICS

Dr. Schulman Assails Fusionists for Making a Political Compromise by Naming Mitchel.

ATTACKS WHITMAN ALSO

Rabbi Samuel Schulman in a sermon delivered in Temple Beth-El at Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street yesterday asserted that he had never known such "ethical demoralization" as that which marked the last campaign. Rabbi Schulman attacked the Fusionists and their candidate for Mayor because, he said, Mr. Mitchel was opposed to the "most significantly constructive act of the administration of which he was a part." This was thought to refer to Mr. Mitchel's opposition to the subway extension plan. He also denounced the District Attorney for having accepted a nomination from a party to which Rabbi Schulman said he understood the District Attorney was opposed. He disparaged also what he called "the attempt to make a hero of William Sulzer." In his sermon the Rabbi said:

"The shouting is over, the battle has ceased, the rage of mud-slinging is at an end, and the successful have reached the prize. We, therefore, can speak as becomes one, who is mainly interested in the ethical aspect of things in the body politic. I have rarely witnessed a campaign in which there was so much ethical demoralization as was manifested in the political life of this city during the last few months.

"In the first place, the so-called reformers, or Fusionists, sat for weeks and debated, haggled, and higgled as to whom to give the prize to, and at last by the nomination which they actually made for the chief office in the city they violated the leading principle which has always been supposed to animate reformers in municipal affairs. They discarded the separation of municipal government from any personal interest or partisan consideration and let themselves be influenced by considerations of politics which had absolutely no connection with the municipal issue. They selected a man, an exceptional thing in politics, who was opposed to the most significantly constructive act of the administration of which he was a part. They might have chosen one of three men, each of whom would have represented clearly the issue of the success of the city administration, but because of considerations alien to New York City's interest they passed them by.

"Misunderstand me not; this is not personal criticism of the Mayor-elect. He may make an excellent Mayor. He is a man of fine character. In the selection of just him and the refusal to select any one else who was more entitled to the office, the reformers showed that they were as much politicians in the bad sense of the word as their opponents whom they professed to despise. It was a piece of unethical politics; and that the candidate was elected was not due to his personality, but rather to the just moral route which because of the eleventh-hour revelations in the campaign overtook the opposition. Any man could have been elected under the circumstances revealed.

"In the second place, there was even something worse in the last campaign. There was that which is most disheartening to the believers in good government and in the political sincerity of temporary leaders whom politics brings to the front. There stood a man whose whole reputation in the city as a political leader and as a personality in whom, for the time being, a great moral and civic issue was supposed to be embodied, consisted in his professed opposition to the late Mayor and to the opposing political organization that was supposed to have hampered him in his investigation of the police.

"All the reputation he had made appealed to the imagination of the masses that was builded upon a belief in his sincerity. But that man coolly accepted a nomination from that same organization in order to make sure of his own election. It was a clever piece of work, but at the same time it utterly discredited him in the minds of those who think straight and sanely on political issues. By this acceptance he gave that organization an artificial character, and he betrayed the issue which was supposed to be uppermost in the minds of the citizens, and one of the best Mayors we ever had, a man who combined practical sagacity with civic idealism, justly referred to the acceptance of the nomination as 'taking an unclean thing.'

"By accepting the nomination from his opponents, he proved one of two things: Either that his virtue was acceptable to the organization and that the organization must get the benefit, and that it, therefore, cannot be as bad as it was painted by him, or his virtue must be sufficiently plastic and flexible to appeal to the acquired tastes of his late enemies. Such an act morally befouls politics, is a discredit to the perpetrator, and casts a lurid light upon his public activity.

"In the third place there was another ethically disgusting feature. There was a great perversion of moral judgment in the attempt of misguided men to turn into a hero a man who, following up his own political iniquity, naturally dragged down his former allies. While the good citizen may smile at this discomfiture of partners in iniquity who have fallen out, while they may appreciate a practical service of a Governor expelled from office which he renders in revealing the corruption of his former supporters, his role is anything but that of a hero. We may forgive some of the people who hailed him as such because of a mistaken sense of gratitude, but what shall we say of the moral leaders, of representatives of the Church, whose moral judgment has been so obfuscated as to see heroism in such a figure and to find an atonement for all sins in the chief act against Tammany.

"What we suffer from is tremendous ignorance on the part of the citizens of real issues. If we follow merely chiefs and are interested in persons we are still in the stage of feudal thinking. A politically mature people cares more for principle than for persons. The church in so far as it touches such things at all should maintain principal without compromise."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Postmaster at Philadelphia is taking no chances of running short of postage stamps for Christmas business. He has just ordered 90,230,000 stamps, vauled at $1,696,600, the largest single order ever given by a Postmaster. In July, 1912, the Chicago Postmaster sent in a requisition for 71,800,00 stamps, valued at $1,538,000, establishing a record now broken by Philadelphia. The stamps being sent to Philadelphia include some of the new issue of 7, 9, 12, 20, and 30-cent denominations, designed by Postmaster General Burleson to meet the needs of the parcel post business.

A. F. STOKES IS ROBBED.

New York Man Loses Money and Valuable Papers in Baltimore Hotel.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 23.—Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Stokes of New York were awakened at 3 o'clock this morning in their apartment in the Hotel Kernan by the closing of the door. Leaping out of bed and turning on the lights, Mr. Stokes found that his pocketbook, containing money and valuable papers, had been stolen.

He telephoned to the clerk and a watchman found in the corridor near the room a waiter from another hotel where Mr. and Mrs. Stokes had taken supper last evening. The man ran, but was caught by a policeman. In the Police Court this morning the waiter was charged with disturbing the peace. No evidence could be produced to substantiate a charge of theft. The waiter had engaged a room next to that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Stokes and had paid for his lodging in advance.

PROHIBITION NO CURE.

So Says Prof. Simpson in a Lecture on Alcoholism.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Prof. Sutherland Simpson of the Cornell University Medical College does not think much of prohibition as a means of bringing about temperance. In discussing hereditary alcoholism to-day he said that it was ten times more potent than environment.

"The Jews," he said, "are at present a remarkable sober people, yet in the Scriptures the warnings against drink are common. If we were as old as the Jews in the alcoholic sense there would be no drink problem at all. It may be that it can only be by a process of elimination that we can ever attain permanent sobriety. If that is so, prohibition is the worst possible means of procuring temperance."

GAVE $100 CHECKS AS TIPS.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—Hundred-dollar tips do not often come the way of waiters in Montreal hotels, so for the last few days the members of the staff of the Ritz-Carlton, including even the orchestra, have been in a state of pleasureable excitement over the liberality of a guest, "Count Earl Blumberger of Vienna," who rewarded each courtesy with a check for some liberal sum, several waiters getting as much as $100 each. Unfortunately some doubt arose as to the integrity of these checks, and the alleged Count's peculiar behavior led to his appearance before Judge Weir, as the hotel authorities had doubts of his sanity. In reply to a question as to his identity, the stranger said he was "a Count of Austria, related to many European crowned heads, and had money to burn."

The Judge ordered an examination into his sanity.

Mrs. Sage's Portrait for Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

ITACA, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Dr. Andrew D. White, former President of Cornell, intends to procure for the university a full length portrait of Mrs. Russell Sage, who gave $300,000 to the fund for Prudence Risley Hall. The Board of Trustees, at Dr. White's suggestion, has appropriated $1,000 for the portrait, which will be hung in the hall of the new dormitory for women students.

A heating proclamation

Our thousands of new customers who remember their experiences with old-fashioned heating during the zero days of last winter (with the excessive coal-bills, lifting and lugging of coal-hods and ashes, and the strain of constant cleaning drudgery and "minding the fire") have good cause to proclaim a heating-Thanksgiving upon having this Fall escaped!

AMERICAN RADIATORS & IDEAL BOILERS

This proclamation of thanksgiving includes these benefits: the IDEAL Boiler (from less coal than the old outfit burned) sends heat to all rooms irresistibly, steadily—winds cannot force it back. The boiler is so hardy that no part can warp or strain, corrode or rust out; no repairs needed. No dust, dirt or coal-gases sent to rooms above; woman's cleaning work cut in two. The former old-fashioned heating with its greedy appetite for coal, and head-butting pipes are gone—and in their place the IDEAL Boiler stands as a reliable, safe and noiseless all-iron servant, responsive, cleanly and obliging.

A No. 2118 IDEAL Boiler and 270 sq. ft. of 38-in. AMERICAN Radiators, costing the owner $140, were used to heat this cottage. At this price the goods can be bought of any reputable, competent Fitter. This did not include cost of labor, pipes, valves, freight, etc., which are extra, and vary according to climatic and other conditions.

The proclamation of thanks also includes recognition of the neat, tight, dust-free AMERICAN Radiators, which, like sentinels stand at the exposed points in each room and beat back every advance of chill, keeping the entire house cosy and warm—each room under separate control.

Then, there's the increase in the value of the home. The value of the new outfit will all be there twenty, thirty, or more years after (while the old-fashioned outfit might be all used up—burned or rusted out in ten years.) This counts in renting or sales value, so your money is not gone—it is there substantially, like an investment.

IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators are also made in right size types for churches, schools, hotels, stores—all buildings, city or country. Modern fitting puts them into OLD structures as easily as in new.

May we send you our free book: Ideal Heating?—Your inquiry does not obligate. Write us today.

IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators change any house into a home.

ARCO WAND Vacuum Cleaner—built into the house

We also make the ARCO WAND Vacuum Cleaner, connected by iron suction pipe to various floors of houses, flats, schools, churches, hotels, etc. Through a light-weight hose ALL the dirt, cobwebs, lint, threads, moths, etc., are drawn with lightning rapidity down the iron piping into big, sealed dust-bucket in cellar. No dragging around a clumsy, inefficient portable cleaner—instead, the outfit is part of the building—like radiator heating. Shall we send new catalog?

Chalmers
The Master "Six"

2 Miles to 50 on High

Sounds impossible, and it is with most cars. The wonderful flexibility built into the New Chalmers "Six" motor gives this wide range of speed.

You can throttle down to the crawl of the slowest moving vehicle, than get away in an instant with a speed that takes no car's dust—without shifting a gear.

Think what this means in crowded traffic, in the pinches. In and out of the crowds—a burst of speed here, slacking down here and never touching a lever—just the easy, convenient control of the gas.

In every instance the Master "Six" responds to your demands without apparent effort without knocking or jerking. You glide away with steady, smooth power, with perfect ease and comfort.

To ride in this car is to get new motoring sensation—due to its marvelous flexibility. Only in that way can you know what a motor car should do "on high." Let us take you for the Chalmers Road Test. It will show you many things that this car can do that others can't.

in Three Colors

THESE paintings by John S. Sargent are one of the chief features of the Boston Public Library. They will be reproduced in the original colors on special super-paper by the same process which was used when Abbey's "Holy Grail" and the Morgan pictures were issued by The New York Times. The complete frieze, as reproduced, in three parts, is 55 inches long and 10 inches wide. It will be suitable for framing, as there is no printing on the back. The picture is equal to anything ever offered by Christmas publications costing fifty cents and a dollar.

The Girl of To-day,

THE new rotogravure process of reproduction will be used in this section. After The New York Times had asked its readers to submit photographs of young women whom they considered typical of the American girl, seven famous artists acted as judges of the contest. Twenty-nine of their selections will fill the special eight-page rotogravure section of the Christmas Number. These pictures were chosen from hundreds submitted. The one photograph selected as most typical of the American girl covers the entire front page, and all of the other twenty-eight Girls of To-day in the Christmas section are wonderfully attractive. But there were so many other attractive photographs in the contest that the judges were unable to confine their choices to twenty-nine, and it has been decided to issue a second rotogravure section on December 14, containing the remaining sixty-one photographs selected. The reproductions in both the sections will be quite as remarkable as the original photographs, for rotogravure is the newest method of illustration, producing results equal to those of the old and slow photogravure process. All the regular Times Pictorial Sections will be printed by rotogravure soon after the first of the year.

THE Two Special Sections Will Be Issued in Addition to the Regular Half-tone Picture Section, Which All Readers of The Times Have Come to Know As An Unequalled Pictorial Review of Current Events.

The Christmas Number, Therefore, Will Contain Three Illustrated Sections—One in Colors, One in Rotogravure and One in Half-tone—Each a Pictorial Magazine Representing the Highest Type of a Modern Method of Illustration.

Christmas Number of The New York Times

FOOTBALL'S FINAL WEEK---DENVER WINS RACE---ATHLETICS---BOXING---HOCKEY---GOLF

ARMY-NAVY TEAMS IN END PRACTICE

Naval Coaches Highly Regard Playing Abilities of West Point Cadets.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23.—Attended by unusual interest and enthusiasm from the local contingent, the Naval Academy team will begin to-morrow afternoon preparations for the final contest against the military team on the Polo Grounds, New York, next Saturday. The coaches feel that the team is just about on edge, and efforts will be directed toward keeping it at just that point. The work will be line and arranged to perfect certain details of individual play rather than improve the general work of the team. There will be no scrimmage to-morrow, and it is doubtful if there will be any on Tuesday or Wednesday. Thanksgiving morning a brief sight of the big team in action is promised.

Coach Reilly returned to Annapolis to-day after seeing West Point play against Springfield on Saturday. Neither Coach Reilly or Head Coach Howard will claim more than an even chance for the game next Saturday, and there is reason to believe that West Point is more highly regarded by the Navy coaches than is generally thought.

Lieut. Howard also stated that several positions on his team are still in doubt. It is not certain whether Failing or Leonard will start the game at halfback, either Ingram or Overseh may be chosen for left end, while either Ralston or Kennedy may start at left tackle. Nichols has won his place at quarterback by his brilliant running, though starting late in the season, and he will be worked with the team as much as possible this week.

PLANS AT WEST POINT.

Hard Practice to Stop Wednesday —Players Leave on Friday.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Although the West Point victory over Springfield on Saturday was by a small score, Army supporters are not in the least discouraged with the team's showing. The Cadets with a mixed-up lineup met the expectations of the coaches. Springfield played a hard game throughout, and flashed a bewildering repertoire of forward passes that would likely puzzle any team. The Cadets presented the strongest combination possible under the circumstances during the first period.

The coaches will begin to-morrow the final preparations for the Navy game next Saturday. The usual Monday talk will be followed by light scrimmage work. Hard practice will be called off after Wednesday, and on Friday the team will leave for New York. The injury to Meacham, received in Saturday's game, will likely keep him out for a few days. His place will go to O'Hare or Herrick, unless the veteran Huston, who has been resting for a fortnight, gets back to-morrow.

HARVARD'S ELEVEN BEST.

Crimson Showing Against Yale Developed Great Machine.

The Harvard football eleven to-day proudly takes the position that the Crimson has the best football team in the East. And perhaps they are right. The combination which Coach Percy Haughton has drilled in Cambridge this year is a team which has made no mistakes. It has been scored upon, but has not been beaten. As a unit it was a great football team. Drilled thoroughly in the fundamentals of the gridiron game, Harvard went through a season with a clean slate. The eleven was so perfectly organized that there has been no time during the season that its resources have been called upon until they met the fighting Elis on Saturday.

Here was the test, and Harvard measured up to their task. In one of the most gruelling contests which has ever been fought on Soldiers Field, Harvard rose above the aggressiveness of Yale's game and spent and beat the Blue to a standstill. Harvard had a perfectly organized team. It knew football from the ground up. In handling the oval ball and in its tactical efforts against opponents Haughton's team was unerring. Besides that, it knew the game and played it hard. The game Harvard played was built around Brickley and was its biggest asset. There was a defense constructed around this marvelous drop-kicker which was absolutely impregnable. The big Crimson line of forwards, the Crimson secondary defense never played better than when they heard the quarter back, "Mal" Logan, call out the signal for a Brickley dropkick. They knew Brickley must be properly defended and their defense was perfect.

If Harvard did not happen to have such a wonderful performer as Brickley this fact remains: Put to the final test, it is probable that with a rushing linesmashing game or with an end-skirting game Harvard could have won if it had been necessary to resort to a running open game. Harvard's talent was capable of playing an open game, but did not have to. All that was necessary was to rush within drop-kicking distance of Yale's goal and leave the rest to Brickley. This Harvard did, and did well.

Harvard's team was fundamentally right. The attitude of the Crimson line and the playing of the secondary defense was perfect. Yale had a running game which, if turned loose, was dangerous, but Harvard's defense was better. The only team in the East which might have had a chance against this machine of Haughton's was Dartmouth in its best form. The defeat of the Hanover team by the Indians is strongly argued against them. But Dartmouth has another story. This Indian game was in reality an aftermath for their regular college season. It was something apart from their schedule. The mental enthusiasm of Dartmouth was gone when they played the Indians. They had defeated Princeton and Pennsylvania and had the fill of their triumph. They went into the Indian game with a care-free, easy feeling. There is where they made a mistake. If the team, all played out, had been as earnest in this game as they were in their other games, the result might have been different. The trouble was, Dartmouth felt that their record was safe and did not fear the Carlisle team. The surprise of the Redskins' game swept them off their feet.

But, after all, that is Dartmouth's loss. In the heyday of their game, they might have had a chance against Harvard. Coach Franak Cavanaugh had a wonderfully fine eleven, which knew all kinds of football. The fact that the team was dropped form Harvard's schedule showed that the eleven was too tough a proposition for the Crimson between the Princeton and the Yale games. So Harvard took on Cornel instead.

There is much to be said in praise of Haughton's system. His idea is to have an eleven which in the first place knows the game, and in the second place could play it. There must be no guessing. The Harvard campaign was well thought out before the game was played. One player in the Harvard team did not shine much. That was Logan, the quarter back, and yet it was his headwork that made it possible for Harvard, with two great performers like Brickley and Mahan, to get within striking distance of Yale's goal. He chose his plays with a keen insight on the situation, and invariably was right in picking his plays. He knew from the first period that Eddie Mahan could outkick Knowles, and he let him do it. Harvard gained by the exchange of kicks several times.

With a judicious combination of the kicking and rushing game, Logan was able to bring Harvard within drop kicking distance of Yale's goal seven times. Five times out of seven Charley Brickley made good, which gives him a fine total percentage. The only Harvard player who ever approached this record of Brickley was "Bernie" Tafford, who kicked four field goals against Cornell twenty-three years ago.

The present season of football has been, outside of Harvard, one of the most unsatisfactory seasons of the game. There are two or three teams in the West which Western critics believe would have a chance against Harvard. Michigan, for instance, defeated Penn and Syracuse decisively. Notre Dame showed a brand of football against West Point which was the most spectacular ever seen in the East under the new rules. Whether Western football could stand up against a team like Harvard will always remain a mystery because there has been no fair test of their respective merits.

COBB LEADS IN BATTING.

Official American League Figures Give Detroit Slugger First Place.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb of Detroit led the American League in batting for the sixth successive year, according to the official batting figures of the junior major league, which have just been made public. Cobb failed to realize his ambition, batting .400 or better for three successive campaigns, but came near enough to that coveted mark to win for himself a grand average of .408 for the three seasons, during which time he took part in 418 games. This in itself is a new record for batting and adds more lustre to the wonderful hitting ability of the Detroit star. Joe Jackson, who was Cobb's greatest rival for batting honors in the two previous years, also for a great part of the last season, fell far behind the redoubtable Ty in the closing weeks of the race and finished with a mark of .373. Nominally second honors go to Olaf Henriksen of Boston, but Jackson really ranks second, as he took part in 148 games to thirty for the Boston substitute.

The Yankees have only two batters in the .300 class, both of them making their mark in the closing weeks of the campaign. Gilhooley batted .341 for twenty-four games and Holden .302 for eighteen games. Of the men who were with the Yankees all season Cree was the leading batsman with a mark of .271. The batting averages of the Yankees who are not included in the table below are as follows: Zeider, .246; Knight, .236; McConnell, .179; Schultz, .175; Gossett, .162; Ford, .162; Keating, .070.

The team batting figures show the Athletics far in front with a mark of .285, with .263 for Boston, .268 for Cleveland, .265 for Detroit, .254 for Washington, .237 for New York, .237 for St. Louis, and .236 for Chicago. The Athletics led in runs and hits by a wide margin, and in two-baggers and home runs by small margins. The Mackmen also have the greatest total in base hits. Boston and Detroit tied for the honors in doubles, Cleveland in sacrifice hits, and Washington in stolen bases. The Yankees had the distinction of drawing the greatest number of passes and St. Louis led the league in striking out. Every one of the four regular infielders and three regular outfielders of the Athletics batted .275 or better, four passing .300. Following are the figures of all players who batted .275 or better in fifteen or more games:

Morris Wins Smart Set Run.

Aaron Morris of the Smart Set A. A. won the four-mile road race of his club yesterday over a four-mile course in Brooklyn in the good time of 22 minutes 40 seconds. He assumed the lead after the first mile and finally beat his nearest opponent, G. Hales of the Kings County A. A. by about 300 yards. The first eight to finish were: Aaron Morris, Smart Set A. A.; G. Hales, Kings County A. A.; Arthur King, St. Agnes A. A.; L. Lapides, Presentation Club; A. Swan, Smart Set A. A.; F. E. Decatur, St. Augustine A. A.; J. Posle, St. Augustine A. A., and T. Martin, St. Augustine A. A.

Kenan New Wesleyan Captain.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 22.—The Wesleyan team has elected as Captain for next year Dan C. Kenan, who comes from the El Paso Military Academy, and who has been Wesleyan's utility man during the present season. In the Trinity game he played half back and tackle for Wesleyan, and his election was unanimous.

Notes of the Golfers.

Nearly $50,000 is being spent by the historic St. Andrew's Golf Club, which recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary with John Reid, the "father of American golf," and former President Taft as guests of honor, in the improvements to the club facilities.

Under the supervision of S. A. Cunningham, Chairman of the Green Committee, the putting greens have been developed to such a state that they are among the finest in the country. Then the locker room has been made nearly double its former size, with an unusual amount of light and ventilation. Several hundred new lockers of the latest improved type have been installed.

The last of the season's golf tournament will be run off this week over the links of the Country Club of Lakewood. All of Thanksgiving Day will be given over to an eighteen-hole qualifying round, with the first and second rounds of match play on Friday and the semi-final and final tests on Saturday.

Joseph Sylvester, one of the Van Cortlandt Park professionals, will take a position at the Glens Falls Country Club, Glens Falls, N. Y., next season. Fred Cook, a professional until a year or two ago, plans to return next season. He has no club as yet.

A. H. Finlay of Philadelphia, who managed the recent trip of Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the British professionals through this country, will go to England shortly after the holidays, ostensibly with a view to arranging a tour for several British pros for next year and the year of 1915. It is likely that quite a few will come here at the time of the Panama Pacific Exposition in San Francisco.

WINGED FOOT MEN WIN PASTIME RACE

Winged Foot hill and dale men won the team honors yesterday at the Pastime Athletic Club five and a half mile road race, which was decided over the Fleetwood course, with 108 runners representing a score of Metropolitan clubs accepting the allotments of the handicapper, which were framed from the former national cross country champion, Willie Kramer of the Long Island A. C., who won the first time prize in 28:18. George Carson of the Mohawk A. C. was the winner of the event, although he was all in to get through the tape twenty yards ahead of J. O'Connor of the New Yorks, who in turn defeated a Morris High School boy, M. Pistronk, one of the contestants from the limit mark of 04:30.

The margin of victory by the team of the New York A. C. quintet was one point, their total of 58 just managing to top that of the Mohawk lads, who showed in second place with 59, while the Harlem organization, the Glencoes, filled third position, with 105 points.

The race was notable from several standpoints aside from its being the forerunner of the long list of handicaps arranged for the coming season for local athletic club men in that the referee was the Austrian Olympic envoy, Dr. Herschman of Vienna, who was witnessing his second contest of the sort on American soil. Dr. Herschman admitted himself greatly pleased with the vim and good sportsmanship displayed by the "cross country" men, and further said that he has ceased to marvel at the reasons for America's prominence in the world of track and field sport because of the thoroughness of the preparation of the youth of the country. James E. Sullivan, the American Olympic Commissioner, accompanied the visitor over the course and was highly gratified with the apparent desires of the athletes to help the "athletic nursery" which was promoting the race.

A great crowd of followers of the game turned out to witness the efforts of the several champions who were giving away long starts to what looked like a promising field of runners. In the vicinity of the start, Jerome Avenue and 162d Street, there was an army of spectators, and the corps of half a dozen mounted policemen had their troubles at the end holding the crowd in check so that it would not mar the finish of the race.

Two score of runners were sent away in the first batch of limit men, who were in receipt of 4 minutes 30 seconds, with a New Jersey athlete, E. McCarthy of the Royaltons, and Lillis, Ozanam Association, the first to show. Long Island Avenue and past the eastern end of Washington Bridge Seegar showed the way at a good clip, with McCarthy and Pistronk his nearest opponents.

During the final half mile and from Johnson's road house to the end the limit men were mowed down appreciably by the back-markers. All eyes along the route were fastened on Kramer, the cross-country king, who, although he made gallant efforts to overcome the long starts given on him, found himself oppressed with a difficulty in his breathing because of a lung condition which has affected him for several weeks past and caused him to stop in the recent Van Cortlandt Park championship race.

Carson of the Mohawks challenged Pistronk a quarter of a mile from the tape and speedily disposed of the high school lad. Carson finally won by twenty yards from O'Connor, with Pistronk in third place. After this trio had finished the others rushed through the finish line in squads, which caused the checkers trouble in getting the numbers, which were so necessary for the awarding of the team honors. The summary:

WOISIN WINS CYCLE TITLE.

Acme Wheelmen Capture Team and Individual Interstate Honors.

After two postponements on account of inclement weather the final race of the Interclub Amateur Cycle Road Racing League was held to-day over a ten-mile course at Pelham Park before a large crowd of cycle enthusiasts, including the six-day rider George Cameron. The competing clubs were New England Wheelmen of New York, Century Road Club Association, New York Division; Acme Wheelmen of New York, Century Road Club Association, New Jersey Division, and Century Road Club of America. The Glunz Wheelmen of Brooklyn, who also hold membership in the league, failed to appear. Although the weather did not lend itself to a bicycle race on the road, fast times were recorded.

The individual championship of the league was won by Fred Woisin of the Acme Wheelmen, while the latter organization captured the team championship for 1913. The New Jersey Division of the Century Road Club Association was eliminated owing to accidents after covering the first half of the course. The summary:

Forty-mile Interclub Race—Won by Acme Wheelmen of New York, represented by Fred Wolsin, Harry Lilienthal, Joe Crowley and Johnny Bivashl, time—27:15; New England Wheelmen, including Jackie Welton, Bert Baker, C. H. Tonges and Tony Desmond of Hoboken, second, time—27:33; Century Road Club Association, New York Division, composed of Sylvain Segal, A. Morgan, H. Buggelin and H. Jensen, third, time—28:45 4-5; Century Road Club of America, with Hugo Heintze, Ch. Kurdle, J. Zabilicki and L. Andre Fraysse, fourth, time—30:38.

NEW PLAYERS IN HOCKEY.

Many Changes Will Be Made In League Championship Team.

With the assignment of practice dates and the adoption of the playing schedule for the championship tournament, the hockey season in this vicinity is well under way, and all indications point to one of the most interesting battles for the Amateur League championship title in the history of the sport. Five clubs will be engaged in the tournament for titular honors, the Wanderers Hockey Club electing to be represented after a season's absence. Much regret has been expressed in hockey circles over the failure of the New York Athletic Club to put a team on the ice for the second time, but it is understood that Capt. Paul Pilgrim, who favors the sport, is planning to organize an all-star team composed of the best Canadian players available for next season.

How the teams engaged in this season's tournament will be constituted is as yet doubtful, notwithstanding that the clubs which practiced yesterday at the St. Nicholas Rink, where all the matches will be played, presented many new players, in addition to those whose names are familiar to hockey enthusiasts. So many new Canadian players are here now ready to try for places on the various teams that it is doubtful if the former players are able to cope with them in the fight for preferment. It was to give some of these former Canadian experts an opportunity to play here that the Amateur League favored a five-team tournament.

Results of Soccer Games.

After battling tooth and nail for forty-five minutes in a National League game at Marquette Oval, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, the Brooklyn F. C. and the Newarks eleven had not registered a score, but soon after resumption of play in the second period the Brooklynites played all around the consignment from Newark, and when full time was called the home squad were declared victors by the score of 5 goals to 1.

Superior combination work and accuracy at shooting won a victory for the Clan McDuffs over the Longfellow F. C. by the score of 3 goals to 1 at Emerson Field yesterday afternoon. The contest, which was a championship fixture of the New York State Amateur League, brought out a good-sized crowd, who were rewarded by seeing a well-played game.

Clashing in a Metropolitan League Championship fixture at Columbia Oval yesterday afternoon, the German F. C. and the Fulton Soccer squad gave the crowd assembled there a fine exhibition. Bitch, a new addition to the Germans, was in great form and tallied all the points for the winners.

At Knight's Oval, Long Island City, yesterday afternoon, the Greenpoint F. C. and the Yonkers Thistles battled ninety minutes to a drawn game of two goals each. This was a Metropolitan League championship game.

The Overseae traveled to Van Cortlandt Park to meet the Eureka F. C. in a Metropolitan League Championship game. The latter team did not put in an appearance and the Overseas were awarded the contest by the usual score of 1 to 0.

By the one-sided score of 6 goals to 0 Columbia Oval F. C. took into camp the fast-going Rangers at Manhattan Field, Lenox Oval, yesterday afternoon, in a New York State Amateur League game. The Columbias had the advantage of a strong wind in the first half and scored three goals.

Strengthened by the addition of Donald Stewart in the full back line the Cameron F. C. defeated the St. George eleven at Manhattan Field yesterday afternoon in a New York State Amateur League contest by the score of 2 goals to 0.

After ninety minutes of hard playing in a Metropolitan League game at Macomb's Dam Park yesterday afternoon the Hamilton and Chelsea football elevens walked off the field, neither team being able to score a point. Ten minutes before time was called in the second period Blue of the Chelseas was put out of the game.

One of the surprises of yesterday's football was when Clan Chisholm played a tie game of 2 goals with the Fulton F. C. at Woodside, L. I.

By the overwhelming score of 7 goals to 0 the Clan McKenzie F. C. went down to defeat at the hands of the Yonkers F. C. at Grant City, S. I., yesterday afternoon in a New York State Amateur League. At half time the victors were leading by 1 goal to 0. In the second period they had a walk-over. The point getters were Martin, (4,) Petrie, (2,) and McDonald.

The German F. C. kept up their record-breaking habit of scoring goals in large numbers yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Anglo-Saxon F. C. at Taft's Oval, Brooklyn, by 8 goals to 1.

The St. George F. C. humbled the West New York eleven at the latter's grounds Nurgo's Oval, North Bergen, N. J., yesterday afternoon in a Metropolitan League game by the score of 6 goals to 1.

DENVER WINS MATCH FROM OAKLAND BOY

The race was arranged three weeks ago, when Mr. Straus announced his willingness to send Denver against any trotter on the drive, but had been postponed twice on account of inclement weather. When the two horses were sent away from the starting point the crowd cheered the drivers until after they had flashed under the wire. Both Mr. Straus and Mr. Murphy intrusted their horses in the care of trainers, the Murphy trotter being driven by Dave McCleary, while Tim Sullivan sent Denver over the first half mile, in which it was defeated, only to give way to Mr. Straus. In the first meeting of the pair Oakland Boy was first home after Denver went off to a break at the quarter-mile post. The pace as the pair were heading down the stretch was a fast one, and Sullivan, in urging his charge to greater speed, threw it off its stride. Oakland Boy finished in a jog, the time being the fastest of the three heats, announced as 1:04.

When the two horses were returning to the stables after the heat, Mr. Straus and Sullivan in the wagon, and in the two succeeding brushes Mr. Straus piloted Denver to victory without once showing any signs of a break. The second heat was a repetition of the first one, with Oakland Boy breaking at the same point at which Denver did in the first heat, leaving Denver to come home a winner by ten lengths in 1:02¾.

The final heat showed Denver acting perfectly under the handling of Mr. Straus, and it came away from the start, never to be headed by Oakland Boy, and won the heat and race by eight lengths. This time the watches caught the winner's quarter of a second slower than in the second meeting. Immediately after the race the Brush Committee announced that Mr. Straus had elected to send Denver against Irving V. Hunt's champion trotter Fair Maiden, 2:07, next Sunday in another special race, weather permitting.

Second in importance to the Denver-Oakland Boy race was another specially arranged event for pacers. It brought together Mr. Murphy's former speedway champion mare, Coast Marie, and Edward E. Shoemaker's bay gelding Flaget. Coast Marie was the winner in three heats after the opening one resulted in a dead heat. Flaget broke in the second meeting, leaving Coast Marie to finish without being forced, and winning by several lengths. The final heat also went to Coast Marie, but only by a close margin when Flaget made the going fast from the start.

William Scott scored a double triumph in the afternoon's sport by sanding two of his nominations to victory, one of which was well earned. The summaries:

Jack Johnson Challenges Wrestlers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Jack Johnson, the world's champion heavyweight pugilist, to-day issued a challenge to wrestle any man in the world under catch-as-catch-can rules. Joe Rogers, the American who is unbeaten in wrestling tournament now running here may accept the challenge.

Three-Cushion Billiards at Doyle's.

Pierre Maupome, the three-cushion billard player of St. Louis, will play a 200-point match with Tom Gallagher of this city at Doyle's Forty-second Street room this week. The men are to play forty points each night for five nights, beginning this evening. The match is bound to create interest on account of the different styles employed, as the Mexican depends entirely on his execution and is considered the best shotmaker the game has produced, while Gallagher is a past master in safety play. Alfredo De Oro, the champion, will referee to-night's block.

TIES SHOOTING RECORD.

Spotts Equals Best Performance of Larchmont Y. C. Gunners.

Ralph L. Spotts, a prize winner among trapshooters, easily carried off the honors yesterday at the opening shoot of the Larchmont Yacht Club. By breaking 86 "birds" straight he broke one club record, and by breaking 98 out of the possible 100 he tied the present club record. He was the winner of the 10 and 15 "bird" scratch contests, and he also captured the high gun prize, a medal, with a score of 120 out of the possible 125.

This performance was accomplished under conditions that were anything but favorable. The sky was overcast and a brisk east wind caused the "birds" to "duck" and describe queer angles. Despite this handicap, the shoot was regarded as a most successful opening of the season for this popular club. Fifteen men faced the traps in all the matches, chief of which was the 100 "bird" championship, for which a silver-mounted desk electrolier and a medal were offered as prizes.

H. H. Duden proved the winner, and he selected the medal for his prize. He, with W. W. Fitzgerald and Dr. L. Culver, tied with 100 each, their respective handicaps being 15, 23, and 10. In the shoot-off they finished in that order. R. L. Spotts broke 25 in his first and second strings, and T. J. McCahill broke 25 in his third string.

Good Field in St. Anselm Run.

In spite of the Pastime's big handicap race, twenty-five harriers faced the starter in the weekly road race of the St. Anselm's A. C. William Downs of the Xavier A. A. crossed the tape a winner over C. Timmons of the Morningside A. C. by about 300 yards. The time of the winner was 17:55. T. Reilly of the Broadway A. C. finished third, close behind Timmins. Bill Monahan of the St. Anselm A. C. ran a good race for two miles, but had to quit when his weak ankle went back on him. The order of finish:

William Downs, Xavier A. A., 17:55; C. Timmons, Morningside A. C., 18:14; T. O'Reilly, Broadway A. C., 18:32; W. Pavlik, Ozanam A. C., 18:33; A. Kaufman, Broadway A. C., 18:35; J. T. MR. ROOSEVELT'S CRUSADE.

South America would not seem to most of us a region in which there is great need of a crusade against the judiciary on the ground that it restrains the complete free and easy control of public affairs by the people. On the contrary, it is a region where experience has shown a too ready rejection of all restraint, a disregard, at once light-hearted and savage, of law and order, and a tendency to violence in seeking ends sometimes legitimate and often otherwise.

Mr. ROOSEVELT, however, has chosen South America for such a crusade and to cite, with the authority given to him by his distinguished service in the National Government, the history of the United States as a melancholy and appalling example of the widespread and deep-seated evil due to an independent judiciary. "During the "last half of the nineteenth century," he declares, "the leaders of reaction "in the United States, political and "financial alike, gradually grew to "recognize in the judiciary their most "powerful potential ally," and this because the Judges have no "real "knowledge of or understanding sym"pathy with the lives and needs of the "ordinary toilers." These are the words Mr. ROOSEVELT used at Santiago on Saturday before the University of Chile, addressing an audience of young men, from whom, largely, the future leaders of public opinion in the republic may be expected to come.

His statement has two faults: Its doctrine is pernicious; its history is grossly inaccurate. A great part of the period to which he refers was occupied with a struggle to restrain the abuse of concentrated corporate wealth and power, and especially to check the tendency toward practical monopoly most marked in corporations controlling transportation. The struggle was long and difficult and was met by stubborn resistance from "political and financial reactionaries." It finally culminated in the passage of the Interstate commerce act and the anti-trust act. Both these acts were at once taken into the courts. During his entire occupation of the Executive Office Mr. ROOSEVELT and his Attorney General were engaged in pressing to decision the cases arising under these acts. He was necessarily intimately acquainted with their history and with the action of the courts connected with them. He himself professed the belief that in these cases the rights of the toiler, the ordinary rights of the ordinary man, as against the interests, were involved. And he knows that in the long series of litigations involving this issue the decision of the courts uniformly and often unanimously sustained and enforced the laws as against the interests. Indeed, the criticism he, at times, felt called upon to make was that the courts were too narrow and severe in their interpretation.

Mr. ROOSEVELT'S statement, then, is unsupported by fact and contrary to general knowledge. The courts have not been the ally of the leaders of reaction, either political or financial. Why does Mr. ROOSEVELT attack them in this unfair and disloyal fashion? Apparently because in so doing he panders to a restless and lawless element in the population who are moved by the scheme of direct popular government. This class find the courts in their way. They crave the power to overrule them at any single election in which they can get, for the moment, a majority. Mr. ROOSEVELT would grant that power. He would like to be a leader in the exercise of such a power. And with his innate tendency to extremes he would like to direct it straight at the function of the courts in interpreting the Constitution. That has been the most important, the most pregnant, the most precious function of the courts. It made the nation. It swept the Constitution clean of the implications the Separatists like JEFFERSON sought to read into it. It defined and put on a solid basis the powers of the Congress. It laid the foundations for the conception of nationality for which the war for the Union was victoriously fought. It made possible the extension of our sway first to the Pacific and then beyond. This function of the courts is the richest contribution to a free, orderly, and stable national government made in our history.

Mr. ROOSEVELT would undermine and destroy it. He would rob it of its force by giving the right to supersede, change, or revise it to a chance majority. And this—heaven save the mark!—he would do in the name of progress. His policy is not progressive in any sane meaning of the word; it is, in the worst sense of the term, reactionary. He would, if he could carry out that policy, turn back the nation to the conditions existing before the Constitution was framed, to the confusion, anarchy, contention, and demoralization of the wretched confederation. And he selects South America as the field of his really reactionary propaganda—South America, whose republics, slowly, painfully, at incalculable cost of blood and treasure, have most of them struggled upward from the level to which his amazing plan would tend again to reduce them. We are confident that in his own land he has done his worst, and that further failure awaits further effort. Let us hope that in the lands he is now traversing his pernicious preaching may be rejected.

NO DESIRE TO INTERFERE.

Only the Governors of Texas and Idaho are willing to express the belief that armed intervention in Mexico would be justified. A few of the other Governors declare themselves utterly opposed to intervention, and a few others announce their intention to support any action President WILSON may take. By far the larger number, however, refuse to say anything whatever on a subject wholly out of the province of State Government, which is wise. All the Governors have troubles enough of their own without meddling with the affairs of the National Administration. It is obvious, however, that there is very little sympathy throughout the country with the idea of Gov. COLQUITT of Texas, expressed in The Sun, that we should send soldiers into Mexico, without delay, to restore order. As a prompt means of restoring order that plan would have serious defects. It would lead to a protracted war, accompanied by much more disorder than now exists.

Many thousands of intelligent Mexicans deeply interested in the trade and industries of that country are bearing the severe burdens imposed by the state of civil war patiently. In the circumstances we must be patient, too. It seems that ample precautions have been taken thus far to protect the lives of Americans who have not yet heeded President WILSON'S advice to leave the country. We have battleships at the Mexican ports and an armed guard on the northern frontier. The contending factions in Mexico have been warned that they will be held responsible for the destruction of American property. The chief danger that threatens Mexico now is not a foreign war, but a breaking down of all the forces of law and order. The power of the Dictator is waning, and it seems that the men of character and influence in the capital and other large cities should be looking to the establishment of a temporary governing power which could command the world's respect and quiet the factional disputes. Such a provisional Government, of course, should represent all reputable parties.

THE BLACKMAILED CONTRACTORS

The asphalt industry may be unclean, and, as State Highway Commissioner CARLISLE says, it may have "left its grimy trail of graft across the continent." It may even have financed revolutions and overthrown Governments. But what has that to do with the approval by Commissioner CARLISLE of Mr. G. C. DIEHL for a place on his Highway Advisory Board, at the instance of the new Democratic leader of Erie County, Mr. BURGARD, who is a large contractor on the highways and Barge Canal?

According to Mr. BURGARD'S testimony, in the inquiry held by District Attorney WHITMAN before Chief Magistrate MCADOO on Friday, Mr. CARLISLE objected to DIEHL'S appointment, not with reference to his fitness to act as an adviser, but because the engineer had been a friend of FITZPATRICK, whom Gov. SULZER opposed and whom Mr. BURGARD supplanted as Democratic leader in Erie. Mr. BURGARD is a regular contributor to Democratic campaign funds. He denies that he knew of specifications drawn by the Highway Advisory Board so that bricks made by Mr. DIEHL'S company might be included, and that he knew that DIEHL was interested in bricks laid by Mr. BURGARD in the City of Buffalo.

We fear that Commissioner CARLISLE has been shortsighted. If the asphalt industry is bad, that does not deprive Mr. CARLISLE of his authority in deciding what the specifications for asphalt shall be. Yet GEORGE H. MCGUIRE admitted to Mr. WHITMAN that he had been trafficking with these specifications, coercing company after company with the implied threat that they would be excluded if they failed to contribute $5,000 each to the Democratic State Committee and give him 1 cent a gallon on all materials sold. "Because I had an interest in having natural asphalt used," MCGUIRE says, he used his influence in having the specifications changed to read as follows: "The base of this material shall "be a natural asphalt which, as found "in nature, is a solid or near-solid." He confessed that he had tried to bargain with the Warner-Quinlan Company on the basis of a $5,000 campaign contribution and a commission to himself, that the specification of natural solid asphalt should be changed to admit the liquid asphalt of this company. Mr. MCGUIRE testified that he was not only going about and doing these things to swell the funds of the Democratic State Committee and to line his own pocket, but that he is really in partnership with CHARLES F. MURPHY, Jr., nephew of Boss MURPHY of Tammany Hall, in the business of bonding State contractors; that, while ostensibly competitors, MCGUIRE and MURPHY split commissions on a large percentage of this business.

How could MCGUIRE, with his confessed relations as "bagman" of the Democratic State Committee and dispenser of official specifications on commission, have gained such power in Commissioner CARLISLE'S office? There is the possibility, of course, he had no power in dictating specifications. The fact of his reluctant confession remains; the fact that the Warner-Quinlan Company refused to pay the cash he demanded, and the fact that the official specifications exclude that company's product from use on the State roads.

Republican contractors who had been asked to give contributions to the Democratic fund followed these disclosures of Mr. MCGUIRE with testimony that they had given up the money, although they had never contributed to a Democratic campaign fund prior to the making of their State contracts. Contractor WELDMAN of Syracuse said that, while he did not wish to give the money and was not interested in the success of the Democratic Party in 1911 and 1912, the giving of it "was good business policy."

The asphalt industry may be an unclean thing, but the intimate relations between public official acts and the extorting of money for partisan and private purposes, as testified to by Mr. MCGUIRE and the up-State contractors, has a history of uncleanness in the politics of this city and State which antedates the birth of the asphalt industry. If Mr. CARLISLE had been vigilant and had not listened to political leaders, his department would not be defiled.

MONEY TO SPARE.

That our currency is now in superfluous supply appears by the fact that national bank notes were retired last week, and that we exported gold to five times the amount of reduction in bank notes. The exportation of gold is the way by which we reduce superfluous currency, since there is no other way to lessen our currency easily, quickly, and in necessary total. It would seem that the Treasury thinks that this is as it should be, for it issued an order to prevent the reduction of bank notes by using the bonds released as security for Treasury deposits. The Treasury cannot prevent the withdrawal of bonds if the banks wish, but it can lessen the banks' disposition to do so by making their holdings of 2 per cents unprofitable. But why should the Treasury do so? The more the banks are allowed to make use of their bonds in lawful ways, the more they will appreciate the bonds. The more the discretion and activities of the banks are checked in this respect, the greater the burden of the bonds on the banks. The effect of the operation would have been to reduce the currency, which is not wanted, and to substitute reserve money, which would have enabled the banks to enlarge their credits.

Why should the Treasury think that it knows better than the banks what is good for either the banks or the country? The asserted reason is that the Treasury considers the operation prejudicial to the Treasury's purpose in making deposits for crop-moving purposes. But the peak of the crop-moving strain passed without the banks taking the full amount offered by the Treasury. Why should the Treasury be concerned to press upon the banks of any section funds which they are backward about using? And why should the Treasury be anxious about keeping afloat currency which the country does not need? The reduction of the volume of idle currency to the end that it may not drift into Wall Street's uses, and be shaken out again in a little panic when wanted elsewhere for other uses, is one of the objects of the currency legislation now pending.

It is suggested that reduction of the currency might produce a crisis on the eve of currency legislation. The export of gold might have an even greater effect of that sort, and the ability of the banks to get Treasury deposits on security of bonds would strengthen them against such a contingency. The Treasury's action doubtless is well meant, but it would seem not well designed for the purpose asserted. It does not appear that the Treasury was asked to take this action, and volunteers usually earn their thanks hardly, even if they get any.

CHEAPER CABS.

As all the taxicab companies except one have now accepted the new ordinance and begun to do business on the new schedule, it is very likely that the one still dissatisfied company will soon find a way to accept the inevitable and take its share of the greatly increased traffic. New York at last has a cab system on a reasonable basis. One or two persons may ride in a taxicab one mile for 50 cents and two miles for 90 cents. Lower fares cannot be expected in Manhattan, and probably will not be demanded in the other boroughs.

There used to be an ordinance limiting cab fares to 50 cents a mile, but it has been a dead letter within recent memory. It is the business of every citizen who uses cabs, just as much as it is the business of the officers of the municipality, to see that the present law does not become a dead letter. Pay the legal fares, and when more is demanded report the extortion at once. Some of the taxicab men have declared that they cannot make any profits with the new rates. Expert evidence is against them. There will be a much greater demand for cabs.

THE SPOILS AND THE ISTHMUS.

We cannot bring ourselves to believe that in the long run President WILSON will consent to let the large force needed to administer the Panama Canal fall into the hands or under the control of the spoilsmen. Yet it is not to be denied that there is grave danger that the spoilsmen will try to seize this force and that they may in part and for a time succeed. The situation was described in our Panama dispatches yesterday morning. The work of the present Commission is drawing rapidly to a close, and the capable and trained men who have been engaged in it and have carried it to such a triumphant completion are being released. For the administration of the canal, for the railway work involved, for the continuation and extension of the contracts required, and for the civil government of the Canal Zone, a force of at least 5,000 will be needed. For the employment of these the Commission can have no authority unless it is granted by an Executive order in accordance with the Mann act. This order has not yet been issued.

In the meanwhile Mr. R. L. METCALFE, head of the Department of Civil Administration, has framed a plan for turning over the affairs of the zone to a commission of three, with a distribution of functions and a corresponding division of responsibility. We do not accuse Mr. METCALFE of an intention to serve the ends of office seekers in this plan. He is an inexperienced man, a protégé of Mr. BRYAN, educated in the Bryan school of politics and public service, and he may be quite sincere in thinking that his plan would lead to good results. But it is plain that such a scheme would instantly arouse the place-hunters and that they would descend in an army upon the unfortunate Commissioners, as they have been in the habit of doing at home. It would demand a stern sense of duty, a knack at handling attacks of this sort, a firmness and energy in resisting them, and intelligence in prosecuting public business that we have no right to expect from any appointees likely to be selected.

Why should President WILSON incur any such perils for the country or for his Administration? The system under which the work of building the canal and taking care of the immense force employed has been carried on is a very simple one, and it has been wonderfully successful. It has not only secured the completion of the tremendous task, but it has won for the United States the ungrudging praise of the entire world. Why not continue it? Why seek to replace it with a system that has not worked well at all when we have tried it at home, and that, if it fail in the Isthmus, as it is only too sure to do, will, at infinite cost and trouble, have to be changed?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

References Prove So Little. To the severe scolding recently given on this page by MARION HARLAND to housewives who employ domestic servants without looking up their references, or even insisting that they have any, another feminine correspondent has added cumulative and confirmative reprehension. None has taken pen in hand to deny the accusation or even to make the confession that is also avoidance.

A "case," therefore, is seemingly made out, but one not a housewife is reluctant to believe that those of the present day are as much inferior in wisdom and caution to their mothers and grandmothers as these harsh critics assert. Is it not possible that they both exaggerate the value possessed by the so-called reference—or ever possessed by it?

Whether or not a domestic servant gives satisfaction to her mistress is very largely decided by their temperamental compatibility. Not infrequently the "terror" of one "place" is the "angel" of another, and even the question of competency is of relative rather than absolute determination, for the expectations and demands of mistresses differ widely. So often has it been found that a servant with the best of recommendations, oral as well as documentary, would not do at all, that it is little wonder that many mistresses shun the toil of investigating an applicant's past and hopefully content themselves with trusting to present impressions as to looks and manners.

Most men get most of their employes in that way, and though, of course, admission to a shop or office is one thing, and inclusion in family life another, yet the possible consequences of a mistake in the former case are different rather than less.

If the housewives did but know it, the "new psychology" is ready to supply them with tests for application to servants that would give much more and better information than does any "reference," no matter how carefully looked up. Mistresses, however, are as little likely to use these tests as the servants are to submit to them, the one being about as much prejudiced as the other against science and machinery in the kitchen, and equally disdainful of "newfangled notions." They have their reward—an inexhaustible topic of conversation, evidently enjoyable.

An Argument Far from Complimentary. In defense of an appeal for more money to spend in keeping up the royal game preserves, the Bavarian Minister of Finance last week told the legislators holding the pursestrings that States suffered less from the devotion of their Kings to the hunting of beasts and birds than from—well, from indulgence in chases of another and less innocent sort to which not a few royal personages, if history can be trusted, have been ardently inclined.

This, being an indubitable statement, was not denied by Bavaria's assembled economists, but one of them ungraciously insisted that, while hunting might be less expensive than some other things, it yet should be done in moderation when times are as hard and taxes as heavy as they are now.

The outcome of this interesting debate is not revealed by the cable dispatch which contains its beginning. Presumably the Prime Minister has obtained, or will get, the increase of the civil list for which he pleaded, but one cannot refrain from wondering what impression his argument made on the King in whose behalf it was offered. There was a certain cynicism, a certain irreverence for royalty, in proclaiming that a monarch not as naughty as monarchs can be and often have been is about as good as subjects could reasonably expect.

Such logic as that is not well calculated to perpetuate such little faith in the divine right of Kings as survives in Europe, and Prime Ministers might well leave its use to other people.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The animadversions and aspersions cast upon my well-matured plans for the unification of Mexico by Fred L. Kleinschmidt in THE TIMES of Monday are wholly unmerited, and, as coming from a civilian, I can pardon them. Of course, I understand that if, after the United States troops under my command had invaded Mexico and united that distressed and divided nation against the common foe, they, the said troops, withdrew without fatal fighting to the north bank of the Rio Grande to wait and see how long the Mexicans would remain united, it would furnish fine food for foreign cartoonists. But would not this country be willing to make the sacrifice for the great principle of peace and unity involved? Then, later, when those same cartoonists realized what our grand and glorious nation had done on behalf of a suffering sister nation, would they not be sorry enough for their thoughtless gibes and jeers and hasten to offer all the reparation in their power by making pictures of us far more praiseworthy than those they had made in deprecation of our delicate diplomacy? Indeed, they would, for I know cartoonists and am assured of the deep and pure feeling that lies behind their apparently cynical cartoons.

Mr. Kleinschmidt asks if the Mexicans would allow our invasion to remain unavenged. I should hope not, because in avenging our apparent insult to the dignity of that haughty people they would further unite themselves in a harmonious homogeneity utterly beyond any ordinary means of unifying diversified political elements. Mr. Kleinschmidt is also quite right in asserting that our army would prevent their trying to invade the United States, but it would not mean fight, as he says. Under my direction our army would pursue only Fabian tactics, which are not at all mortuary in their results. "Fabius Maximus fatalibus minimus" was a well-known Roman maxim, to which I call the attention of Mr. Kleinschmidt. My plan of action would be to lure the Mexican hosts far into the interior of Texas, dallying with them as they went along, until I had them where I wished them, when I would load them on an excursion train and send them all back to Mexico in picnic form.

New Jersey's Opportunity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES, in an editorial article under the caption, "The Hudson Wagon Tunnel," speaking of the fact that only private capital could be secured to build such a roadway, says: "New York City built the bridges to Long Island to keep its population within its boundaries and increase its tax list. Bridging the Hudson would give an outlet for New York population to New Jersey and would increase the New Jersey tax list at the cost of New York's. That New Jersey alone would contribute funds as New York did is more than doubtful." Very considerably more than doubtful, but if New Jersey were alive to the possibilities of a free wagon tunnel connecting her available unoccupied territory with the tremendous population of New York City, the $11,000,000 estimated cost of the tunnel would be put up within twenty-four hours and the tunnel would be built just as fast as human means could build it. But there are too many people existing in New Jersey who are Jerseyites yet, and they have not waked up.

An active, wideawake people as close to New York City as New Jersey is would have had a wagon tunnel under the Hudson, or a bridge over it, twenty-five years ago, and the State to-day would have twice its present population and a dozen times its wealth. In all its existence New Jersey has done nothing to secure the New York overflow except to wait for it to come her way because it was the nearest way.

Homes for Working Girls.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Too much cannot be said in praise of the effort to place working girls' homes in various parts of our city which care for young women, giving them comfortable quarters and good food for a comparatively small return.

We have many places of this kind, and they are nearly always well filled with young business women from every walk in life who are making their own way—stenographers, store clerks, seamstresses, &c.—and without them it would be a problem what to do to make ends meet to many a girl earning a small salary.

There is one mistake made, however, in nearly all of these places, and that is that after a girl reaches a certain age, (usually 35,) she is excluded. What more deplorable! It does not seem just nor kind that a woman should be made to feel that even a "home" door should be closed to her at the age of 35 or 40, when at this age she finds it doubly hard to make her way elsewhere, especially in the business world.

Socialism and Savings.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There are so many millions or billions of dollars invested in insurance in this and other countries, not to mention the other millions or billions in the savings banks, that one feels tempted to ask the Socialist regenerators of society, who so glibly tell of the "revolution" which impends, what disposition they would make of these funded properties.

Getting a thing done after planning it out is not always the easiest thing in the world. Socialism is to be the one cure-all for whatever is wrong—yet will the people to be so gravely affected by the new device in Government willingly give up the security of the savings banks and insurance funds?

Some politician recently invented "crackpots" as a term of derision for some other politicians. Are we to use the word for the would-be social engineers whose only practical plan is destruction of what ages of thought and experiment have evolved? Is society incapable of getting rid of the rats in its barns without burning barns and contents?

Mr. Waldo's Qualifications.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reference to Mr. Mitchel's remark regarding the appointment of a new Police Commissioner, that the man who fills that place must be strong, independent, and must have business ability, I think our present Police Commissioner Waldo can vouch for all of these qualifications. Of course he has made some mistakes; in fact, all of us make mistakes in our lives.

OPPOSES WOMEN'S VOTE.

E. P. Wheeler Thinks Suffrage Is Incompatible with Domestic Duties.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My old friend Prof. Fagnani appealed to me publicly at the meeting yesterday afternoon which welcomed Gen. Booth. Permit me to answer him through your columns.

We who stand for the conservation of home and family and oppose political suffrage for women take this stand because we honor woman and appreciate the essential part she has to play in bearing and rearing children, and teaching them the lessons of duty, chastity, and self-restraint which form character. We believe firmly what Gen. Booth said to-day: "Moral power, heart power, is the great power. The world power, the love power, is the enemy of our littleness; the antidote for our selfishness."

Therefore we honor Catharine Booth as we do her husband, whom we delight to call "The General." We honor their noble son and daughter who were on the platform to-day. So also we honor Joan of Arc. These exceptional women are called to exceptional duties and responsibilities. But Joan of Arc never appealed to French women to draw the sword for France. She knew they were more useful at home. And the Salvationists, while giving scope to the special devotion of their officers and soldiers, have always taught the sacred duty and privilege of the mother to care for home and bring up children.

And we know that political activity, and the responsibility of the suffrage are, for most women, incompatible with domestic duties. The mother cannot give her whole heart to her husband and children and take active part in the exciting game of politics.

What has happened in Colorado will happen in all the suffrage States. The good women, who are wives and mothers (as four out of five women of voting age are,) mostly stay at home and attend to their duties there. The selfish, sly female politicians devote themselves to office seeking and advocate every fad that catches the popular ear. We got no help from them when we advocated Civil Service reform in Colorado. An amendment to the charter of Denver, requiring the establishment of the merit system, was voted down in that city this very year by 6,600 majority.

Let me conclude with the words of Gen. William Booth:

"I had a good mother. I loved my mother. From infancy to manhood I lived in her. Home was not home to me without her. And yet one of the regrets that has followed me to the present hour is that I did not sufficiently value the treasure while I possessed it, and that I did not, with sufficient tenderness and assiduity at the time, attempt the impossible task of repaying the immeasurable debt I owed to that mother's love."

MARTIN LUTHER'S CHARACTER.

Charges of Immorality Said to Lack Real Proof.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having attended Mgr. Joseph H. McMahon's lecture on Martin Luther, you will permit me to make a few remarks anent the reverend lecturer's statements as to Luther's morals and moral teachings. He declared the true biography of Luther had still to be written, because not until Denifle had uncovered Luther's immorality had his life and work been rightly understood. The lecture was in substance nothing more than a restatement of Denifle's and Grisar's charges against Luther. Denifle's proof he declared incontestable, yet stated that a great controversy had been waged over the charges made by him against Luther.

Far from being incontestable, Denifle's charges and supposed proof have been challenged by some of the most eminent German scholars and Luther specialists. As to Luther's "vulgar, vile and immoral language," they have pointed out that the social conventions and mode of language in Luther's day were so far removed from the pruriency of a later age that it would be the height of injustice to apply our present standard to the writers of that age; that Denifle had failed to perceive the humor in many of the alleged obscene remarks and damaging self-confessions made by Luther, that he ignored the fact of Luther's firm conviction that Papacy is the Antichrist, and, finally, that he puts the worst construction on words of Luther, some of which have not even been deciphered with certainty. Moreover, the alleged proof of vulgarity and vileness in Luther is to a large extent taken from Luther's Table Talks, whose authenticity is very doubtful for more reasons than that they have come down to us second and third hand.

As to Luther's own life and acts, the lecturer begged to note that his immorality did not begin until after he broke away from Rome. And as for Luther's life from that day on, we should like to note the fact that it was spent in the strongest lime-light of publicity, and that no one, not even Denifle, has been able to point to one immoral act committed by him.

To those interested in the question of Luther's morality and moral teachings, we would recommend reading not only Denifle and Grisar, but also the little book by Boehmer, "Luther im Lichte der neueren Forschung," "Luther in the light of the more recent researches." To my mind the psychological problem is not that presented by Mgr. McMahon, but this: How, in view of all that Luther has taught and the character of his work, and the results thereof, as seen in the entire history of Protestantism, can any intelligent and fair mind make bold to assert that Luther was wholly and consciously immoral in his principles and in his life and all his acts?

WILLIAM F. SCHOENFELD,
Pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Immanuel Church.

New York, Nov. 20, 1913.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your news columns to-day you give a partial report of a lecture by Mgr. Joseph H. McMahon on Martin Luther. It says: "The great reformer was a thoroughly immoral man."

If this be true, by what law of earth or heaven did Martin Luther assail "evils in the body of the Church, which in that day was sunk in iniquity and corruption"? Did Satan fight against Satan?

Discussion of Vice Topics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is like finding an oasis in the desert to see a great paper like THE TIMES come out squarely in regard to the looseness of moral thought at the present time. I think that there is no room to question the fact that the prevalent loose talk among young people is leading many girls to perdition.

Even where they remain virtuous, they get a depraved sort of pleasure in discussing with men questions that our mothers would hardly talk of in the family circle. It is taking the bloom off of the maidens of the day. One hears the up-to-date girl talk in a way that would have stamped her as "fast" twenty-five years ago.

I feel very strongly about this matter, as I see bright and lovely girls who belong to splendid families let the present tendency take hold of them. I fear that the loose ideas of the higher English families in regard to morals are the ones taking hold of the middle and lower classes in this country.

EXCLUDED RHODES MEN.

Freshmen Athletes Properly Barred for Age, Oxonian Says.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES gives prominence to a cablegram stating that the Oxford University Athletic Club has passed two resolutions regulating the conditions with which undergraduates must comply who desire to compete at the various athletic meetings held under its authority. To one cognizant with the facts these resolutions afford no grounds for the criticisms and innuendoes with which they have been received here. They are easy of comprehension and seem to have the very same basis and purpose as those which were agreed on several years ago between the leading universities of this country.

Several old Oxonians, myself included, had the pleasure this week of meeting Dr. George R. Parkin, the Executive Secretary of the Rhodes Trust. When the subject arose as to the respective ages at which American Rhodes scholars and English public school boys entered Oxford, it was stated that the average age of the Englishman was 18½ years, and that of the American 19½ years, a difference of one year between them. This seniority in age gives a great advantage at the dawn of manhood, even more than the disadvantage it becomes in later years. The fact of having received a previous university education in this country must necessarily provide a superior class as freshmen at Oxford; and this is attested in another direction, because a Rhodes scholar after matriculating is relieved from taking the first university examination known as "responsions," or "smalls," which is obligatory on every one else, even on English undergraduates who have won open scholarships before "going up."

I wish to deny emphatically that either of them gives the slightest grounds for any aspersion on the fair play so cordially accorded as of right to Rhodes scholars by their fellow Oxonians.

The first resolution states that the "Freshmen's Sports" shall be confined to those who have never been at any other university before going to Oxford. Now, knowing how great—I might almost say how arduous—a feature of 'Varsity life in this country is comprised by athletics, and that according to Cecil Rhodes's instructions athletics are to count as 25 per cent. in the qualifications of every one desirous of applying for a scholarship under his Foundation, the above resolution is not unfair to the Rhodes scholars. In fact, its absence placed the other freshmen who had never received any special training in athletics at a disadvantage at the outset of their career by their having to compete with older men of recognized athletic ability.

Every Rhodes scholar is as free as any other member of his college to keep up his training by entering into the athletic competitions held yearly by each college, as distinct from the 'Varsity, and to carry off, if he wins, cups as trophies of his prowess. I think that every good sportsman—and none are better than the Rhodes scholars, many of whom are my intimate and valued friends here—will recognize in this resolution an earnest desire to be just to all alike. They, like Lancelot, would sooner

Let the younger and unskilled go by
To win his honour and to make his name, seeing that after the freshmen's year every undergraduate will meet each other on a "fair field with no favor."

Then, taking the second resolution, it no more "hits" or "bars" the Rhodes scholars, according as the fancy of each newspaper has termed it, than any other undergraduate. It states that only in the annual 'Varsity sports—and we have seen it does not refer to those held by the individual colleges, twenty-two in number—no one will be allowed to compete who is over 24 years old. Now, taking the accepted average age of a Rhodes scholar on matriculation to be 20 years, and adding to it his term of residence which lasts for three years only, he is only 23 years old when he "goes down," and is then still one year under the above limit.

Passbooks for Servants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Germany every applicant for domestic service must register at the Police Department, which gives her a passbook. This passbook is handed to every employer, who keeps it in her possession during the entire length of the maid's service, and at the end of same writes in it such comment of the maid's services as they deserve. The result is that every prospective employer demands and scrutinizes this "police book" before even considering an applicant for domestic service.

Such a method, together with more regularized work for the house servants, more personal liberty for them, and the high wages which they already enjoy, would give us a class of girls that would make the housewifely attacks of nervous breakdown less frequent.

Admission to High Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A much-needed reform has at last been undertaken affecting our high schools, their studies and terms of admission. One of the questionable means adopted to fill the "high" schools was to admit graduates of elementary schools on the certificate of the Principal and the "approval" of the District Superintendent. This approval was never withheld.

So the honest educator-Principals sent hordes of pupils to "high" schools, sometimes every member of the 8B class going to one or other high school. The Hanue report says that "graduation from 8B is no proof that the pupils know anything accurately," so that half the incoming hordes left or were put out during the first month or two, necessarily.

HER TABLE.

With a flawless top of onyx of a clear and lovely green;
And with pride she showed the figures on the dealer's printed label,
And she set it in the parlor by a gorgeous golden screen.
Did she put a vase upon it, just one vase of marble fluty,
With some long-stemmed roses in it to enhance the color scheme,
Or a lamp with amber fringes, or a dainty Dresden beauty,
Or a trinket wrought of silver and the smith's immortal dream?

Nay! she spread it with a cover made of plush in red and yellow,
With a tinseled satin border in a violent shade of blue;
And she's piled it up with baubles of the kind to make a fellow
Think a peddler was displaying all his gaudy stock to view.
Pictures, boxes, vases, purchased in the 10-cent stores, and trashy
Small contraptions tied with ribbons, and with paper posies gay,
Painted sea shells, china poodles, flimsy gew-gaws cheap and flashy,
Hide the onyx slab forever, but, alas! it's Mary's way.

CITY OFFICIALS SEE PLANS FOR GROWTH

Exhibition Showing How Future Needs May Be Met Open to the Public To-day.

COMMISSION WANTED HERE

To Study and Guide Developments of Transportation, Buildings, and Parks—A Wealth of Material.

The exhibits collected by the City Planning Commission and the Heights of Buildings Commission, in the main exhibition room and lower corridors of the Public Library, were put on view yesterday for a private inspection to which Mayor Kline and other city officials were invited. The purpose of the exhibition which opens to the public today and will be continued until Dec. 7, is to show the tax payers what can be accomplished by foresight in the development of a city and prove to them that city planning is one of the best investments that a municipality can make. There is no permanent city planning commission in New York, although such commissions exist in other cities, and it is the hope of the men behind the present exhibition that the incoming administration will see the wisdom of providing for such a body.

The exhibition at the Public Library is one of the most comprehensive ever collected and is the first to be arranged by subjects instead of by cities. All of the principal cities of more than 10,000 population in the United States and many in foreign countries were asked to contribute photographs, plans and drawings of civic developments and so much material was obtained that it was possible to place but one-tenth of it on exhibition at one time. Secretary of State Bryan co-operated in the movement to the extent of sending a special cablegram to Consular stations asking that all possible aid be given to the commission. Borough President George McAneny was the leading spirit in making the exhibition possible.

The exhibits by the Heights of Buildings Committeee, composed of Mr. McAneny, Lewis H. Pounds, President of the Borough of Brooklyn; and Cyrus C. Miller, President of the Borough of the Bronx, include much of the material which will be incorporated in the report to be submitted by the committee to the Board of Estimate on Dec. 1. The three main parts of this section of the general exhibition are:

Perspectives and photographs illustrating existing conditions among tall office buildings and their effect on light conditions and street congestion.

An illustration by a number of typical examples of the existing height, area and type of occupancy regulations in various cities of Europe and America.

Maps of the five boroughs of New York illustrating the distribution, throughout every part of every borough, of a number of different aspects of property use.

It is understood that the committee will recommend the regulation of the height of buildings in some sections of the city with the end in view of preventing the erection of great skyscrapers which prove a detriment to the values of existing properties. Why this is desirable is one of the points shown in the maps and drawings.

The contention of the exhibitors is that the time has come for New York to "get together" in its further development and that all departments should work in co-ordination in bringing about improvements.

Exhibits take up by means of photographs, statistics, and maps from many cities the relation of transit to the work of the city; its independence with all other functions of the city; the relation of recration centres to transportation, subways, elevated railroads, street and interurban railways, auto buses and motor trucks and the design of railroad and trolley terminals. Another section treats of the railroads, another of the waterways, another with the streets. An interesting exhibit is that on housing, which shows by pictures and statistics from cities all over this country and abroad the relation of housing to places of work and of play, the relation of housing to transit, the value and method of housing surveys, the effects of congestion, types of houses and tenements, contrasting views of good and bad housing conditions, &c. Civic structures are treated in the same thorough manner as are the parks, recreation centres, and many other subjects.

In an explanation of the exhibits Secretary George B. Ford had this to say: "City planning would first investigate all of the physical ills of a community; it would diagnose them; it would determine all those matters which need improvement; it would determine in consideration of all points of view the relative urgency of the various needs; it would plan in view of this a consistent programme of procedure; it would work out solutions for all of these problems, keeping a due relation and proportion among them; it would meet the peculiar needs of the community and preserve the city's individuality; it would concentrate on the various problems and get tangible results. City planning would so model the setting of the life of the community with regard to health, safety, convenience and comfort as to make it the ideal place in which to live. Than this, there is nothing of which a city may more justly be proud."

WHITE HOUSE ROOM FILLED WITH GIFTS

PUBLIC NOT TO SEE THEM

Miss Wilson and Mr. Sayre at Church with Her Parents—Dinner at Manslon To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Miss Jessie Wilson and Mr. Sayre, according to their custom, went to the Central Presbyterian Church together this morning, accompanied by the President and Mrs. Wilson. Before returning to the White House Mr. Sayre and his fiancée made a short call on Miss Nevin, at the Shoreham Hotel.

Following luncheon Miss Wilson and Mr. Sayre went for a walk, later Miss Wilson received one or two informal visits from intimate friends or relatives already here for the wedding ceremony.

The wedding presents, which almost fill one of the largest of the second floor apartments in the White House, were on view to-day to intimate friends of the family, and will be to-morrow, but it is understood they will not be shown on the day of the wedding. Scores of presents continue to arrive at the White House by express, parcel post and messenger.

One of the gifts received late Saturday evening was a wonderful specimen of fur rug of vicuna skin in pure white, and the finest quality, a gift from the Peruvian Minister and Mme. Pezet. The rug, mounted to order in Washington from the pelt imported directly from the mountain slopes of the Andes is oblong in shape and quite large enough to serve as the central portion of the bridal platform. It probably will be used at the wedding. The vicuna usually being a tan or pale yellow, a pure white specimen of this soft fur is exceptionally rare.

A huge white bear rug is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wallace. Another gift received yesterday was a large and very handsome silver vase from the Admiral of the Navy and Mrs. Dewey.

While Miss Wilson has recived many fine gifts, the exaggerated statements concerning their value are most distasteful to her. The most valuable gift in the entire collection is the diamond and platinum lavaliere presented by the members of the House of Representatives. A close second to this is the silver service from the members of the Senate. Mr. Sayre's family, including several step sisters and his mother sent a complete set of small silver and a silver tea service. Silver plates, compotes and bowls of various sizes have been received by the gross, rather than by the dozen, one of the handsomest individual gifts was a set of service plates from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie.

A Colonial mirror is a late addition to the gift room. It came from a cousin of the bridegroom, and has been in the family for five generations. There also is a set of old Roman lamps in silver purchased by the Rev. Robert Nevin during his residence in Rome, a gift from Miss Alice Nevin, one of the two aunts of Mr. Sayre.

The relatives now here or expected to-morrow are Mrs. Robert P. Linderman, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Cleaver, Prof. and Mrs. W. H. Chandler, and Miss Clara Sayre, all of Bethlehem, Penn.; Mrs. James F. Randolph of Morristown, N. J.; Mrs. and Mr. Rutherfurd and Mr. and Mrs. Parker Nevin of Pittsburgh; Miss Alice Jenkins of New York; Miss Charlotte Apple of Lancaster, Penn.; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wilson of Tennessee, and Mrs. Katharine Woodrow of Columbia, S. C.

The hospitalities to-morrow incidental to the wedding will include a dinner at the White House complimentary to the mother of the bridegroom and other relatives, while the bridal party is being entertained aboard the Mayflower.

There will be a luncheon by the Secretary of State complimentary to Dr. William Grenfell, who will arrive to-morrow to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Butler. Mrs. Blanche Nevin will entertain at breakfast at the Shoreham when Mr. Sayre will be present to meet some of the friends of his family.

500 MAKE A PRESENT.

Factory Workers Send Miss Wilson an Embroidered Skirt.

Five hundred women and girls employed in a skirt and waist factory in West Twenty-first Street will send three of their number to Washington to-day as a committee to present to Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, a white linen skirt, in the manufacture of which each of the 500 has taken part. The skirt is beautifully embroidered by hand, and bears the initials "J. W. S." The workers in the factory have been busy making it almost since the announcement of Miss Wilson's engagement to Francis B. Sayre.

The committee, composed of Maggie Rickers, an instructor; Becky Kronfeld, a presser, and Mrs. C. G. Hill, director of the social service work in the factory, will leave this afternoon for Washington. They were selected by a vote of the 500 employes. The gift is in recognition of Miss Wilson's efforts to advance social welfare work.

Catholic Protective Society Concert.

The annual concert of the Catholic Protective Society of the Archdiocese of New York was given last night at the Hippodrome. There was a large audience. Those who contributed to the programme were Mme. Frances Alda of the Metropolitan Opera House, Orville Harrold of the Hammerstein forces, Miss Ruby Helder, Gutla Cassini, 'cellist; Ida Davinoff, violinist, and Percy Hemus, Forge, pianist. An unscheduled appearance was that of Monolito Funes, a twelve-year-old Spanish pianist from the Canary Islands. He played on a previous visit here for Cardinal Farley, who, it is understood, asked that he be placed on last night's programme. The Cardinal, attended by many prelates, was present last night, occupying a box decorated with the Papal colors and the American flag.

HORSE SHOW WINNERS.

Judge Moore Leads with 21 'Blues,' Including 4 Championships.

With the close of the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden the high-bred equine beauties will go into Winter quarters for three months, and then will begin preparations for the 1914 Summer campaign. Before sundown yesterday every horse had been removed from the Garden stalls, and the big building this week will be given over to the Old Glory horse sales. As was expected, Judge William H. Moore swept the heavy-harness classes, capturing twenty-one blue ribbons, including four championships and an equal number of reserves.

Perhaps the most notable victory was that of E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, whose light-harness horses were the sensation of their classes. Mr. Stotesbury was represented by but two roadsters, Ruby and Lasca, but he was successful in five out of the six classes in which he exhibited, his only other defeat being in the single roadster championship, in which Ruby lost by a small margin to J. Malcolm Forbes, for which the Russian Government has offered $40,000.

Another notable performance for newcomers was that of Miss Anne Vauclain of Philadelphia. Miss Vauclain, who exhibits under the name of Broadlawn Farms, carried back to Philadelphia twelve ribbons, including five firsts, as the result of her initial invasion of National Horse Show circles. Glen Riddle Farms, the property of Samuel D. Riddle, was also successful in the jumping classes. Miss Loula Long of Kansas City was singularly unfortunate in being compelled to drive against the champions of the Moore stables. Her horses were placed second eight times, while only one blue rosette rewarded her driving displays.

President A. G. Vanderbilt said to-day the show ranks with the most successful ever held by the association. He does not fear the invasion of the auto, and said there were lots of good horses exhibited and plenty of enthusiasm. He predicted a more successful show next year. Among the cavalry officers who competed as representatives of the United States great praise was bestowed on the French officers, as well as on other foreign competitors.

It was announced during the last night of the exhibition that E. B. McLean of Washington, D. C., had re-engaged Charles Barrie as manager of his stable in place of Jack Donnelly. Mr. McLean will dispose of his harness horses and purchase a big stable of saddlers and hunters, including many importations. Dick Donnelly will ride for Mr. McLean at all the shows.

Morton W. Smith, who as a boy in knickerbockers rode the imported pony Merrylegs and won a blue at the first National Horse Show in 1883, is to establish a stud for the breeding of high-quality hunters and saddle horses on a farm he has just bought at Southport, Conn. It has a frontage of 1,000 feet on the old Boston Post Road, and there is a large house, with barns and other outbuildings. E. T. Bedford, who formerly exhibited Hildreth and other harness horses at the Garden, has his country house and stock farm near Southport, where he was born.

The Hanleys, Walter and Gerald T., who for beginners at the National Horse Show had an encouraging success in the Tuesday class, which they won with Brother Jed, and in several heavy harness and saddle horse classes, are sons of the late James Hanley of Providence, who bred trotters as a recreation and was the principal stockholder in the Narragansett Park Racing Association, where trotting and racing meetings were held until an anti-track betting bill became law in Rhode Island. At the Hanley dispersal sale in the Garden a few seasons ago the reserve limit was not reached on the best stallions and mares, and they are now the foundation stock of the present Hanley stud for the breeding of driving and riding horses.

Although the owner of the greatest string of harness horses in the country, Judge Moore is only an occasional exhibitor at the shows aside from the annual fixtures of New York, London, and Richmond, England. Few, however, get more enjoyment from their harness horses than the Judge, for throughout August, September, and October he is on the roads near his country home at Pride's Crossing, Mass., two or three times a day with a different four-in-hand team, while when in town he drives as regularly in Central Park.

In the list of winners Canada leads foreign nations with nine victories, while France fills second place with five. America did not capture any of the international events, but the army officers of the country secured seven ribbons, four of which were blue. The leading prize winners follow:

MUSIC NOTES.

Mme. Beatrice La Palme, a new soprano at the Century Opera House, will alternate with Lois Ewell in the title role of "Thais," which begins at the Century to-morrow night.

Randall Hargreaves, an English baritone, gave a recital at the British Imperial Club on Saturday afternoon.

The American Guild of Organists offers a prize of $100 for the best organ composition by any American composer, in one of two prescribed forms. Manuscripts signed with a pen name, the same nama to be on the outside of a sealed envelope containing the real name and address of the composer, must be sent on or before Mar. 15, 1914, to John Hyatt Brewer, 88 South Oxford Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. The latter is Chairman of the Committee of Judges for the contest, the others being William C. Carl and Clarence Dickinson.

STUDY SINGING HERE, ADVISES LOIS EWELL

BAD ENVIRONMENT ABROAD

Soprano Tells of Trying Experiences in the Early Days of Her Vocal Career.

About ten years ago Lois Ewell was Captain of the champion girls' basket ball team of Erasmus Hall High School, Brooklyn, and to-day she is a soprano prima donna in grand opera at the Century Theatre. Her work in these years of transition from school to the lyric stage, it was learned yesterday by a TIMES reporter who had a talk with the singer, has given Miss Ewell some decided views on what the American girl who desires to study singing should do and what she should avoid.

"According to my way of thinking," said Miss Ewell, "no girl should go to Europe to study singing. In the first place, she will find no better teachers there than she can get right here in this country, and this becomes increasingly true every day. There are just as many 'fakers over there, and not in a thousand years could we hope to rival the atmosphere of intrigue, chicanery, and deceit which has fastened on the art in the older countries.

"And on the moral or ethical side there is more danger. Girls are brought over into an environment they would never meet with at home, and for the girl who is alone in Europe, and acquires as friends generally only those who study with her and their friends, this often results very unfortunately. How often do girls make all sorts of sacrifices and accept others from their family and relations to get abroad, where they think their only salvation lies! When the crash comes—and their going abroad has often made it possible from directions that would never have existed at home—they are just so much worse off.

"Of late, realizing that our teachers can no longer be ignored, many believers in European training have fallen back to saying that it is indispensable to get the European 'environment.' I have only just finished with two and a half years of that environment, and I can unhesitatingly say that it is not fit for the healthy-minded American girl. A certain amount of experience can be gained in any art or business by going out of your own rut and seeing what other people are doing. From this viewpoint an European study has an advantage over a native of a European country to come over here and learn from us what she could, but to say that it is indispensable is nonsense.

"Whatever success I may have gained is the result of American teaching and experience on the American stage, and I suppose from that viewpoint my activities might interest some American girls who are studying. I never set foot in Europe until after I had appeared here in many grand operas and had finished my vocal training. When I say finished I mean I had worked out my tone production until all had been done that could be in developing my voice. We can always learn, and I study just as hard now as ever I did.

One Song in Four Years.

"Luckily my first teacher, Edmund J. Meyer, was not the kind to tell you he could make a prima donna out of you in two years. As a mater of fact, he worked just one year getting six tones placed properly, instead of in my throat, as I have said they were. During the whole four years that I worked with him, he gave me just one song, and that song involved a voice principle which he was illustrating.

"My first singing engagement was on the road in support of Fritzi Scheff for twelve weeks. Then I was engaged by Weber & Fields for a burlesque of 'Lohengrin' they did with Maurice Farkoa and Lillian Blauvelt. I understudied Miss Blauvelt and sang the part of Ortrud. This was a contralto part, as in the original, and I did not have a chance to do much. When the burlesque was taken off the conductor, Clarence Rogerson, asked me what I was going to do, and I said going back to New York to study. He asked me how I would like to sing grand opera in English.

"'The dream of my life,' I said. 'But I don't know any of them.'

"He said he would write to the Castle Square Opera Company, which was to open in Boston in June, and tell them about me. I took him at his word and find out what a few of the first operas were, so that I could study them.

"He did recommend me, asking for an eight weeks' contract. They replied that they knew nothing about this woman, but that I could have a week's trial, and told me to prepare Elsa. I was and still am a novice in opera starting out with Elsa. And I didn't even know the opera. However, I set myself to it, and worked ten hours a day learning the rôle.

"Then, ten days before I was to go to Boston to rehearse, I received a telegram saying that I was to sing Marguerite in "Faust" instead. Little did they know what that, to them, trifling change, meant to me. So I started after Marguerite.

"I shall never forget my first few days in Boston. The other members of the company were old stagers, who could have sung their parts in their sleep, and the idea of coming to rehearsals for the benefit of this newcomer did not appeal to them. So they didn't come. My only rehearsals were with the stage manager, a charming old gentleman, whose kindness I will never forget. He drilled me in the stage business and then loaned me the prompt book, and I worked feverishly over entrances, exits, benches, and castle stairways that existed only in my imagination.

Prostrated by Reaction.

"The morning after my first appearance I could not get out of bed, I was so prostrated by the reaction that had followed my experience. I did not even have life enough to send for the papers to see what the critics had said. One of them was kind enough to devote two and a half columns to the performance, and he said that he couldn't tell much about my voice, because I had probably allowed the histrionic gifts which he thought I certainly had to interfere with the vocal performance. There was nothing histrionic the matter with my voice, I assure you. It was an unadulterated case of stage fright of the worst kind.

"That was in 1907. At the conclusion of the engagement I returned to New York and Mr. Savage engaged me for the rôle of the Ambassador's wife in 'The Merry Widow.' One day they suddenly notified me that Ethel Jackson could not sing and I would have to take the title rôle, although I was not up in the part. I rehearsed the dances with Mr. Brian that afternoon and appeared the same evening. Later, when Miss Jackson left the company, I appeared regularly in the principal rôle.

"The next year I went to Cleveland for eight weeks of grand opera, and in the Spring of that year I sang for Mr. Aborn for the first time. The Winter of 1909 I again sang for the Aborns as well as at some symphony concerts in the West, and in the Spring of 1910 I sang 'Thais' for the first time in English under their management in Boston.

"It was after I had had this much experience that I went abroad. In 1910 I went to Florence and coached in Italian operas with Lombardi and Vaniani. Then I went to Paris, where I studied with Percy Hasiam, d'Aubigny, and Gaillard, and to Berlin, where I worked with Franz Emmerich. All of them said the same thing, that would have had taught me my tone production knew his business and I could do nothing better than go right on in the way I had been going. That was one for America. Though I am glad of the experiences I had in these two and a half years, I am sure the same instruction could be duplicated right here in this country. We are building up a school of opera and singing in this country that will soon make us entirely independent of the Old World except in the way of healthy exchange of views, even in the eyes of those who will not now be convinced, and one of the surest signs of this is the new public that has been built up by the organization with which I am connected. The same scheme will be repeated in other large cities, and no one can foretell how rapid the growth will be.

"In the meantime I would tell the girls who are studying singing, and the men too, for that matter, not to be impressed by the foreign singers who deride American methods and America as a place for instruction. As a rule they are the product of some entirely negligible foreign teacher, and have succeeded by the power of their own gifts, rather than his teaching or their 'environment.'"

METROPOLITAN CONCERT.

Bori, Murphy, and Gilly the Soloists of First Sunday Programme.

The first of the Sunday concerts was given at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, with Lucrezia Bori, Lambert Murphy, and Dinh Gilly as soloists, and the orchestra under the baton of Richard Hageman. Although the house was comfortably filled, there was not as large a crowd as usually turns out for these concerts.

Miss Bori sang an aria from Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" in the first part of the programme, and one from "Don Pasquale" of Donizetti in the second. In each she was very successful, the audience insisting on an encore in each case, and getting its wish for the only two occasions of the evening. Mr. Gilly sang the "Vision Fugitive" from Massenet's "Herodiade," and the "Magical Mirror" aria from "The Tales of Hoffmann." It was the baritone's first appearance of the season and found him in good voice and singing with power. Lambert Murphy sang "Voir Griséldis," from Massenet's "Griséldis," very effectively, but it was not a number that appealed strongly to the Sunday night audience. The orchestra played the overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Grieg's better known "Peer Gynt" suite, Chabrier's "Rhapsody Espana," and the Ride of the Valkyries. Mr. Hageman conducted carefully and capably, and obtained some very good effects, notably in the Grieg suite and the Valkyries number.

WANTED FULL AMOUNT BACK

Ticket Purchaser Arrested at Palace Theatre—Goes Free in Court.

Herman Wangrow, a manufacturer of 69 Chrystia Street, bought a ticket for the Palace Theatre from a speculator last night. When Wangrow offered the ticket for admission it was not honored and it was explained to him that in the war that was being waged on the ticket speculators no tickets bought from such men would be accepted at the door. The management offered the face value of the ticket, but Wangrow would not accept that, and said he wanted either to be admitted or to be paid the full price he had paid the speculator. The management refused to do either. Wangrow then started to protest and was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was taken to the West Forty-seventh Street station.

When the case reached the Men's Night Court it developed that the theatre management could not produce anybody who had actually seen Wangrow purchase a ticket from a speculator, although it was testified that a man who was believed to be a friend of Wangrow, talked to a speculator and had something handed to him. Magistrate Krotel said that there was no case against Wangrow and discharged him.

Saint-Saens Opera in Concert Form.

At the Century Opera House last night the usual Sunday night concert programme was varied by the performance of Saint-Saen's "Samson and Delilah," in concert form. Further variety was obtained by having the three most important rôles sung by alternating principals. Jayne Herbert, Morgan Kingston and Louis Kreidler appeared respectively as Delilah, Samson and the High Priest in the first two acts, and Mary Jordan, Gustaf Bergman and Thomas Chalmers sang the same rôles in the last act. The others were Morton Adkins as Abimilech, Alfred Kaufman as an Old Hebrew, Norman Hawksley as the Philistine Messenger, and Vernon Dalhart and Hugh Schussler as the two Philistines. Alfred Szendrei conducted.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A large number of theatrical people attended the golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Simon Edwards, parents of Gus Edwards, the composer and manager, at the Savoy, 229 Lenox Avenue. During the evening a song written for the occasion by Edward Madden and Gus Edwards was sung by the guests.

"America," the current spectacle at the New York Hippodrome, will have its one hundred and fiftieth performance on Wednesday afternoon.

Alfredo Ilma, the Arabian baritone, who will make his American debut with Nahan Franko's orchestra at the New York Hippodrome next Sunday, is a nephew of King Menelek and a son of Princess Ilma of Abyssinia. He has just completed a tour of South America.

Preparations are going forward rapidly for the production of "Omar, the Tentmaker," Richard Walton Tully's play, based on the life, times and Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. The first performance will be given in Montreal on Dec. 8, and the play will be brought into New York about Christmas time.

Oliver Morosco's fifth traveling "Peg o' My Heart" company will inaugurate its season at Meriden, Conn., on Thanksgiving Day. The cast of this latest organization will be Lois Meredith, who has just arrived from California.

George Mooser has engaged Louise Hamilton as leading woman for Andrew Mack, in his coming season under Mr. Mooser's direction at the Savoy Theatre, San Francisco.

Charles Douville Coburn, by special arrangement with Sothern and Marlowe, has obtained the rights, for a term of years, of Percy MacKaye's "Jeanne d'Arc" for outdoor presentation. This play will be added to the repertoire of the Coburn Players for the Spring and Summer of 1914, and will be presented by them during their annual appearance at Columbia University, Chicago University, Harvard, and Dartmouth.

After two years as head of Henry W. Savage's "Every Woman" company Miss Adele Blood will for a brief period return to vaudeville. She will make her entry to the vaudeville stage on the afternoon of Dec. 8, when she begins a Palace Theatre engagement. Her vehicle is a condensation of Sardou's "Divorcons," by Thompson Buchanan, author of "A Woman's Way."

A special benefit performance of "Ourselves" will be given at the Lyric Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 9, to provide funds for the Special Committee on Rescue Work for Women, under the auspices of the Women's Department of the National Civic Federation.

Oliver Morosco's production of "Help Wanted," a drama of business life by Jack Lait of Chicago will be made at the Davidson Theatre, Milwaukee, Dec. 18. After three days in the Wisconsin metropolis the piece will go to the Cort Theatre, Chicago, for an indefinite engagement.

The prize contest for a design suitable for use on the advertising matter of the Princess Theatre has closed, and the committee is now engaged in examining the drawings submitted. About 100 drawings were received. The committee that is to decide which one meets the requirements of the contest consists of Troy Kinney, Archie Gunn, W. H. Mahon, F. Ray Comstock, and Holbrook Blinn.

HELP THE NEEDY TO BE THANKFUL

Of the sick and needy who have turned to us for aid, there are 500 families for whom Thanksgiving will be a day of melancholy instead of gratification unless we speak in their behalf.

In each of these homes, dependent because of some unavoidable misfortune, we want to foster hope again revived, and to stimulate courage for the Winter's struggle.

For $2.50 you can provide a Thanksgiving Dinner and make one family grateful.

The best way to acknowledge mercies received is to pass kindness along—to make some one else thankful.

How many families do you think you should help to express fully your gratitude for blessings conferred?

FROHMAN CHANGES PLANS.

Longer Run for Miss Barrymore—"Peter Pan" In Spring.

Charles Frohman last night announced several changes in his plans for the remainder of the theatrical season. He has decided to continue Ethel Barrymore's run at the Empire Theatre through Christmas and New Year's. Maude Adams, who was announced for her annual season in "Peter Pan," beginning Dec. 22, has asked Mr. Frohman to relieve her of the necessity of rehearsing her new Barrie play, "The Legend of Leonora," by day and playing "Peter Pan" by night. Miss Adams at once begins the rehearsals of Mr. Barrie's "The Legend of Leonora" in order that she may give a number of out-of-town performances of the play before it has its first night in New York on Jan. 15.

From that date on Miss Adams will continue at the Empire Theatre throughout the balance of the season. She will be seen in a cycle of Barrie comedies. The "Peter Pan" performances will be given during the Easter holidays.

On Thursday night Mr. Frohman will produce for the first time on any stage a modern play in four acts by W. Somerset Maugham, entitled, "The Land of Promise," with Billie Burke in the chief part. "The Land of Promise" will open at the Hyperion Theatre, New Haven, and come to New York during the Christmas holidays.

On Wednesday night William Collier begins rehearsing, with a new company, a farce he has lately written in collaboration with Grant Stewart, called "A Little Water On the Side." It was Mr. Stewart who worked with Mr. Collier on the writing of "Caught in the Rain." "A Little Water On the Side" will be given for the first time Dec. 8.

The last musical play Mr. Frohman will produce this season will be "The Laughing Husband," for which rehearsals begin to-day. This piece will open in Philadelphia the end of December, with Betty Callish and Julius Steger in the chief parts.

Mr. Frohman has completed all arrangements for the transportation of the entire London Criterion Theatre company from London to New York. This organization, headed by H. V. Esmond, author of "When We Were Twenty-one," and Miss Eva Moore (Mrs. Esmond) will sail from Liverpool Jan. 14, and open in New York directly they arrive. The first play acted by Mr. Esmond and his London Criterion Theatre company will be the comedy "Eliza Comes to Stay," which ran all last Summer at the Criterion Theatre, London.

Following the appearance of Mr. Esmond and his company, Charles Frohman will produce a new comedy entitled "The Prince of Showmen," written by Harrison Rhodes and Tom Wise, with Tom Wise in the chief part. Before the end of the season Mr. Frohman will produce another J. M. Barrie fantasy, entitled "The Little Policeman."

'ROSENKAVALIER' ON DEC. 9.

To Be Sung for the First Time Here at Metropolitan.

Definite announcement was made yesterday of the date of production of Richard Strauss's much heralded "comedy for music," "Der Rosenkavalier," by General Manager Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan Opera House. The novelty is to be given for the first time here on the evening of Dec. 9.

Rehearsals for the work have been in progress since Oct. 13 under the direction of Alfred Hertz, who will conduct. The cast includes Frieda Hempel, as the Marchioness; Otto Goritz, as Baron Ochs; Margaret Ober, as Octavian, (the Rosenkavalier;) Herman Weil, as Fanina!; Anna Case, as Sophie; Rita Fornia, as Marianne; Albert Reiss, as Valzachi; Marie Mattfeld, as Annina; Carl Schlegel, as Police Commissioner; Pietro Audisio, as Major Donno: Lambert Murphy, as Master of Ceremonies; Basyl Ruysdael, as a Notary; Julius Bayer, as an innkeeper; Carl Jorn, as a singer; Julius Bayer, as a hairdresser, and in other rôles Louise Cox, Rosina Van Dyck, Sophie Braslau, Jeanne Maubourg, Ludwig Burgstaller, and Ruth Weistein.

The performance will be outside the regular subscription season, but holders of season tickets will receive an opportunity to purchase seats in advance of the general public. Sale of seats to the public will begin Dec. 1, and subscribers must fill out a special blank sent to them and return it to the opera house by mail up to and including Nov. 30. Special prices will be charged, from $10 for the orchestra and orchestra circle to $3 and $2 for the family circle.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

REPUBLIC OF PERU.

HONORABLE REPRESENTATIVES:

Peru has been unable to avoid the almost inevitable effects of the economico-social law that sets all nations, rich or poor, upon the perilous incline of progressive, unconsidered, and sometime well-nigh prodigal increase in public expenditure, of which the explanation is to be found either in the advent of a cycle of great national prosperity or in the blunders, the extravagance, and the want of foresight of those who direct the affairs of the State.

If one carefully examines the spirit and the financing of our Budgets during the last three lustres, one arrives at the conviction that the causes which have directly operated to raise the figures of our public disbursements only occasionally correspond to those of the economic and administrative order, which are all that are considered necessary, and even unavoidable, although they do not depend upon the will of the men who are in power; the inverse being the case with the contingent causes of a purely political nature, which have their origin in past or present errors of the Governments.

Discounting in our Budget the amount of the services of interest and amortization of the public debt and bank loans, there remain only these two elements: salaries or credits of civil and military employes, and cost of the public works and purchase of materials and products, all of which is subordinated, as is natural, to the increase in the price of commodities.

EXTRAVAGANT EXPENDITURE.

The unjustifiable expansion of our public expenditure can be duly appreciated by taking as a starting point the estimated disbursements since the year 1894, which are as follows:—

Year.	£1 (Peruvian)*
1894	734,693
1895	734,893
1896	1,115,211
1897	1,130,824
1898	1,148,824
1899	1,260,467
1900	1,424,819
1901	1,424,819
1902	1,461,286
1903	1,461,286
1904	2,107,827
1905	2,222,542

According to the preceding figures, the public expenditure has increased, in the 13 years 1894-1906, 341 per cent., or more than 26 per cent. per annum. There is no satisfactory explanation of this increase, for in the period elapsed the number of the inhabitants of the Republic has not been triplicated, nor can the exigencies of civilization have been augmented in such excessive proportions. Nor it is possible to attribute this inflation of our Budget to causes of an economic or administrative nature, for, though it is true that the cost of living and the price of commodities have visibly increased during the last 10 years, the advance cannot have made itself felt to a degree so exaggerated as to give rise to the growth in the expenditure shown by the figures cited above.

Nor, again, can the expansion of the Budget figures be attributed to a diminution in the purchasing power of our circulatory medium—a phenomenon which has undoubtedly come to pass, but which cannot have influenced to any great extent the development of the public expenditure.

There are, then, reasons for stating that the causes of this economic disorder are almost exclusively of a political nature, and may therefore be removed or disappear.

During the years 1907 to 1912, inclusive, the nation has expended the enormous sum of £117,601,129 in the following manner:—

APPORTIONMENT SUMMARY.

Branch.	1907. £P.	1908. £P.	1909. £P.
Legislature	87,980	101,732	95,388
Government	481,687	536,991	541,150
Foreign Affairs	69,597	76,628	84,899
Justice	425,546	455,654	428,788
Treasury	636,868	809,041	783,509
War	544,674	593,689	609,712
"Fomento"	221,482	249,342	186,768
	2,467,834	2,823,037	2,730,212

Branch.	1910. £P.	1911. £P.	1912. £P.
Legislature	87,338	88,645	84,252
Government	547,468	602,201	633,237
Foreign Affairs	81,304	101,481	111,133
Justice	429,037	455,466	499,219
War	584,824	523,968	664,664
"Fomento"	162,511	187,773	203,828
	2,652,332	2,833,068	3,403,820

These amounts represent not the result of the final liquidation of each of the Budgets from 1907 to 1912, but only the disbursements effected from January to December in each of these years. Thus the sum of £P84,252 which figures under the head of Legislature in 1912 represents only the payments effected for account of that branch during the year in question, the liquidation of the account up to 31st March of the present year being £P107,435, or £P23,183 more than the sum indicated.

From the comparative study of the preceding figures the following observations are to be made:—That in the Budget for 1908 there was an increase in expenditure of £P355,223 over that of the year 1907; that in the 1911 Budget the expenditure exceeded that of 1910 by £P179,738, and that in the year 1912 the expenditure surpassed that of the Budget of 1911 by the enormous sum of £P860,558.

Examination of these figures further demonstrates that in the year 1909 the disbursements were less by £P92,845 than in the year 1908, and that in 1910 the expenditure was less by £P76,880 than in the year which preceded it.

DETAILED COMPARISONS.

Comparison of the expenditure by Budgets being established, it is necessary also, in order to arrive at concrete conclusions, to compare it according to the branches into which the Budget is divided.

The following figures will show you the annual average of the disbursements during the five years 1907-11, together with the difference between the said average and the expenditure of the year 1912:—

Government	542,099	633,237	+	91,138
Foreign Affairs	82,782	111,133	+	28,351
Justice	439,078	499,219	+	60,141
Treasury	772,420	1,092,295	+	319,875
War	571,369	864,664	+	293,295
"Fomento"	201,535	208,826	+	7,291
	2,701,499	3,493,626	+	792,127

The preceding table shows an increase of £P792,127 in the expenditure of 1912 as compared with the average expended yearly in the five years 1907-11, the branches especially notable for the excessive sums which they absorbed being the Treasury, War, Government, and Justice. Such increases cannot but alarm the Treasurer who seriously concerns himself with the moneys that he administers.

By comparing the expenditure under the head of Treasury for the year 1911 with that of 1912 one can appreciate more clearly the increase of disbursements which occurred in the latter year. The amount of the payments of a transitory character, however, such as those which refer to the cost of raw material of the monopolies, (tobacco, for example,) should not be confused with the disbursements which signify expenses proper. Nor should the sums destined to the cost of labor, such as those of the alcohol monopoly, which are amortized and which have a reproductive character, be confused with those which arise from the increase in the provision for employes and the creation of new posts.

*Since 1891 the £ Peruvian has been approximately equivalent to the English sovereign.

ANALYZED EXPENSES.

Explosives	....	1,800	1,800	....

The sum of £P99,939 which figures under the head of Tobacco in the 1912 Budget is composed as follows:—

Cost of raw material, elaboration, foreign manufacture, municipal tax, Customs dues, insurance, and discount	£P77,248
Expenses of administration	15,000
Selling commission	7,693
	£P99,939

DISSECTED FIGURES.

The payment of £P2,250 in the 1911 account refers to the commission of 5 per cent. and 4 per cent. on the estimated proceeds of the monopoly in the first and the second half of the year, on the basis of a product of £P50,000.

With these antecedents it will readily be understood that the £P99,939 were destined for the establishment of the tobacco monopoly, which replaced the system of duties on this commodity.

The sum of £P80,038 under the head of National Tax-Collecting Company comprises the following items:—

One per cent. on the revenue of the branches which the Company administers	£P5,685
Ten per cent. for collection of dues and expenses of administration of the moles at Tumbes, Supe, and Chala	220
Six per cent. on the collection of the Lima and Callao license fees	2,700
Amortization of the advance of £100,000	25,000
Balance of the expropriation of the tobacco factories	25,000
Consolidated balance in favor of the Company in April, 1910	21,433

In order to investigate the origin of the difference of £P58,078 shown by the comparative table, it is desirable to dissect the sum of £P21,000, which appears in the 1911 estimates as follows:—

Amortization of the credit of £P54,000	£P10,000
One per cent. on the sums collected by the Company	8,240
Administration of the moles at Tumbes, Supe, Chala, Samanco, and Ilo	300

TAX-COLLECTING EXPENSES.

According to the foregoing, the sums invested under the head of "National Tax-Collecting Co." in the two years to which I am alluding would, if dissected, appear as follows:—

	1911. £P		1912. £P
Ordinary expenditure	11,060	....	8,605
Debts	10,000	....	71,433
	21,060	....	80,038

So that, in the said two years, £P81,438 have been applied to the payment of previous debts and £P19,665 to ordinary expenditure.

The difference of £P58,078 is therefore attributable to disbursements for the services of amortization and interest of the floating debt at that date.

The presence of the item concerning the Huacho railway is self-explanatory. Before long I shall deal with this matter carefully and specially.

The difference under the head of Customs Houses is caused by the increase in the staff and in their emoluments, in view of the reorganization established according to Law No. 1,567.

Although under the head of "Sundries" the difference is only £P12,043, it is desirable to dissect it in order to learn its principal components, which are as follows:—

Items.	1911. £P	1912. £P	Difference. £P
Various disbursements	8,144	10,187	2,043
Interest and discounts	5,000	15,000	10,000

There is nothing to object to in the item "Administration expenses of the National Tax-Collecting Co.," but I must deal with the item referring to interest and discounts, which has inflated the Budget intolerably since the year 1910.

The following figures show clearly and in detail the proportions attained by the item "Interest, discounts, and commission," the increase being such as to throw the Budget out of balance.

Year.	Estimated. £P	Paid. £P	Excess. £P
1907	5,000	9,426	4,426
1908	5,000	12,737	7,737
1909	5,000	19,977	14,977
1910	5,000	33,218	28,218
1911	5,000	62,887	57,687
1912	15,000	82,249	67,249
	40,000	220,294	180,294

DISCOUNTING THE FUTURE.

It will readily be understood that the enormous excess shown by this comparative table arises from the difficult situation in which the Treasury has been placed in recent years, and from the necessity, brought about by force majeure or want of foresight, of having recourse to the renewal of bills and other fiduciary operations, which have discounted the future, aggravating the financial condition of the country, and constituting a vicious circle from which it is very difficult to be free.

The expenditure on the War and Marine branch, which represents nearly 25 per cent. of our general disbursements, has during the year 1911 and 1912 been composed of the following items:—

	1911. Budget. £P	1912. Budget. £P	Differences. More. £P	Less. £P
Fleet	83,922	132,028	48,106	....
"Indefinidos"	61,257	59,257	....	2,000
General expenses	16,256	14,822	....	1,434
Invalids	15,905	14,335	....	1,570
Special	15,372	11,036	....	4,336
Various	121,784	128,900	7,206	....
	535,735	738,395	211,999	9,340

Comparing the sums estimated in the years 1911 and 1912 with those appearing under the head of War in the estimates for 1893, which amounted to £67,184, it is seen that the increase in expenditure on this branch of the public service exceeds all that could have been foreseen.

According to the foregoing table the expenditure in 1912 under the head of "Standing Army" surpasses by the sum of £156,687 the same item in the 1911 Budget. This excess is explained by the circumstance that the following items appearing in the 1912 Budget did not figure in the Budget for 1911:—

"To complete item No. 6,032 (maintenance of Army increased to 7,000 men)"	£P87,500

With reference to this branch of expenditure it should be observed that since 1911 the following disbursements have been effected which have not figured either in the ordinary or extraordinary War and Marine estimates:—

Divisional Barracks	£P45,106
Regional Service	48,312
Intendancy of Marine	1,535
Augmentation of forces in Loreto	20,600
Garrisons on the Madre de Dios	13,712
Increased expenditure on Staff and other services, about	25,000
	£P154,295

REFORMS AND REDUCTIONS.

In preparing the estimates for 1914 the Government has for the sake of prudence been obliged to suppress the following items in the ordinary and extraordinary expenditure:—

Ordinary.	£P.
10 per cent. Military School	1,355.4.00
Maintenance of the School of Musketry	3,000.0.00
10 per cent. for the same	316.6.00
Expenses of Secretariate of Military Zone.	960.0.00
10 per cent. Military Zone	98.4.00
Military Hygiene	1,214.4.00
Maintenance of "Espinar" battery	516.0.00
Construction of new barracks	3,000.0.00
Armorers in Europe	672.0.00
Increase of engineers' pay	408.0.00
Increased bonus to men at sea	867.2.00
Maintenance of 60 apprentices	903.6.00
	12,903.6.00
Extraordinary.
Hydrographic Commission	500.0.00
Mechanical engineer candidates in Europe	2,000.0.00
Veterinaries in Europe	500.0.00
To increase items 6,037 to 6,087 V. (Hygiene)	1,166.0.00
Naval School	1,648.5.20
Lighthouse construction	1,000.0.00
Military Pensionary in Europe	2,448.0.00
Juan M. Goyoneche	2,100.0.00
Half pay for "indefinidos" of 1903	2,000.0.00
Crew of the "Huascar"	500.0.00
	14,163.5.20
Total	27,067.1.20

SUPPRESSIONS EXPLAINED.

The reasons for the suppressions indicated above are as follows:—

Upon the introduction of the new scale of pay the motive for the bonus of 10 per cent. on the pay according to the old scale (1855) has disappeared.

The School of Musketry was given up two years ago.

With the new organization of the divisional barracks the Secretariate of the Military Zone became extinct.

With the new organization of the Army each unit has its surgeon, and the item of £P1,214 is consequently unnecessary.

The Coast Artillery Group having taken charge of the service of the "Espinar" battery, there is no further object for the item of £P516.

The item of £P3,000 intended for the construction of barracks has been suppressed because the Executive is about to submit a general project with regard to this matter.

The item intended for the training of armorers in Europe has been suppressed because experience has shown that the instruction of armorers in the Republic by the foreign armorers engaged gives better and more rapid results.

A rate of pay having been fixed for engineers, corresponding to the assimilation of their class into the new scale, the item of £P408 has consequently been suppressed.

For a like reason the necessity for the item of £P367 has also disappeared.

In view of the conscription law the item of £P993, intended for the maintenance of 60 apprentices for the squadron, has become objectless.

The motives for the suppressions in the extraordinary expenditure are that up to the present there has been no movement whatever in the items in question, and that the sums budgeted for have been applied to various needs of another character, excepting the item referring to the half pay of officers on indefinite leave, which is suppressed because during the present year it will have been canceled in every case.

The inadequate item which refers to the construction of lighthouses has been suppressed pending the study by the Executive of a general project for this service, which demands priority of attention, and which cannot be put into action without the expenditure of large sums of money.

In the ordinary estimates for this branch of expenditure during 1911 the following reductions have been introduced, experience having shown that the services which they concern can be duly carried out with the sums stated in the Estimates Bill submitted to the Honorable Legislative Chambers.

The reductions in question amount to a total of £P53,920.4.41, and are as follows:—

	£P.
10 per cent. staff	174.8.50
Legal aid	1,000.0.00
Reserve stores	10,000.0.00
Passages and freights	3,000.0.00
Maintenance of artillery material	120.0.00
Hygiene	476.4.00
Intendancy of War	1,790.2.00
Arsenal of War	1,900.5.75
Invalids	3,500.0.00
Transport of Conscripts	4,000.0.00
"Gran y Bolognesi"	20,000.0.00
"Constitucion"	602.4.00
Officers retired and on indefinite leave	7,257.0.16
	£P53,920.4.41

NEW BUDGET MOTIVES.

The new budget, consulting the needs of the branches of War and Marine, contains the following items, the motives for which are:—

1. That in the estimates (including the prorogued budget now in force) the sums intended for services created by existing laws have not been included;

2. The acquisition of new units in the Navy and the necessity of fitting them out and maintaining them;

3. The increase in the personnel of the French Military Mission, and

4. The cost of uniforms and accoutrements for the Army in ratio to the increase of the strength and as a result of careful study of the matter.

The seventeen new items amount annually to £P165,141.5.99, and are as specified hereunder:—

	£P.
Divisional barracks	45,136.4.00
Mountain troops and other services	5,892.5.23
Army uniforms and accoutrements (increase)	10,095.8.26
French Military Mission (increase)	3,311.6.58
Cruiser "Comandante Aguirre"	30,000.0.00
Torpedo destroyer "Rodrigues"	4,000.0.00
Submarines "Ferre" and "Palacios"	5,000.0.00
Regional Military Service	48,312.0.00
Military Pensionary in Europe	5,112.0.00
First Officer of the Navy Office	288.0.00
Captaincy of the Port of Huacho	870.0.00
Naval Militia of Lake Titicaca	686.4.00
Captaincy of Port Maldonado	1,044.0.00
Commandancy General of the Squadron	2,531.4.72
Intendancy of Marine	1,535.5.20
French officer engaged (Loreto fleet)	600.0.00
Naval Engineer engaged for the Squadron	720.0.00

From the detailed explanation preceding, and bearing in mind the Balance law, it will appear that in the Estimates for 1914 the expenditure on the branches of War and Marine will be increased by £P93,984.0.88, as compared with the 1912 and 1913 budgets; but when it is remembered that in 1912 the sums expended upon the two branches amounted to £P364,664 one arrives at the following conclusions:—

(a) That the difference between the sum estimated for 1914 and the disbursements effected in 1912 represents an economy of £P32,279;

(b) That in the estimates for 1914 provision is made for the items necessary to cover actual payments effected outside of the estimates in the years 1911 and 1912;

(c) That in the estimates for 1914 there are items intended to satisfy not only the pre-existing necessities, but also the new requirements of the Army and Navy, and

(d) Finally, that the War and Marine budget for the year 1914 is a frank and honest computation, as accurate as possible in view of the complex factors that compose the expenditure which the State has to effect in order to attend duly, punctually, and in a spirit of economy to all the services of the various branches, and without omitting items which are not mentioned in the Estimates, but which represent absolutely unavoidable expenditure.

ESTIMATES EXCEEDED.

The sums estimated for the service of the branches of Government and Police for the years 1911 and 1912 are as set forth in the appended table:—

	1911. Estimates. £P	1912. Estimates. £P	Difference. More. £P	Difference. Less. £P
Executive Power	8,166	8,166	....	..
Ministry	8,942	9,062	120	..
Political Authorities	52,957	53,499	542	..
Police	803,300	817,232	13,932	..
Posts	76,017	79,066	3,049	..
Telegraphs	71,903	71,115	....	788
Electoral expenses	1,782	3,752	1,970	..
Inactive lists	1,261	1,261	....	..
"Extraordinarios"	8,200	14,512	6,342	..
Private apartments	2,154	2,018	....	136
	534,682	559,713	25,955	924

If the above figures be compared with the disbursements effected in the years mentioned it will be seen that the payments actually made have largely exceeded the sums calculated, thus:—

	1911. £P		1912. £P
Amounts paid	603,201	....	633,237
Id, estimated	534,682	....	559,713
	68,519	....	73,524

Increase of £P120, under the head of "Ministry," for the payment of the annual emoluments of the Minister's secretary.

£P3,049, under the head of "Posts," for the installation and upkeep of new offices, increased maintenance expenses of the Postal Agency of Panama, commission on sale of stamps and transit expenses of the administrations of the Union.

£P24,489, corresponding to item No. 1,427, for the "Preventive Police" service, and representing an excess of £P20,489 over the sum estimated, which amounts only to £P4,000 annually.

In this item not only have unjustifiable disbursements been discovered, but in addition the money has been applied to purposes for which it was not in any way intended.

The annual increase of the sums charged to this item lends immediately to the supposition that there exists a permanent and regular expenditure not authorized by the estimates, but nevertheless effected by sums incorrectly applied to the item "Preventive Police."

CORRECTING ABUSES.

The following details will better explain the progress and amount of these disbursements:—

Year.	Estimated. £P	Paid. £P	Excess. £P
1904	4,000	8,605	2,605
1905	4,000	4,334	334
1906	4,000	10,232	6,232
1907	4,000	8,755	4,755
1908	4,000	15,883	11,883
1909	4,000	16,790	12,790
1910	4,000	21,526	17,526
1911	4,000	31,676	27,676
1912	4,000	24,489	20,489
	36,000	140,290	104,290

For the rest, I have to inform you that without disturbing the situation created with regard to the expenditure attributable to the item in question, the present fiscal administration has proceeded to suppress this and other abuses, which are so prejudicial to the honesty and purity of the Budget.

In the first half of the present year the sums expended for account of this item amount to £P2,396, or £P396 more than the proportion allotted to this period. The Government has taken the necessary steps to cover this excess with the proportion belonging to the second half.

According to the table of outgoings for the years 1907 to 1912 the expenditure of the Ministry of Justice and Education from January to December of the past year was £P499,219, while the sum estimated amounts to £P530,321. This, however, is caused by the circumstance that, as I have previously explained, the Budget was not liquidated until late in the following year.

January to December, 1912	£P499,219
January to April, 1913	17,371
	£P516,590

The sums paid out under this head in the months of May and June cannot, however, be stated until the final liquidation is received.

Items.	1911. Estimates. £P	1912. Estimates. £P	Difference. More. £P	Difference. Less. £P
Justice	165,237	166,378	1,141	..
Education	224,467	288,139	63,672	..
Public Worship	19,508	19,809	301	..
Various expenses	2,606	6,932	4,326	..
Charity—Customs dues	8,000	8,000	....	..

"Extraordinarios"	8,000	8,000	....	..
	450,981	520,821	69,560	200

CAUSES OF INCREASE.

Analyzing the expenditure of Justice and Education in 1912, which shows an increase of £P69,360 compared with that of 1911, one arrives at the following conclusions:—

That the increase of £P120 under the head of "Ministry" represents the annual emoluments of the Minister's secretary.

That the £P1,141 under the head of "Justice" correspond to the increase of the emoluments of the public prosecutors of the Higher Courts and Justices of the First Court of Claims, and the amount estimated for prison construction.

That the £P301 under the head of "Public worship" represent the sums set aside for the despatch of missions to the Apostolic Prefecture of San Leon de Amazonas, in conformity with the law of January 3, 1896.

That the £P4,326 under the head of "Various expenses" are due to the incorporation of Charity, originally a dependency of the Ministry of "Fomento," to the Ministry of Justice.

In 1894, that is to say, 19 years ago, the items set aside for the payment of public education expenditure amounted to £P28,996. The items of this expenditure for 1912 aggregate £P336,048, a sum equivalent to more than 11½ times the amount estimated in 1894.

It is not at first sight easy to show the causes of this considerable increase, because although it is true that improvements of the service, in this as in other branches of public administration, may determine heavy expenditure, it is also true that in the matter of public education the outgoings depend less upon the intensity of the service than upon its extension, and this, as can well be understood, must be subject to the increase of the population.

EDUCATIONAL EXPENDITURE.

The sums estimated and expended upon education during the last six years, without taking into account the amounts paid in liquidation over and above the outgoings of each year, are the following:—

Year.	Estimated.		Expended.
1909	336,552.1.71	....	288,235.7.24
1910	284,676.8.57	....	263,878.8.36
1911	284,576.8.57	....	269,482.8.85

Foremost among the duties of a cultured State is that of attending to the preservation and improvement of its two constitutive elements, the land and the people, by studying carefully and profoundly the national disposition of each.

In Peru we have more or less exact information as to the territorial area of our country, but at present we have no accurate or even approximate knowledge of our population, and for this reason we are unaware of the conditions of the internal composition of the organism with which the State has to deal, and the intimate life of that element which is the basis of all political activity.

Nevertheless we see our public administration developing until it touches all the most complicated problems of our social life, without knowing the live human forces which the State possesses, and which are the centre of conversgence for all the questions raised by the science of good government, man being the end and the means of the industry which creates wealth, whether individual or collective.

The facts regarding the population are obtained by two distinct administrative operations—the census and civil registration. Having for many years neglected to carry ont the first of these operations, the natural course would be to examine the Civil Status Registers for complete information as to the movement of the population. Unfortunately, the clearly expressed dispositions laid down with reference to these Registers by our Civil Code, which were a dead letter from 1852, when the Codes were promulgated, to 1873, when the Municipal Councils were established, have again fallen into desuetude in a large number of the municipalities of the Republic, which attach little or no importance to this tutelary institution affecting the status, rights, and duties of individuals.

MISSING REGISTERS.

With veritable stupefaction the Government has recently discovered that 72 district municipalities do not keep civil status registers of any description; furthermore, there is reason to believe that in several parishes the books which should record marriages, births, and deaths are also absent.

The want of this information naturally makes still more difficult, if not impossible, any precise computation as to the numerical composition of our population.

According to calculations made in 1896 by an Institute worthy of respect, the population of the Republic in that year would be 4,609,999 inhabitants.

As the Census of 1876 showed a population of 2,669,945 inhabitants, the before-mentioned calculations would imply that the population of the Republic increased in the 20 years 1876-1896 at the rate of 97,003 per annum, which is certainly not the case.

The births in 1877 amounted to 125,783, and the deaths to 50,000. In 1912, according to the data which have been gathered, the births numbered 128,743, or only 2,965 more than 25 years ago, and the deaths 55,682. This induces the assumption that the balance between the natality and the mortality has varied, during more than a third of a century, from 78,088 to 75,788 annually in favor of the population.

This being so, and adopting the higher figure, the population of the Republic in 1896 would only have amounted to 4,185,605, or 424,394 inhabitants less than calculated.

And not even these figures can be accepted as definitive, for they would assume that human existence in our country has developed in a normal and propitious ambient, whereas the fact is that war, revolutions, Indian uprisings, epidemics of all descriptions, and the inhuman conduct of certain eminently disorderly provincial elements have palpably restricted the growth of the population.

No estimate, therefore, which assigns to the Republic a population greater than five millions is admissible, for it cannot in any way be confirmed.

The figures which I have given, and which credit the Republic with a population of approximately 5,000,000, provide an idea of the enormous responsibility which weighs upon the State with respect to the diffusion of primary education and the general culture of the country.

Lacking as we do a Census taken with due regard to scientific precepts it is not easy to determine the number of illiterates in the country, but even without this important information we must arrive at the conviction that public education, in spite of the large sums annually devoted to it, does not develop in harmony and in direct ratio with the increase of the population.

THE NEED FOR PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Given such a state of affairs, and while the public finances are improving, the problem relating to education consists of guaranteeing the results obtained by bettering them, as far as this depends upon the Government, in order to avoid an unprofitable stationariness or a retrogression that would bring about the ruin of public instruction.

The time is past when education was considered a remedy, a panacea, for social infirmities, and this erroneous idea has been replaced by the truer conception which accounts it a powerful and irresistible instrument for the development of the strength and skill of the worker, increasing the range of his intelligence and at the same time providing him with the means of profiting by the deep stream of universal acquired knowledge, whereby labor and industry are rendered so fruitful.

Concurring with these ideas, and actuated by the dogma of true Liberalism, which recognizes that the duty of the State is to develop the conditions of civic activity and incline towards the formation of the individual character in order to prevent opportunity becoming a monopoly and activity being converted into a patrimony of the rich and fortunate, the Government is determined to remove all obstacles in the way of the ample and effective diffusion of primary education in all parts of the Republic, not only by giving more attention to the establishment of elementary schools, but also by creating night schools which shall be in harmony with the needs and the limitations of the poor classes for which they are intended, and in which he who cannot read will learn, while he who can read will learn more and go further.

It is the intention of the Government gradually to open the gates of these schools not only to those who wish to learn, but also to such as are willing to teach what they know.

The social problem of endowing the woman with the means of earning her own living bristles with difficulties, and must be based upon a broad and honorable margin, which signifies a work or occupation of real utility to society, and one for which society shall be willing to pay, and in no case something which implies alms more or less disguised.

DOMESTIC TRAINING SCHOOL.

In pursuance of this ideal the Government has just established in the town of Magdalena the Domestic Training School, wherein instruction will be given to as many as 300 poor girls, of which 200 are to be brought from the provinces.

Although this step that has been taken in the direction of solving the social problem to which I am alluding satisfies immediate necessities, the Government is aware that the action of this education will have to be extended to the provinces, and with this end in view it is proposed to add to the curriculum of the girls' schools in the provincial capitals a complete course of training in the domestic arts, whereby each pupil will acquire the knowledge indispensable for the management of her own home and for service, adequately rewarded, with respectable families.

The Government further proposes to establish in the boys' elementary schools courses of practical arts, in order that at a certain age the boys may learn to be carpenters, tinsmiths, metal-workers, &c.—in short, that they may acquire the knowledge necessary to present-day life, yet without being condemned to become mere day-laborers.

In the opinion of the Government all these reforms and amplifications of primary instruction can be carried out within the limits of a carefully planned administrative Budget, and without the necessity for augmenting the expenditure upon this public service.

PERUVIAN EXTERNAL DEBT.

On July 1, 1879, the external debt of Peru amounted to the sum of 201,064,846 soles, as follows:—

Ecuador bonds	35,530
Pisco-Ica Railway	1,323,400
Loan of 1870	55,707,900
Loan of 1872	107,752,700
United States Loan	1,080,000
Interest from July 1, 1875, to July 1, 1879:—
Ica Railway bonds	264,680
Bonds of Loan of 1870	18,363,896
Bonds of Loan of 1872	21,546,740
Soles	201,064,846
or	£40,212,969

The external debt arising from the loans of 1869, 1870, and 1872 was completely cancelled by virtue of the contract entered into by the Supreme Government with Count Donoughmore, the representative of the bondholders.

By this contract Peru ceded to the bondholders, for the term of 66 years, the following railways:—

Mollendo to Arequipa.
Arequipa to Puno.
Juliaca to Santa Rosa.
Pisco to Ica.
Callao to Chicla.
Lima to Ancon.
Chimbote to Suchiman.
Pacasmayo to Yonan and Guadalupe.
Salaverry to Trujillo and Ascope.
Paita to Piura.

In addition to this concession, the holders of the foreign debt bonds obtained the following:—

(a) Cession of the guano existing in Peruvian territory up to 8,000,000 English tons, which quantity was afterwards reduced to 2,000,000 tons;

(b) The surplus which might remain of 80 per cent. of the guano of the Lobos Islands belonging to Peru, after the liquidation of her account with Chile;

(c) The payment of 83 yearly amounts of £80,000 each, or £2,640,000;

(d) Authority to hypothecate the railways and the guano ceded.

The preceding stipulations were modified, in virtue of Law No. 455 and in conformity with the supreme resolutions of 20th June, 1907, in the following manner:—

1. The 83 yearly payments of £80,000 were reduced to 30;
2. The term of the concessions was extended to 1973;
3. The Peruvian Corporation substituted the bondholders in the contract of 11th January, 1890, and bound itself to construct the Cuzco and Huancayo railways.

As a consequence of the arrangements between Peru and Chile with regard to the external debt of Peru the bondholders received up to 1890 the following sums:—

Gibbs and Sons' deposit	£260,948
Bank of England deposit	300,000
Chilean 4½ per cent. bonds	630,000
	£1,190,948

GUANO EXPORT FIGURES.

In virtue of Clause 21 of the contract of January 11, 1890, the Peruvian Corporation has exported from the Peruvian deposits the following quantities of guano:—

Years.	Tons manifested.
1891 to 1895	166,877
1896 to 1900	122,789
1901 to 1905	850,168
1906 to 1910	852,151
1911 to 1915 (April)	112,982
	1,184,915

The proceeds of the guano sold by the Peruvian Corporation from 1892 to June 30, 1912, amounted to £2,861,098, as follows:—

Years.	Proceeds.
1897 to 1901	822,886
1902 to 1906	808,477
1907 to 1911	712,457
1912	141,143

CALL SEAMEN'S BILL DEATH TO DISCIPLINE

Would Enable Unions to Hold Up Ships on Any Pretext, Say Managers.

WHAT MIGHT BE EXPECTED

Capt. Luckhurst Gives an Imaginary Conversation on Board a Fast Passenger Liner.

Capt. Allan Luckhurst, Marine Superintendent of the American, Atlantic Transport, and Red Star Lines, in speaking yesterday of the "Seamen's Union bill," fathered by United States Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, and said to be dictated by Andrew Furuseth, President of the union, said that the chief danger in the bill was that it would do away with all discipline on passenger liners.

"Steamship owners on the Pacific Coast," said Capt. Luckhurst, "are at the present time under the sway of the Seamen's Union, and the delegates can walk on board in San Francisco, Seattle, or any other port and tie up a ship on the slightest pretext. That is the condition Andrew Furuseth wants to bring about in New York and other Atlantic ports. On the Pacific Coast Captains and officers have to handle the crews with gloves, and the men do almost as they like. Sailors and firemen out there have the same fare as the officers—linen and silver on the table and stewards to wait upon them.

"It may seem incredible that a big passenger liner with freight and mails was held up in San Francisco on the point of sailing by a delegate from the Firemen's Union because he contended that their sheets had not been properly laundered, but it is a fact and was brought to the notice of the Senate committee in Washington by the President of the company. After a delay of five hours the Marine Superintendent got the delegate to release the steamer, mark you, by promising that the firemen's sheets should be sent to a different laundry next time in port.

"The aim of Furuseth is to compel the steamship lines to carry two certificated able seamen for each lifeboat on board so that the union will have the power to call the men out any time the delegates think fit and delay the ship's sailing.

"On the Lapland we have sixty lifeboats, and that would mean carrying 120 able seamen, according to the bill, to loaf around the decks until there was a shipwreck, like yellow fever immunes waiting for an epidemic to start work.

"On board ship," said the Captain, "the word of command has to be given quickly and carried out in the same way. There is not time for a seaman to look around and ask the officer why Tom Smith or Bill Jones could not do the job.

"Gilbert never wrote anything funnier in 'Pinafore' than the situation as it is to-day in the mercantile marine on the Pacific Coast, and as it will be here if the union bill passes Congress. Imagine this kind of conversation in the near future on an Atlantic liner:

Chief Officer to passing Quartermaster—Pardon me, Mr. Hardcastle, but if you are going to your cabin, would you kindly request the lamp trimmer to step this way? The starboard sidelight does not burn brightly, and as we are in the track of ships, it might be unpleasant if it went out. Do not disturb him, however, if he is enjoying his after-dinner cigar.

Man nods patronizingly to the C. O. and says he'll see.

Captain of same liner a few minutes later, coming on deck, furiously, to Chief Officer—Why in the name of Mohammed's big black dog hasn't you had the decks holystoned to-day? She looks more like a Gowanus Canal gas coal lighter than a passenger liner.

Chief Officer, crushed and humble—I'm sorry, Sir. I mentioned it to Mr. Wilfred Butties, the bo'sun, this morning, and he replied that the men were taking a course of instruction in the theory of life-saving at sea from a professor sent by the Seamen's Union from Washington, and could not be disturbed.

Capt. George A. White, President of the Association of Passenger Steamboat Lines of America, said that hitherto steamboats had been constructed with an idea to stability, but if the Union bill went through, they would have to be constructed for carrying lifeboats and accommodating numbers of seamen waiting to be shipwrecked.

"The big passenger carrying steamers on the Lakes," said Capt. White, "will have to go out of business, if they are compelled to carry 100 per cent. lifeboat and two able seamen for each, and this would mean throwing 10,000 men out of employment. As an example, the City of Detroit carries 2,289 passengers in Summer, without the loss of a single life, but under the new bill, she would carry only 600 passengers with thirty lifeboats and sixty able seamen. The lake and river steamship traffic of the United States is about ninety per cent. of the entire mercantile marine, and it would be ruinous to have it tied up by the Seamen's Union Bill, which is what will happen if it becomes law.

"It made me boil over," Capt. White went on, "when I was at Washington to see Andrew Furuseth pointing his finger at United States Senators in the Committee and telling them what to do.

"Here is an example of what might happen to any Ward steamer or other American coastwise trading steamer: Under the new bill any member of the crew can demand his money and leave in a foreign port if he feels so disposed and others are obtainable. I asked Furuseth if the men left an American ship at Havana and no men to replace them could be got under $100 a month wages if he would call that 'obtainable' and he replied, 'I most certainly should,' so you see how impossible it would be for steamship companies to run their vessels under those conditions to even pay expenses."

44 ROADS TO PLEAD FOR HIGHER RATES

Commerce Board's Hearing Begins To-day on Proposed Advance of 5 Per Cent.

AFFECTS 23,000 TARIFFS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—A small army of railroad officials came to Washington to-night for the preliminary hearings which are to begin to-morrow on the proposed general advance of 5 per cent. of all interstate freight rates on roads east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, involving about 23,000 tariffs. The advances would have become effective on Nov. 15 except for the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission suspending them, pending investigation, until March 12, 1914.

Under the law, when rates are suspended as these have been, the burden is imposed upon the carriers to justify the proposed higher rates. This the forty-four railroads concerned will be prepared to do. The special committees appointed to act for them are confident that the roads' testimony will stand the acid test of analysis and examination both by the commission and representatives of the shippers, the latter of whom will oppose the advances.

Among the railroad officials who arrived here to-night are Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad; W. C. Brown, the retiring President of the New York Central; A. H. Smith, senior Vice President of the New York Central, who is expected to succeed Mr. Brown as its President; George Stuart Patterson, General Solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad; George M. Schriver, second Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio; Hugh L. Bond, General Counsel of the Baltimore & Ohio; H. C. Wishart, assistant to the Vice President of the New York Central Lines, and C. M. Bunting, Controller of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The hearing is expected to continue two days, unless there is some unexpected development. Then the Commission will adjourn until after Jan. 1 next.

The testimony will be turned over to Louis D. Brandies of Boston, engaged by the commission as its counsel, for his analysis.

The opening statement to-morrow will be made by President Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio. Last Spring the railroads appointed a committee of three Presidents, consisting of Mr. Willard, Mr. Brown of the New York Central and Mr. Rea of the Pennsylvania, to take general charge of the case.

Mr. Willard will make an elaborate statement of the situation. This committee also asked Frederick A. Delano, President and receiver of the Wabash, C. H. Markham, President of the Illinois Central, and C. A. Worthington, President of the Chicago & Alton system, to serve as a special sub-committee for the western roads between Buffalo and the Mississippi River. Mr. Delano also will address the commission, followed by George Stuart Patterson, general solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

George M. Shriver of Baltimore, Second Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, will make a statement of the condition of the forty-nine big railroads in official classification territory, and present tables covering the financial status and income accounts of the New York Central, Pennsylvania, and Baltimore & Ohio Roads, these being selected because they were designated by the commission itself as three typical roads in a similar advanced rate hearing before the commission in 1910.

REVIEW RELIEF WORK.

American Committee Sent $31,000 to Aid Balkan War Sufferers.

The final meeting of the American Constantinople Relief Committee, which was formed a year ago to relieve sufferers from the Balkan war, was held yesterday at the home of Oscar S. Straus, the Chairman of the committee. Mr. Straus announced that a total of $31,000 had been sent by the committee to the American Red Cross for the relief of the war sufferers, and that this money had without doubt been the means of saving many human lives. In Salonika, for example, said Mr. Straus, the Rev. E. Haskell had been enabled to maintain a bread line in which 2 cents' worth of bread had been given to hundreds of starving persons, chiefly aged men and women and children.

It was also announced that Miss Jillson, an American woman who administered the relief work at Brussa, had been decorated for her services by the Sultan of Turkey.

At the meeting a last subscription of $500 was received. It was given anonymously.

MONEY BILL FACES CLOSE SENATE VOTE

NO REPUBLICAN SUPPORT

Hitchcock Likely to Gain Some Points on Bi-Partisan Votes—Debate Begins To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The long-expected fight in the Senate over the currency reform bills will be begun to-morrow with the chamber almost evenly divided between support of the Owen-Glass bill indorsed by President Wilson, and the nearer approach to the central bank idea embodied in the measure favored by Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska and the five Republicans of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Opposition to the Administration bill within the Democratic Party is at least as strong as was the Democratic opposition to the essential features of the Administration Tariff bill last Summer. There is practically no hope of recruiting strength for the currency measure from the Progressive Republicans, who finally made the passage of the Tariff bill an overwhelming triumph for the President.

The votes in the Committee on Banking and Currency before the White House exerted its authority over the controlling party can be fairly taken as indicating the extent at that time of the support in the Senate for the House bill. Of the seven Democrats on the committee, only four adhered to the provisions of the original measure, and three at first were outspoken in their demand for a bank issue differently controlled, differently owned, and issuing a widely different kind of money. But two of these Democrats quickly yielded to pressure from the White House, leaving Mr. Hitchcock alone in his opposition.

While Mr. Hitchcock is known to have many sympathizers on the Democratic side of the Senate, it is to be expected that the President will hold most if not all of them in line. But even if Mr. Hitchcock remains the only Democrat advocating sweeping amendments to the House bill, the Democratic majority will be narrow. The vacancy caused by the death of the Democratic Senator, Mr. Johnston of Alabama, is still unfilled, and the Democrat elected to succeed the Republican Senator, Mr. Jackson of Maryland, will probably not take his seat until February. This alignment leaves only forty-nine Senators for the House bill as against forty-six for its amendment. A shift of two votes would give the majority to the Republicans.

In the tariff fight there were two Democratic Senators against the Administration bill, where only Mr. Hitchcock can now be counted in the opposition; but it is not to be expected that party lines can be drawn tight on all amendments to be proposed, so that on some votes at least Mr. Hitchcock may expect to lead a bi-partisan majority in favor of modifying the measure.

Many Progressive Republicans supported the Democratic tariff programme, among them Senator La Follette of Wisconsin and Senator Poindexter of Washington, the only Roosevelt Progressive in the Senate.

But the situation is quite otherwise on the currency measure. Progressive Republicans like Mr. Borah of Idaho, Mr. Bristow of Kansas and Mr. Cummins of Iowa, are bitter against the House bill, and it is thought that the rest of the Advanced wing of the Republicans will follow them.

Senator Owen will make the opening speech in defense of the slightly modified House bill to-morrow, and other members of the Banking Committee are expected to follow him in set speeches that will take two or three weeks before the amendments are brought forward.

SEEKS MERRITT'S PAPERS.

Receiver for Missing Supervisor May Ask Marshal's Aid.

Benjamin M. Freeman, the receiver appointed to settle the affairs of Supervisor Henry C. Merritt of East Chester, who has disappeared, will apply to Judge Hough to-day in the United States Court for permission to employ counsel to assist him in his investigation.

"If it becomes necessary to take stronger measures to get at Mr. Merritt's private papers in his house," said Mr. Freeman last night, "I will apply for a United States Marshal to assist me. The examiners from the State Controller's office who are working on Mr. Merritt's books in the town office have assured me that they will work in harmony with me."

Persons living in East Chester are angry because the State examiners have refused to give out any information in regard to the case. Some of them believe that political friends of Merritt are delaying the examination.

THE RAILROAD YEAR.

In view of the large amount of publicity which has been given to railway misfortunes of various kinds in late years, it is a little surprising to learn from the Interstate Commerce Commission's annual report for the year ended June 30, 1911, which has just been issued, that the average rate of dividends on all of the capital stock of American railways was higher in that year than it had ever been before. Furthermore, despite the number of roads in financial difficulties, a larger proportion of capital stock received dividends in 1911 than in any previous year, not even excepting 1907.

Two-thirds of the outstanding railway stock receives dividends, or a grand total of $5,730,000,000. The railways paid on this stock in 1911 $460,195,000, or an average of 8.03 per cent. Prorated over all stock, the dividends averaged 5.43 per cent., as compared with an even 5 per cent. in 1910 and 4.18 per cent in 1909. Dividend payments were $55,000,000 larger than for any previous year. The average was brought up by the fact that $160,000,000 of stock received dividends of 10 per cent. or more.

Taking the results of the United States' roads as a whole, it appears from the report that the risk of not getting interest on an investment in first mortgage bonds is very slight. For all roads there was a total of $2,634,000,000 of capital stock, or 31½ per cent. of the total, on which no dividends were paid. Of the funded debt of American roads, excluding only equipment trust obligations, interest was not paid in 1911 on $153,000,000, but this constituted only 1.56 per cent. of the total. How the various security issues ranked in point of safety is shown clearly.

Of the vast total of mortgage bonds, $87,188,000, or only one-half of 1 per cent., did not receive interest in 1911, while 88 per cent. received 4 per cent. or more. Of collateral trust bonds only one-quarter of 1 per cent. of the outstanding failed to receive interest, while of plain bonds, debentures and notes, there was a total of $25,000,000, or 2.64 per cent. of the amount outstanding, that received nothing. Income bonds, interest on which is payable only if earned, and in that respect little better than the ordinary preferred stock, made a sorry showing, as $55,000,000, or slightly more than one-third of the aggregate, did not get any return.

While the divisions are not exactly the same, the Commission's report for the Eastern District of the United States includes in a general way about the same lines as the official classification territory in which the carriers are asking for 5 per cent. increase in freight rates. It is interesting to note that while the roads in this district paid $136,000,000 in dividends out of their current income in 1911, they, nevertheless, had to draw upon previous surplus for $26,000,000 of their stock payments. In this they were very moderate as compared with the Western district, which drew upon surplus for $122,000,000. In the previous year, as nearly as can be told from a different system of classification followed then, the Eastern roads used nearly $38,000,000 of their previously accumulated surplus to pay dividends.

The average ton mile rate charged the country over was exactly the same in 1911 as in 1902, but in between were several years when the rate was higher. In 1911 the roads averaged 7.5 mills per ton per mile. The Eastern lines got an average of 6.4 and the Western an average of 9.6, the Southern carriers coming beteen with an average of 7.09 mills.

In the passenger business, as well, the Eastern roads averaged considerably less than those in other sections of the country, a disparity which is in part explained by the enormous amount of commuting business done around Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston. The average fare paid per mile by passengers in the Eastern district was 1.77 cents, as compared with 2.1 cents in the South and a like amount in the West. The average journey per passenger was twenty-five miles in the East, thirty-five miles in the South, and fifty miles in the West.

Commenting yesterday upon the death of John H. Marble of the Interstate Commerce Commision, President W. C. Brown, who is shortly to lay down his duties with the New York Central in order to get back to an easier life upon the farm, said that it should be warning to Mr. Marble's associates and to the Government itself against overburdening the commission with work. From his observation, Mr. Brown said, every member of the commission was worked far beyond the measure of his strength, and he felt that some way should be found, either by increasing the membership of the commission or by providing more and better help, to relieve the Commissioners of the great amount of detail work imposed upon them.

Mr. Brown's remarks gain force from the study of the report of the commission's activities for a year, as reflected by the latest volume. This contains 700 pages of detailed statistics. The report is put out in new form, with pages twice the size of those used in preceding years.

TO AID WIDOWED MOTHERS.

First of Two Entertainments to be Held at the Astor.

The first of two entertainments for the benefit of the Widowed Mothers' Fund will be given in the Hotel Astor at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The entertainment to-day will consist of dances by professional performers, followed by general dancing until 6 o'clock in the evening. Then the floor will be cleared and prizes will be awarded to the best dancers. Mr. and Mrs. S. Baruch will be the judges. Here is a list of the box holders: Mrs. Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. William Einstein, Mrs. Lewis Wolff, Mrs. Charles J. Oppenheim, Mrs. Jacob Wertheim, Mrs. Samuel Samuels, Mrs. Henry Zuckerman, Mrs. R. Fleischeimer, Mrs. A. Stein, Mrs. J. Bloomingdale, Mrs. Kruberg, Mrs. Harry Kraft, Miss Annette Kohn, Mrs. H. Bodenheimer, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheimer, Mrs. Schinasi, and Mrs. M. Friedsam.

The second entertainment on Dec. 8 will consist of moving pictures. The films showing Sarah Bernhardt as Queen Elizabeth will be exhibited.

ing them into the basis of the great speculation which resulted in the contract of cancellation, Peruvian paper rose to 10.

As a consequence, though no one can accuse Peru of dishonesty or disparage her credit as a nation, the bonds of her loans represented, in 1888 and 1889, only £3,268,882.

The project of adjustment of the external debt was presented for the first time toward the end of 1878, and was even submitted in the form of a Bill for the consideration of the Legislative Chambers, proposing the transference of the State railways for a fixed sum which should be paid in bonds of the external debt at 40, that is to say, with the discount of 60 per cent. at which they were quoted in the European markets.

Putting aside the cost of the railway from Pisco to Ica, which figured as £264,680, the total of the bonds which it was proposed to redeem by means of this operation was £41,600,000.

According to this project the Government was to promote the formation of limited companies which should acquire and exploit each of the existing lines, providing, to addition to the price of the railways, the capital necessary to complete and operate them, which was estimated at £8,560,000.

The following figures give an accurate idea of this vast financial plan:—

Railways.	Bonds in Circulation. £	Admitted at 40 %. £	Effective Capital. £	Total Capital. £
Callao to Oroya	12,000,000	4,800,000	1,200,000	6,000,000
Mollendo to Arequipa, Puno, and Santa Rosa	21,000,000	8,400,000	1,600,000	10,000,000
Pacasmayo to La Vina	3,000,000	1,200,000	800,000	1,600,000
Chimbote to Yuramarca	2,500,000	1,000,000	400,000	1,400,000
Ilo to Moquegua	2,400,000	960,000	40,000	1,000,000
Lima to Chancey	700,000	280,000	20,000	300,000
	41,600,000	16,640,000	3,560,000	20,200,000

The project referred to estimated that the capital for the Pisco-Ica railway should be £800,000, and should be constituted with the bonds of the loan issued for its construction, at issue price, plus 10 per cent. in cash and the remainder in bonds of the external debt taken at 14 per cent.

From what has been explained it follows that in 1878 the value of the State railways, with the exception of the Pisco line, was considered to be £16,640,000.

Deducting from this amount the cost of the line which was destroyed during the war of 1879-81, and adding the cost of the Salaverry Railway (£680,000), and of the Paita-Piura line (£389,000), we obtain the value of all the railways which have been the object of the Peruvian Corporation's negotiation.

Estimate of 1878	£15,680,000
Pisco Railway	264,680
Salaverry Railway	680,000
Paita Railway	889,000
	£17,016,680

If to the price of the railways ceded by Peru to the Peruvian Corporation be added the amounts which Chile has paid to the Corporation on account of the guano, it will be seen that this institution has received in exchange for the bonds representative of the loan of 1870 and 1872 an effective value of £18,204,628, in the following form:—

Value of the Railways	£17,013,680
In Cash	560,948
In Chilean Bonds	630,000

Or the equivalent of 55 2-3 per cent. of the nominal value of the loans in question, although, as I have said, these represented in 1888 only £3,268,832 of their original value.

According to the project of adjustment of 1878, Peru, acting as an entirely solvent entity, was to cede to the holders of the bonds of the two loans the railways existing at that date, thereby cancelling absolutely and definitely the whole external debt of Peru, and reserving for herself the enormous nitrate wealth of Tarapaca, which amounted to several millions of pounds sterling, and, in addition, something like 7,000,000 tons of guano, of which the price fluctuated between £8 4s and £12 12s per ton.

A DISASTROUS WAR.

Instead of which, Peru, rendered insolvent by the disasters of the war of the Pacific, contracted in 1890 for the cancellation of her external debt by paying to the bondholders more than 55 per cent. of the nominal value of the loans of 1870 and 1872, delivered over to them 2,000,000 tons of guano, and, at the same time, bound herself to pay them for 30 years an annual sum of £80,000, which amounts to a total payment of £2,400,000.

This enormous difference is not diminished by the fact that the present cession of the railways is for the term of 83 years and not in perpetuity, for according to the project of adjustment of 1878, Peru would be in a position, and possess the means, to construct for account of the State "penetration lines" which would have favored the incipient national industries by cheapening the freights; whereas to-day, lacking funds wherewith to construct such lines, we are left at the mercy of freight rates which are well-nigh prohibitive, and condemned to contemplate the mining and agricultural industries struggling to transport their products to the consuming markets of the coast.

The first project meant the cancellation of all our external debts, while the contract of 1890 deprives Peru of 2,000,000 tons of guano which should have been applied to the national agriculture, burdens the Estimates with £80,000 a year, and in spite of all this leaves pending the claims of Dreyfus and other contractors, which demand the payment of several millions of soles.

A LIST OF LOANS.

In the year 1906, that is to say, a third of a century since the last foreign loan, Peru again knocked at the doors of credit in Europe, issuing bonds for the total of £600,000, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum, in order to pay the Banco Aleman Transatlantico the sum of £540,000 advanced to the Government in the form of a loan.

On December 11, 1909, the Government issued a second loan, which amounted to £1,200,000, and with part of which were amortized the loan of £600,000 and the loan of £400,000 effected by the Bank of Peru and London towards the end of 1908.

On April 5, 1910, the Government was compelled to arrange a third loan, which amounted to £340,000, and was specially guaranteed by the proceeds of the alcohol impost. This loan, which bore interest of 6 per cent. per annum, has been paid by the present Administration with the sum of £484,186.3.27.

The loan of 1909, placed at 84 per cent., bears 5½ per cent. interest with 1½ per cent. amortization yearly, and is guaranteed by the proceeds of the salt tax created by the law of January 11, 1896. To sum up, there is at present no other foreign debt pending than that which arises out of this last loan, and which amounted on May 31 to £1,137,830.

THE UNLEARNT LESSON.

Social authorities in the rich and fortunate countries which most successfully resist the attacks of adversity in epochs of political, economical, or social distress have recourse, as a means of avoiding the evil, to the method of restoration which consists in returning to the country agitated by such disturbances the customs of prosperous times, improved by imitating those of the freer and more advanced countries

In Peru, unfortunately, the efforts of the governing class in this direction have not made themselves felt in a practical and energetic manner, and if it is true that the customs of the period of national prosperity have not been improved by the imitation of the habits and principles which regulate the political and administrative life of the countries of advanced civilization, it is also true that the errors into which we fell half a century ago have not been to us a lesson sufficient to guide the public administration in conformity with ideals which led to success and which make nations great.

These reflections occur spontaneously and irrestrainably upon contemplating what is happening with one of the sources of our fiscal wealth—guano, which is exported to fertilize foreign soils and render them productive, while the national agriculture languishes, producing less than we require for our own subsistence.

From the year 1841, when the exportation of guano commenced, to the year 1879, Peru has shipped more than 12,000,000 tons of the precious menure, and the net proceeds to the State of these shipments have been nearly £80,000,000.

How and in what has the public administration invested this enormous sum of money?

Careful and prolonged study of this question, which cannot but perturb the minds of those who seriously concern themselves with public affairs, leads to the conviction that the only justifiable investments are the items which follow:—

Warships "Amazonas," "Apurimac," "America," "Union," "Pilcomayo," "Chanchamayo," "Atahualpa," "Manco-Capac," "Independencia," "Huascar," and 10 other vessels of less importance, value	£1,000,000
Cost of the Penitentiary	178,800
Garden and Palace of the Exhibition	600,000
Balta Bridge	60,000
	£1,838,800

VANISHED MILLIONS.

A difficult if not an insoluble problem is to obtain a detailed account of the way in which the remaining £78,000,000 have been spent.

Financiers, thinkers, and patriots cannot, moreover, understand why, having been in possession of so considerable a sum, Peru should have had recourse to foreign loans for the purpose of building her railways.

Of all the questions which arise day by day in the direction of public affairs none is more delicate and more serious than that which refers to the spending of State moneys, and for that reason it is impossible to believe that so many millions have passed through the fiscal strong boxes without leaving any other trace than that which has been hinted, and which does not explain, but, on the contrary, calls attention to, an enormous deficiency in the administration of the public revenue. To this it is necessary to refer at all times as an example and to teach us how to proceed in future.

This is not an occasion for discussing the railway policy which the Government adopted in 1868-72, and which may have a plausible explanation in the desire to convert a part of the proceeds of the guano into railways intended to open sources of industry in the heart of the Republic; but it is desirable to glance restrospectively at the practical results of this great work and this immence locking-up of capital, now that certain worthy social elements, dazzled by the mirage of great national works, are endeavoring to induce the public administration to carry out the construction of all the railways which the country needs, without pausing to reflect that this demands the outlay of sums of money far superior to the present financial and economical capacity of Peru.

In order to form a correct idea of the magnitude of the obligations into which the State would have to enter in order to construct simultaneously, or successively, the various railroads which are projected, it will suffice to study the estimates for each of these works, remembering that very few of them are calculated to produce a more or less immediate profit.

This problem is the more complex in that some lines are of economical and industrial and others of political and strategical importance, and for this reason it is very difficult to decide which should be constructed first, should the Government possess the funds necessary to deal with them all.

ESTIMATED RAILWAY COSTS.

The appended table, which has been drawn up in accordance with the most recent estimates, gives an idea of the presumptive cost of all the railways of which the construction is projected:—

Railways.	Cost.
Paita to the Maranon	£P4,548,000
Railway to the Ucayali	2,000,000
Branch to the Coast	475,000
Chilete to Magdalena	150,000
Chimbote to Recuay	642,000
Vitor to Mages	81,828
Cusco to Santa Ana	506,000
Oroya to Puerto Wertheman	3,388,200
Electric traction of same	884,800
Huancayo to Ayacucho	1,825,000
Branch to Huancavelica	202,800
Tirapata to the Madre de Dios	2,500,000
Queruvica railway	440,000
Sayan to Oyon and Checras	400,000
Hatunhuasi to Pachacayo	150,000
	£P17,673,628

If to the total cost of the 14 railways above mentioned be added the amount required for irrigation works, the grand total represented by the realization of these works will be:—

Railways	£P17,673,628
Irrigation	2,000,000

Adding to this sum the present amount of the internal and floating debts and the obligations entered into, which is £P5,826,718, the general debt would reach £P25,500,341, which would require a loan of more than £P28,500,000 to confront the financial situation that would be created by this enormous outlay.

Such being the case, it is only by doubling its present revenue that the country could annually cover the service of interest and amortization of a loan of the amount mentioned, which service would amount to over £P1,700,000, or almost half the present revenue of the Republic.

It is Utopian to suppose that, having lost her guano and nitrate deposits, and contracted debts which amount to nearly £P6,000,000, Peru could carry out in the more or less near future all the lines projected, however desirable and necessary they may be.

A Government truly honorable and patriotic will prefer, in all circumstances and without the slightest hesitation, to reject the applause of its contemporaries when it sees the people cursing the lack of foresight of its rulers and bewailing the oppressive increase of taxation.

PERUVIAN INTERNAL DEBTS.

In 1878 the internal debt amounted to 17,465,064 soles, or, at exchange, 27d, to £1,964,815.

In consequence of the military disasters of 1879 to 1881 all the administrative services were, as was inevitable, interrupted, and amongst them the service of the internal debt.

The laws of June 12 and October 31, 1889, recognised and ordered the consolidation, with some exceptions, of all the debts pending since the year 1869 and those contracted up to 1886.

The debt consolidated in conformity with the law of June 12, 1889, ceased to be amortized from the year 1894, and for this reason there have been in circulation since that date bonds which represent a value of £2,660,645.

The law of December 17, 1898, created the public debt paper, without interest, but amortizable from a fund which was not to descend below £25,000 per annum, and was to be incinded without fail in the General Estimates of the Republic.

In accordance with this last law the following bonds have been issued from 1899 to December 31, 1912:—

From 1899 to 1903	£P907,020
From 1904 to 1908	2,722,090
From 1909 to 1912	752,615
	£P4,381,725

1900 to 1904	£P630,695
	£P3,316,225
Issue	£P4,381,725
Amortizatien	3,316,225
In circulation up to August 13, 1912	£P1,065,500

Owing to the financial project brought forward by the previous Administration, the issues of internal debt bonds were suspended, recognized credits to the total of £P238,497 6s 10d remaining unpaid, as stated in the Presidential Message of October 4, 1912.

The liquidation of quit rents and chaplaincies effected in September, 1906, created a balance against the State of	£P200,501.0.84
The sums amortized up to September, 1912, were	88,129.7.86

The interest on this account amounted in October of last year to £P165,889.6.42.

Since 1898 the general Estimates of the Republic have set aside annually the sum of £25,000 for the service of the national debt and a further sum of £25,000 for the service of interest on the Consolidated debt.

Internal Consolidated Debt	£P18.8.00 for each £100
National Amortization Debt	8.8.00 for each £100

In spite of the smallness of the sum set aside for the annual service of this dual debt, the quotations would have been less depressed had it not been for the large amounts issued to effect the following payments:—

Quit rents and Chaplaincies	£P100,520.9.54
Watson Nitrate certificates	312,106.4.80
Payment to the Gueno Consignment Company of the United States	£P1,477,088.7.42
Year 1907	£P1,477,088.7.42
Payments for National Patronage endowments in 1910 and 1912	£P182,604.0.00
In 1912 the following payments were also effected:—
Special consolidated debt bonds and scrip, plus interest	41,475.0.00
Canevaro credit	206,000.0.60
Bills on the Gueno Consignment Company of the United States	10,865.0.00
Ideem Idem	20,066.4.17

PROPOSED BONDS CONVERSION.

The low quotation of this debt, which abroad cannot be satisfactorily explained in view of the economic and financial situation of Peru, has during recent years caused the good name of the country to suffer, and this is sufficient to justify the Government's plan to withdraw the paper from the market, in order to do away with all motives for disparaging the credit of the Republic.

Convinced of the desirability of this operation, the Government considers it necessary to proceed to convert the internal debts in the following manner:—

Consolidated bonds:
Amortizable bonds:
£1,184,210 at 10	118,421.0.00
Quit-rents and chaplaincies and interest and recognised credits:
£P511,757.6.10 at 10	51,175.7.61

The necessity of paying all the pending debts and of satisfying the obligations entered into is imperative, for in no other way can the credit of the nation be preserved.

These debts are well known to the Honorable Chamber, and consist of the following items:—

Deficit from the Budgets from 1908 to 1911	£P481,034.0.00
Debts of the Ministries to December 31, 1912	245,034.6.48
Puch & Co.'s claim	130,000.0.00
Schneider & Co.'s account	251,868.4.42
Banks loan	489,800.0.00
Loan from National Tax-Collecting Company	1,245,000.0.00
Contracts of Ministry of War and Marine	1,290,686.0.00
Post Office debts	88,015.2.41
Sum for The Hague judgment	1,000,000.0.00
Various laws in force	58,055.5.00
Restoration to Treasury of the sums paid to the Banks	175,000.0.00

The internal and floating debts and the obligations entered into raise the debts of the National Treasury to the sum of £P5,904,883.1.18.

ECONOMIC REFORMS.

A careful study of the administrative manifestation of the economic management of previous years, and in particular of the management of the last 10 months, has put the Government in a position to draw up the General Estimates Bill which has already been submitted for the consideration of the Honorable Legislative Chambers.

Without losing sight of the original, eminently economic signification of the Estimates, and in conformity with the mechanism of satisfying the true needs of the State, the Government has also considered the political and juridical aspect of this work, which enters into various important questions that affect the regular progress of the administration and the general progress of the country.

Though obliged to effect supressions which may harmonize with the growing exigencies of public affairs, the Government has endeavored not to alter fundamentally anything that is established, fearing that any innovation may produce effects which are not easy to foresee.

There are suppressions, nevertheless, such as that which refers to the gratuity established by supreme resolution of 28th January, 1896, in favor of the Customs employes of Callao, and which was afterward extended to the employes of the other Customs Houses of the Republic, that the Government has considered necessary, yielding to motives of a high order connected with the honor of the country and a proper and equitable administration.

If it is an indispensable condition of a good financial system to take precautions against the growth of the spirit of fiscalism which sees only the immediate interests of the State and usually ignores those of the contributors, it is from all points of view inadmissible to introduce strict private interest into public affairs, and is calculated to create disturbances of various kinds in the normal progress of the fiscal administration.

After what has been explained all argument to the contrary would appear to be untenable, the more so when it is remembered that the Customs House bounty is of a progressive character, increasing each year beyond what may be considered a reasonable sum.

There is therefore no plausible reason for maintaining in favor of the Customs House employes an exception in every way at variance with equity and with administrative convenience.

This, however, is certainly not the case with relation to the employes of the Ministries of the Treasury, Government, Foreign Affairs and "Fomento," and to the claim which for years has been put forward in their favor for recognition that the posts which they occupy are not, as regarded by the law of 30th April, 1875, mere commissions.

CLAIMS OF CIVIL SERVANTS.

To declare by legislative mandate that the offices of all the Ministries are titulary is an act of elementary justice, and it is really desirable from the point of view of the public that the nation's servants should be protected in this way.

The Government further considers that the only way of avoiding the access to the public offices of favored mediocrities and routinists is to recognize in favor of the servants who are known to be clever and honorable the rights which the existing laws concede to the employes of the Ministries of Justice and War.

Only by guaranteeing to the servants of the nation a provision for their honored and tranquil old age, and the assurance that when they die their families will be able to count upon the means of subsistence, can the State hope to secure good workers from the moral and intellectual point of view.

By means of the following tables the Honorable Representatives will be able to appreciate the numerical difference between the Estimates of 1912, which were prorogued until the present year, and the project of Estimates put forward by the Treasury Minister:—

REVENUE.

According to the figures given above, the estimate of the revenue of the coming year shows an increase of £P234,440.1.10 over the revenue which was estimated for 1912.

The sources which are calculated to produce less than in 1912 are the Fluvial Custome Houses, the wharves, and the education funds, while the sources which it is estimated will produce more are the maritime Customs, taxes, monopolies, various revenues, telegraphs, post offices, deposits and consignments, Bellavista cereal deposits and wireless telegraphy.

In figures the result is as follows:—

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

If the stock market as a whole, at the present level of prices, has discounted what is adverse in the situation that fact is by no means generally recognized in the financial community. The course of prices must be judged in the light of the prevalence of much pessimism among Stock Exchange traders as well as in the light of the more impersonal factors which enter into the situation. Only a month ago nearly as much business was done on the Stock Exchange in a single day as was done all last week. Trading fell to the lowest volume recorded since the middle of July and during many hours of last week the market was stagnant. Prices, measured by the general level of quotations, rose a little on two days out of the six and declined a little on the other four. The net result for the week, a decline of about half a point in the average price of fifty issues, was perhaps as much the product of the prevailing bearishness among traders as of any larger influence which was dicussed as the stock market dragged itself through the week. That decline might be attributed to a variety of other influences, to distrust caused by the facts which were brought out by the Frisco investigation, to uneasiness over the Mexican situation, or to the increasing signs of trade recession, but the trouble would be that any or all of these, if they were really the dominant influence, might be expected to have brought about a larger change in the level of prices than that which actually occurred. It has seemed necessary, in fact, on many occasions recently to account for the market's action by the assumption that it had already discounted the expected influence of such adverse factors as have for some time been matters of common discussion. This, however, is not an assumption which many traders are at the moment disposed to accept. Under the circumstances the small declines of recent days during a period of extreme dullness are not in themselves sufficient to controvert the view which a few observers of financial affairs have recently been disposed to express, namely, that Wall Street has anticipated the very events which are now occurring in other quarters. This idea finds, perhaps, more adherents outside of Wall Street than in it. Expression was given in trade circles last week to the view that general business is now being subjected to the setback which Wall Street has been experiencing in recent months. Among the few in the financial district who adopt this same estimate of Wall Street's present position are some who went so far last week as to predict that great improvement in the volume of security trading would not have to be very long awaited. But such optimistic expressions along this line as one is now hearing in Wall Street are scarcely more than a leaven in a vast mass of pessimism.

Even at the expense of much repetition it is worth while for all interested to bear constantly in mind, in respect to the general trade position, with particular reference to its further influence upon the securities markets, that there has been no sign of overexpansion in manufacturing, but to the contrary, that production has been kept unusually close to the actual requirements. The head of an important commercial house pointed out last week that, so far as his experience went, and it is very wide, stocks of dry goods, relatively to actual current demands, were never as small as they are at present. In the copper trade stocks of the metal are very much smaller than they were a year ago, and in the steel trade, according to authoritative organs of that industry, producers and jobbers have been running so close to the demands of actual consumption that unsold supplies have become very small. Such facts are as important as an element in judging the outlook at large as the extent of the present curtailment of production in certain important lines. Certainly they are essential in any estimate of the duration of the slowing down which is now under way.

It is because a somewhat parallel situation exists in the securities markets themselves that the even tenor of the stock market was not disturbed last week by the wanton circulation of rumors of many impending failures. So quickly did these rumors subside when the Stock Exchange announced its desire to have these reports traced to their source that it was a fair inference that they had no basis at all in most cases, and very little in any. But unfounded as they were they would almost certainly have caused disturbance had the stock market been in an extended position. If there is any overextension it is much more likely to be for the short than for the long account, as the idleness of most Stock Exchange houses during recent months must pretty well indicate. Even under such circumstances the stock market is not free, of course, from the danger of further depression should any unexpected adverse factor present itself of sufficient importance to override the present relatively light demand for stocks. On the other hand, it is a situation which leaves the stock market more or less indifferent to those unfavorable factors which through [illegible] discussion have lost all appearance of novelty.

Under the circumstances it was perhaps natural that matters which interested Wall Street last week were discussed with relatively little association with the stock market itself. There were one or two matters which it was unfortunate that the financial community was called upon to discuss at all. Prominent among these stands out the facts which were brought out in the Frisco investigation. It is well, however, that those facts have been clearly brought out if for no other reason than that they may be saliently presented as things to be avoided in the future. A closer watch on their property by the stockholders themselves doubtless would have prevented at least some of the transactions which are now coming under censure because of their having been made the medium of large personal profits by some of the road's Directors. As it is the feeling prevailed last week that the facts brought into clear relief by this investigation—they had long been matters of general knowledge in the financial community—will strengthen sentiment in favor of the enforcement of greater publicity in respect to financial operations of the railroads. The ill days which have come upon the New Haven are in some ways being associated in the public mind with the plight in which the 'Frisco system now finds itself as a cause for distrusting securities. There is need of discrimination, which unfortunately the public cannot be counted upon to display to as great an extent as needed in drawing inferences from the misfortunes which have been encountered by these railroads. Such things make progress from depression in the security market slower than it need be.

Quite possibly the stock market will take very little present heed of the fact, but to-day will mark interesting stages in two matters of country-wide importance. The Interstate Commerce Commission will hear to-day the outline of the railroads' arguments in support of their application for a 5 per cent. increase in their freight rates, and the Senate will open debate on the currency bills which have come to it from the committee which divided on the bill which was sent up from the House. It is now definitely accepted that the present special session will merge into the regular session before there will be any chance to complete the Senate's debate on the currency question. The discussion of this most important matter will be interrupted by the convening of the regular session which has work already mapped out for it and consideration of the currency measure will necessarily go over into the new year. Fortunately, any delay which this may involve will be more than compensated for by the chance which will thus be presented for further improvement in this most important proposal of law. So far as the railroads' rate increase application is concerned they and the financial community are hopeful that the Commerce Commission will act favorably upon it. The current showing of the railroads is looked upon as strongly supporting the railroads' contention that they are entitled to higher rates. The financial delinquencies of a few should not be made to weigh against the legitimate claims of the great majority.

Of the money market situation it may be said that this centre is in an unusually strong position. This week will see the preparations for the Dec. 1 disbursements, which, according to present indications, can be provided for with very little inconvenience to the market. The placing last week of the new issue of New Haven notes will lessen the burden which the paying off of the $40,000,000 notes of that road, which mature on Dec. 1, will put upon the money market. With the exception of this New Haven issue there are no known important payments to be made on that day outside of the regular interest and dividend disbursements. One of the signs of the times in respect to the money market is seen in the great ease with which the New Haven notes were placed, and a reflection of the investment situation, more strictly speaking, was found in the very ready response which was made to the offering of the New York Connecting Railway bonds, an issue guaranteed by both the New Haven and the Pennsylvania. These forty-year bonds were offered on a 4.80 per cent. basis and were all disposed of by the bankers offering them within twenty-four hours of their announcement. Such incidents help to relieve the monotony of a very quiet general bond market, and point, perhaps, to the approach of the much wider demand for bonds which some have been expecting to develop in the not distant future.

BERLIN QUIET; MONEY EASY.

Speculation Contracted—Wait for New Factors to Improve Market.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—The Boerse was extremely quiet all week, but fairly firm. Saturday brought a slight strengthening, due chiefly to an improvement on the German iron market and increasing easiness of money.

Krupps' declaration of a dividend of 14 per cent. against 12 per cent. last year had no apparent effect.

The market is still entirely in the hands of professionals. Easiness of money is due chiefly to the immensely contracted speculation and consequent small demands.

Reports of an approaching financial stringency in Russia reacted unfavorably here, where investors are heavily interested in Russian securities.

There is no reason to expect an early betterment unless some entirely unlooked for factor develops.

DEPRESSION IN PARIS.

Uncertainty as to Mexico and French Loan Unfavorable Factors.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The bugbear of the Bourse last week was the attitude of the Budget Commission regarding the French loan—opposition to the Government's proposals having paralyzed the markets, especially as no external stimulus came from Wall Street, obsessed with the Mexican situation, or from London, preoccupied with its own troubles.

The quiet opening at the beginning of the week was not surprising, in view of the completion of settlement arrangements. Mexican securities fell on account of disquieting rumors, but the strong New York bank statement and the ease of money conditions in the United States were favorable influences. Coppers fluctuated; Rio Tintos strengthened on confirmation of the report that the strike at Huelva was ended, and closed the week nineteen points down on account of the fall in the price of copper in London. French rentes fell on fears of a miners' strike in the North. At the close general weakness was manifest, and the tone was one of depression on account of the vote of the Budget Commission and fears of a long-drawn and acrimonious discussion in the Chamber, the Opposition being inspired by political motives due to the nearness of the elections.

LONDON MARKET STAGNANT.

But Operators Hope to See the End of the Depression This Week.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Last week apathy and stagnation ruled the London stock markets, and similar conditions are reported from Paris, Berlin, and Vienna. A twofold excuse is given for the prevailing depression: The Mexican uncertainty, which numbs New York, and the pending French loan, which keeps Paris back. Old Stock Exchange members cannot recall a period of gloom so prolonged and so intense; but the end is believed to be in sight.

Saturday found the markets more cheerful, although, apart from home railways and rubber, there was no appreciable increase in the volume of business. This, it is hoped, will be remedied when the new account opens this week. If no setback of importance occurs between now and Tuesday the bulls will be well on top, and this should help the expected revival.

DISMISSES LABOR LAW CASE

Court Says Statute Doesn't Cover Women in Hotel Laundry.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Nov. 23.—Justice of the Peace Charles F. Gittens of this place dismissed yesterday an action to test the labor law regarding the hours of employment for women, which was brought by the State against the J. J. Lannin Company, proprietors of the Garden City Hotel. He holds that the laundry run by the hotel is not a factory, and that the law does not apply, therefore, to the women who work in it.

The action was based on an inspection of the laundry made by Joseph J. Orme, a representative of the State Labor Department, on Sunday, Aug. 31. The Inspector found that Lizzie Slamkoosky of Roslyn, L. I., was working at a mangle, and he alleged that this violated Section 77, Sub-Division 3, of the labor law, which provided that no woman should work more than six days or fifty-fours hours a week in a factory. The Justice held the laundry did not come under the provisions of the law, as there was no evidence to show that any work was done in it except for the hotel. This made it a private concern, he said. It is said the case will be appealed.

WOOL IMPORTS REDUCED.

Removal of Duty Results in Accumulation of Goods in Bond.

With the approach of the date on which the protection so long afforded American wool industries will be removed under the new tariff, business interests in and around Boston, which is the centre of woollen manufactures, are beginning to estimate the effect on trade.

Wool and wool waste become free of duty on Dec. 1. The lower duties on woolen goods and on tops and yarns take effect a month later. The approaching removal of the duties has caused a restriction of entries so far this year to about half the volume for the corresponding period a year ago, while foreign wools held in bond have accumulated to a total approximately equivalent to the amount entered.

It is believed that the initial effect of the new tariff arrangements may be looked for in the releasing of a considerable part of this bonded wool. Further wool trade developments under the new law will depend in the main upon the success of mills in withstanding foreign competition in the finished goods. Under the circumstances, the wool dealers have been cautious about commitments and this attitude is likely to continue for some time. A factor in the situation is the unusual quantity of wool held on consignment, the growers having been unwilling thus far, in many cases, to accept the conservative offers made them.

Some pressure of competition is expected, especially in the finer goods, but it is generally felt that American mills will be able to withstand reasonably well any probable foreign rivalry in the great mass of medium-priced goods with which they are mainly concerned.

"Whether the removal of the wool duties will mean an increasing proportion of foreign wools in domestic manufacture is a question to be decided in the main, apparently, by American sheep-growers," says the First National. "The mills will not be in a hurry to substitute foreign wools for those of domestic growth, which they have been accustomed to use, but dissatisfaction with prices among the sheep-growers may cause an increasing tendency toward the selling of mutton rather than wool, and to such an extent, at least, increased importation will be invited. Little inducement exists at the moment for any forcing of foreign wool on American users, the market here being on a lower range than abroad. The tendency, in fact, is in a contrary direction, for a few small lots of domestic wools have recently been sold for export.

"It is of interest to note that the most pronounced effect of the Gorman-Wilson law in promoting importations of wool was not seen until shortly before the restoring of the duty under the Dingley law, in late July of 1897. During the earlier part of 1897 large quantities of foreign wool were brought in, free of duty, the importers securing substantial profits after the duty had taken effect. In the month of April foreign receipts reached the phenomenal total of 164,864 bales and bags, while in August, the month after the duty had taken effect, they were practically nil.

"Subsequent figures, it may be added, indicate that the mills had become considerably overstocked in this period, for in 1898 both the foreign and domestic handlings were remarkably small. For some years afterward the foreign receipts showed only a gradual increase, and they have never since equalled the 1897 figure, while receipts of domestic wool have more than doubled the total of that year."

All stocks dealt in on a percentage of par basis except Anaconda Copper, Batopilas Mining, Chino Copper, Great Northern Certificates for ore properties, Guggenheim Exploration, Inspiration Consolidated Copper, Miami Copper, Nevada Consolidated Copper, Ray Consolidated Copper, Tennessee Copper, and Utah Copper, which are quoted dollars per share. Highest and lowest prices of the year are based usually on sales of not less than 100 shares, but where exceptions are made the prices are marked thus, *. Highest and lowest prices of the week are also based on 100-share lots, except in cases where only odd lots of a stock have been traded in. The last prices given for stocks for which no range for the week is shown are the last previous sales. †Pays 4 per cent. per annum; 5 per cent. semi-annually, January and July, and 4 per cent. semi-annually, April and October. ‡Declared 4 per cent., payable 2 per cent. Oct. 1 and 2 per cent. Jan. 1. §Including 2 per cent. extra and 5 per cent. in stock. ||Including an extra dividend of 2 per cent. On account of accumulated dividends.

'M' PLATE WARNING TO AUTO DEALERS

Secretary May Says No Track Is Kept of Manufacturers' Numbers in Owners' Hands.

As a warning against the misuse of dealers' or manufacturers' number plates on automobiles, Mitchell May, Secretary of State, has sent the following letter to all motor vehicle makers and dealers in the State:

"An investigation made by me has disclosed the fact that the use of the automobile number plates issued to manufacturers has been seriously abused. While there is no desire on my part to limit the proper use of manufacturers' ('M') plates, I may be forced nevertheless to limit the supply to avoid the possibility of private owners using such plates beyond the time allotted by law.

"The object of the law in permitting manufacturers to deliver duplicates of the plates issued to them by the Secretary of State to those who purchase their cars is to facilitate the work and assist the manufacturers in the sale of cars. It is a known fact that the manufacturers in the past have kept little or no track of the plates delivered by them to the purchasers of their cars and as a result, there are upon the highways to-day a large number of cars operating steadily under such plates in violation of the law, with a loss of income to the State and an unnecessary burden imposed of ascertaining the owners of such vehicles when required.

"This condition can be absolutely remedied by an insistence on your part for the return of all automobile plates to you by purchasers within two weeks after the sale and delivery of cars. On a refusal to comply with such request you should immediately notify this office. Otherwise, I shall be compelled to ask for a weekly statement of the sales of cars and the names and addresses of the purchasers, and perhaps suggest modifications of the law which will preclude the possibility of a continuance of this condition. May I ask you, therefore, to kindly advise me what position you intend taking in the matter so that I may make arrangements accordingly? I trust you will appreciate that my only object is to act in conjunction with you to the advantage not only of the State but to the automobile business interest as well."

The recommendations of the Fifth Avenue Association made last week that the curb of that thoroughfare at corners should be kept clear for the protection of bus passengers, pedestrians, and automobile users has already been acted upon by the Police Department. Inspector O'Brien has issued an order to the policemen stationed on the avenue to keep the southwest and northeast corners free from vehicles.

Department store windows are now being used in Detroit to call attention to the Lincoln Highway project. Miniature landscapes with New York at one end and San Francisco at the other and a road between, dotted with motor cars serve to predict expected conditions when the ocean-to-ocean highway has been opened. It is planned to have similar displays in store windows in other large cities including New York.

Among the things which "Automobile Row" was discussing on Saturday was the formation of the L. P. C. Motor Company of Racine, Wis., to build a six-cylinder, six passenger car, weighing 3,100 pounds and having a monobloc motor with cylinders 3¼ by 6 inches and a 135-inch wheel base. The car will be called the "Lewis." The officers of the new company are William Mitchell Lee, President; Rene M. Petard, Vice President and engineer; James M. Cram, Secretary and sales manager; F. S. Gordon, Treasurer; O. R. Delamater, Superintendent, and C. B. Chamberlain, purchasing agent. Other matters which interested the row included the announcement of a new tire protector by the Goodyear company and of the intention of J. P. La Vicre to place a cyclecar on the market having a four-cylinder, air-cooled engine, sliding gear transmission, and weight of 600 pounds. The car will sell for a little more than $400.

Board Upholds Raspberry Syrup Assessment of 90c a Gallon.

The Board of United States General Appraisers has taken adverse action on a protest by Oberle & Henry, New Orleans, dealing with the classification under the Tariff act of 1909 of raspberry syrup. The Collector exacted duty at the rate of 70 cents a gallon under Paragraph 310 as a fruit juice or syrup. The importers held the commodity to be an unenumerated article dutiable at 20 per cent. The board held that the contention had no merit—Trull v. Fine.

The Stone & Downer Company and Howard Fleming of Boston were sustained in protests relating to importations of unglazed bricks. They were assessed at 35 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 84 of the act of 1909 as vitrified brick. Duty was claimed at 25 per cent. under the same provision as bricks not glazed or vitrified. The Collector was ordered by the board to reliquidate the entries on the basis of the lower rate.

The board overruled a contention by the Carbolineum Wood Preserving Company of Milwaukee. The merchandise was returned for duty at 20 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 15 of the old tariff as products or preparations of coal tar. The protestants held the merchandise to be dead or creosote oil, entitled to free entry under Paragraph 536.

Collector Michel was affirmed in an assessment of 30 per cent. imposed on oxide of iron or hematite iron ore in powdered condition, imported by the Princess Metallic Paint Company of New York. The importers filed various claims for duty lower than assessed.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Bonded Factories Present Puzzle.

Customs authorities expect that the stamp for use on cigars manufactured in bond and certain questions regarding the meaning and requirements of the law will be decided upon within a week or two. One of the knottiest questions with which the authorities are wrestling is that of identifying the tobacco that goes into the various lots of cigars. The authorities have been informed that manufacturers not infrequently use tobacco from a number of bales in making a single lot of cigars. Furthermore, it has been pointed out that a manufacturer may use tobacco from a certain number of bales for a day or two and then change on the following day to entirely different bales. It is admitted that these practices present difficulties to the Government storekeepers, who will be on duty in the bonded factories. Also, according to The Tobacco Leaf, if the bales of tobacco used on one day contain various percentages of wrapper and filler, it will be difficult for the storekeeper to keep track of the amount of tobacco used from each bale to identify such tobacco in the cigars of a given lot and assess duty accordingly.

Good Demand for Spring Footwear.

The present demand for the better grades of men's shoes is about equally divided between dull leathers and tans. Patent leathers are not especially active in high shoes, although there is a good demand for tango pumps. The dull and shiny leathers have the call in the medium-grade lines, and while tans are active, the demand is not up to last year's mark. Patent leather and cloth top combinations lead the demand in women's goods. Dull leather shoes, both plain and with cloth combinations, come next. Gaiter boots are also active. Satin goods have started to move, and from present indications the demand will exceed previous figures. The kidney heel is favored for popular-priced footwear, and the Spanish Louis heel for the more expensive lines. Lightweight welts are popular, while the call for heavy footwear is limited. Bronze shoes are strong, both in high and low cuts. Manufacturers in this vicinity report that Spring orders are still coming, and that the volume of business done to date exceeds that of the same period last year. Colonials lead the demand. White goods are fairly active, with the business about equally divided between buck and canvas. The demand for tango slippers for Spring is said to be greater than that for the present season.

Suggests New Name for "Sweater."

A new and more suitable name has recently been suggested for "sweaters." Commenting on the proposed change The Textile Manufacturers' Journal says in part: "The word 'sweater' or 'sweater coat' used to describe a knitted outergarment of more or less warmth, has had an honest origin and is well fixed in the vocabulary of the trade and of the consumer, yet the word in its literal meaning is by no means attractive, and in this sense it has been completely outgrown. It is evident that a change to a more suitable and euphonious term would be of general advantage, and in this connection the word 'outer' has been suggested as a substitute. The term 'sweater' had its origin in the heavy turtle-neck garments of years ago, which were worn chiefly by athletes to prevent their getting chilled after exercise. The last ten or even five years have witnessed a marked change. From the V-neck circular sweater has developed the sweater vest or coat, and it is now produced in so many fabrics, colors, and styles that there is a knitted garment under the generic name 'sweater' to fit almost every occasion. Even if many manufacturers refuse to change their nomenclature, simply one, by adopting the name 'outer,' would gain advantage for himself and for the industry.

Will Lower Typewriter Expense.

It is a matter of common knowledge that a typewriter platen affects directly the physical and nervous state of the typist, the amount of noise incident to typewriting, the speed of operation, the clearness and number of impressions, and the life of the ribbons and carbon paper. With this in view, according to Office Appliances, a Chicago concern has put on the market a platen which, it is said, produces unusually efficient work in all of the particulars mentioned above. With each typewriter roller that is sold the company gives the following guarantee: That the sharp metallic click of type upon hardened rubber is reduced to a dull thud; that much more work can be done on a machine in a given time, because the resiliency of the roller throws the keys back quickly; that the original impression and copies are exceptionally clear, and that as many as seven to ten distinct carbon copies can be made at one time. Not the least important feature is the company's guarantee that the use of its platen will effect a saving of from 50 to 75 per cent. in ribbons and carbon paper. The roller is built on a solid wood core, around which there is a thick layer of sponge-rubber filler, to give resiliency and reduce the noise of type impact. Covering the whole is a specially vulcanized rubber sheath, which gives a hard, smooth surface that is said to withstand indefinitely the tendency to form indentions.

To Hold More Poultry Sales.

The idea of holding poultry auctions in Greater New York has not been abandoned, although the first sales conducted by the Live Poultry Auction Company in Jersey City early this month were unsuccessful. William M. Bennett, who is interested in the company, told a TIMES reporter that the promoters held almost daily conferences last week, and that they had communicated with a number of the principal poultry shippers throughout the country. Both the shippers and the buyers are now in line with the plan, according to Mr. Bennett, and are anxious to have daily price quotations, established by actual sales, instead of the present fictitious quotations that are given out. The National Association of Carlot Live Poultry Shippers, a Western organization, recently passed a resolution favoring the selling of poultry at auction, and the Live Poultry Buyers' Protective Association passed a resolution last Friday favoring the buying of poultry at such sales. Mr. Bennett said that the sales would be resumed about Dec. 10 in this city, but that the place for holding them had not yet been chosen. The first of the new series of auctions only will be held here unless the company can obtain a terminal from one of the railroads. It was reported that one of the railroads in New York had made the company an attractive proposition, and offered to construct a large building in which the auctions could be held, but no confirmation of the report could be obtained.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The moderate disturbance that was over the lake region Saturday night continued its rapid northeast movement and has passed off the Northeastern Canadian coast without further result than some light rains in the Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, New York, and New England, and some brisk winds from the lake region eastward. There will also be local rains Monday in the Gulf States, but elsewhere generally fair weather is indicated for Monday and Tuesday.

It will be colder Monday in the Atlantic and Gulf States and somewhat warmer in the extreme Central West.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Eastern New York, Southern New England—Fair, colder Monday. Tuesday fair, with moderate temperatures; moderate northwest winds.

Northern New England—Fair, colder Monday. Tuesday partly cloudy; moderate west winds.

Western Pennsylvania and Western New York—Fair Monday and Tuesday; moderate west winds.

3 A. M.	43	57	4 P. M.	61	52

GEN. BOOTH CHEERED BY GREAT AUDIENCE

Carnegie Hall Packed to Hear Salvation Army's Head Talk of His Father's Life.

WHITMAN INTRODUCES HIM

And Other Speakers Refer to Them as Typifying Religion and Law —Eva Booth to Leave U. S.?

Four thousand people crowded into Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon to hear Gen. Bramwell Booth, International Commander of the Salvation Army, make his first public address in New York. They not only applauded Gen. Booth, but were enthusiastic as well in their greeting of District Attorney Charles S. Whitman, who presided. The two sat side by side and all of the speakers who followed alluded to them as typifying Religion and Law and rejoiced in their presence on the same platform.

The meeting was a Salvation Army demonstration, marked by singing and shouting, frequent interruptions of the speakers with "Hear, hear" and "Amen," and all the characteristics of a corner service by a small army band. Only, where fifteen or twenty join in the street corner meetings, 4,000, stimulated to unusual enthusiasm by the presence of their leader, joined heart and soul in yesterday's demonstration.

Gen. Booth, in spite of the handicap of a severely hoarse voice, spoke effectively. His delivery was dramatic, his expressions homely, his appeal evangelistic. He was always a Salvation Army speaker. He used many gestures, he walked to the very edge of the platform in intense moments, he was personal and direct at all times, and in every word he uttered he was impressively sincere.

The meeting was opened by Col. William Peart of the Salvation Army of New York, who asked the Rev. S. Parks Cadman to offer a prayer. After the prayer Commander Eva Booth, Gen. Bramwell Booth's sister and the head of the army in America, introduced Mr. Whitman. She referred to his "noble and unimpeachable character" and said that it was a privilege to have him preside.

Whitman Praises Army's Work.

Mr. Whitman said in part:

"No men are called upon more closely to observe the sin and sorrow and crime, the poverty and misery incident to the life of a great city than are our Police Magistrates, the Judges of our lowest and highest criminal courts, and those charged with the duty of prosecuting crime. As an incumbent of one or another of these offices during the last ten years I have had the opportunity to see and to know that rather depressing phase of our city's life and to be familiar with the instrumentalities which are at work to help the weak and erring, to lighten the burden of those who are heavy-laden, to reclaim many who are all but hopelessly lost.

"I esteem this an opportunity and perhaps a civic duty, as well as a privilege, to bear cheerful witness to the noble and successful work of the kind to which I have referred that is being performed every day in New York, modestly, quietly, patiently, and courageously by the Salvation Army. I cannot refrain from expressing my own appreciation of your noble endeavor where I have seen you in the conflict and where I have known of your triumphs, and I know that I express the sentiment of our city and of our people everywhere, of every race and creed, when I assure your honored commander, whose inspiring presence makes this occasion one long to be remembered, that no visitor could come to us more welcome than is he.

"England has been honored as have few nations of the world, in those of her sons who have followed her standards to battle and to death, in obedience to their sovereign's call. None the less is she honored in these soldiers of the cross, who, obeying the divine command, have gone into all the world; and wherever are found those who love righteousness and hate iniquity, who honor courage and consecration and devotion, who love the cause of mankind and hence must love those who are fighting for that cause, there the Salvation Army holds an honored place."

Draws Lessons From Father's Life.

Gen. Booth was visibly affected when he rose to speak. While the prolonged applause that began with Mr. Whitman's introduction of him was continuing he stood near the front of the platform with his hands folded meekly in front of him and his head lowered until he could not see beyond the first few rows of people. When the applause ceased he began to speak. His voice was so husky at first that he could barely be heard even by those well up in front; but after he had talked a few minutes it became louder and clearer, and although it was evident throughout his address that he was speaking only with the greatest difficulty, those in the top gallery could hear his words.

After expressing his appreciation of the reception given to him and saying that it would serve to encourage him in his work, he began speaking of his father, Gen. William Booth, and the remainder of his talk was about lessons which he said could be drawn from his father's life. The first lesson was that God could use an imperfect agent in his work.

"My father was not perfect," he said. "It would grieve him if he thought we were meeting here merely to praise him. He was imperfect in health, his education was lacking, his social position, at least at first, was a handicap to him. And he had human weaknesses. But God has shown in him that even though one has recognized and acknowledged weaknesses and imperfections he can still be used in God's service.

"And the second lesson from my father's life," he continued, "is drawn from his realization that man can never be complete without God. Man is an unfinished thing without Divine help. My father was in sympathy with the works of men. He never belittled human efforts, he never spoke slightingly of education, he never deprecated laws justly made and enforced, he never spoke lightly of a more just distribution of wealth. He honored all these efforts, but he realized that without Divine sympathy they were unfinished. This realization lay at the root of his own philanthropic work."

Gen. Booth said that the third lesson to be drawn from his father's life was the value of putting one's self in harmony with God.

"I do not claim for my father that his consecration and views in his early life were as full and complete as in his later years, but I do claim for him that all through his life his attitude was 'My God, Thy will be done.' In this spirit he grew in consecration and belief. 'I have made up my mind,' he once said, 'that God shall have all there is of William Booth.'

"But the greatest of all the lessons that can be drawn from his life," continued Gen. Booth, his husky voice growing intense as he walked to the very edge of the platform, "is his proof that the moral power, the heart power is the greatest of all powers. The power of infinite sympathy, the power of compassion is the supreme power, and father's life illustrates this in a wonderful way. No idea of rising in the estimation of the people carried him ahead in the early difficult stages of his work. No man ever had less idea of his future than he. But the thing that impelled him was shown when he used to say himself: 'William Booth, where would you be now if you had been born without hope and home and help.' He once said to me:

"'Bramwell, do all you can for the helpless and the suffering,' and his voice would ring with sympathetic appeal.

"This feeling of sympathy, this heart power, was inherent in him as the quality of the needle in the compass is inherent, and makes the needle respond to the magnetic attraction. It was at the base of his life and behind all his actions. Heart power kept his spirits up in the days of trial. At first he was misunderstood and maligned, and therefore misrepresented, but his sympathy with others made him see their point of view and not become angry with them or discouraged with himself.

Scorned by His Tailor.

"There was a tailor in our town in the old days who once hung a coat in his window to which was attached this notice:

"'This coat was made for Gen. Booth, but it was returned because the pockets were too small.'

"My father laughed at that sign as much as any passerby who did not understand his motives. He sympathized with the tailor's point of view. This little thing shows how his heart was with the people. He served them with his strength, he served them with his mind, but most of all he served them with his heart. A Frenchman once said of him:

"'Gen. Booth may be an Englishman, but he is not for England. He is for humanity.'

"And this should be the spirit of the Salvation Army, the spirit behind its work. It was impressed upon me only to-day. I was riding in my carriage waiting to start here a man came up to me and caught my hand.

"'General,' he said, 'I am not of you, but you belong to me.'

"That is it; we belong to everybody, and the heart power is the power that takes us to everybody who needs us."

Following Gen. Booth the Rev. Charles N. Mead offered a motion thanking District Attorney Whitman for presiding. The motion was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Fagnani of the Union Theological Seminary, and carried by a rising vote of all the people in the hall.

In his praises of Mr. Whitman before he made the motion, Dr. Mead caused a slight misunderstanding by what at first appeared to be a comparison of Mr. Whitman with Gen. Booth. After eulogizing Gen. Booth by saying, "Moses is dead, but we have Joshua with us," Dr. Mead mentioned Mr. Whitman and his recent triumph at the polls, and said:

"We are grateful for the distinguished presence of this more distinguished man."

After the meeting Dr. Mead stated emphatically that he had not meant any comparison between Mr. Whitman and Gen. Booth, but had meant to say that while Mr. Whitman was distinguished a year ago, he was more distinguished now by his almost unanimous re-election.

The Doxology was played by the Salvation Army Band and sung by the choir. Dr. Charles Parkhurst delivered a brief benediction, and the meeting was over.

Among those on the platform were Police Commissioner Waldo, Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, Lloyd C. Griscom, the Rev. David Wylie, Franklin B. Sellers, James Yereance, and George Miner.

Rumor Busy with Eva Booth.

At the meeting a rumor spread that Gen. Booth was contemplating the transfer of Commander Eva Booth of the American Salvation Army to the head of the most important International Bureau of the organization. This would necessitate her moving to England, and therefore has not been favorably received by the army leaders in America, although the transfer would be a promotion for their Commander. It is opposed to the unwritten law of the organization for any one to express his views on a question of this kind, but it was said yesterday that if the rumor was true, Gen. Booth would be urgently urged to change his mind. The General would not discuss the subject at all after yesterday's meeting.

In the evening the Salvation Army held a religious and revival meeting in the Lyric Theatre in West Forty-second Street, where Gen. Bramwell Booth was the principal speaker. He said the work of the army was so world-wide and had entered so closely into the lives and hearts of the people of every nationality that it now belonged to the people. During the revival services some fifty men and women converts arose from their seats in the orchestra and galleries and joined the officers on the stage.

The theatre was so crowded when the meeting began that the doors had to be closed and many persons were turned away. With Gen. Booth on the stage were his sister, Miss Eva Booth; Commissioner John Lawley, in charge of the work in London; Col. John Dean, Principal of the Salvation Army School; Commissioner Thomas Estill of Chicago; Col. J. W. Rheinhardson, Treasurer of the organization here; Col. William Peart, Chief Secretary; Col. A. M. Damon, Field Secretary; Col. W. H. Cox, chief editor of the organization publications; Col. W. A. McIntyre, director of the work in New York and New Jersey, and other officers.

TWO MOTOR BOATS ADRIFT.

One Tries to Save the Other and Breaks Down—Scout Saves Both.

The motor boat U. S. A., owned by Guy Rose of South Brooklyn, started out early yesterday from Tiebout's Yacht Basin on a fishing trip. The engine worked badly all day and late last evening, when near Hoffman Island, the motor gave out completely. Another boat, the Lillian W., also of South Brooklyn, went to the assistance of the U. S. A., but her engine also gave out under the strain. The Harbor Supervisor's boat Scout was on duty in the lower Bay at the time and Capt. Fye went to their aid.

The Scout reached the motor boat just in time to save them from going on the rocks at Hoffman Island, where they would have been broken up under the heavy seas the high northeast wind was piling up at the time. The Scout towed the boats to Quarantine, where they remained for the night.

WANTS $3,000,000 FOR WEST POINT

Col. Townsley Tells Secretary of War That Long-Delayed Plans Should Be Carried Out.

OFFICERS' HOMES AND HOTEL

Also School Building and a Laundry Are Needed—Roads In Need of Repairs.

Owing to a lack of funds work on the general improvements plan for the United States Military Academy at West Point is practically at a standstill, and there seems little reason to believe that Congress will at any early date appropriate the $3,000,000 that is still needed for the carrying out of the entire building scheme, long ago approved by the War Department. An annual appropriation of from $500,000 to $700,000 would be needed until the work was completed.

At present the greatest need of the academy is eight new sets of officers' quarters for married instructors. Col. C. P. Townsley, the Superintendent of the academy, in his report to the Secretary of War, says that these quarters are an absolute necessity, and points to the fact that at this time buildings built to accommodate six families are housing twelve families, and that a number of married couples are domiciled in the building set aside as a home for bachelor officers.

"It is more objectionable here than at other posts for officers to be crowded into such inadequate space," says Col. Townsley. "The work of instructors is almost entirely prepared in their quarters, and they cannot do this comfortably or efficiently unless they can be free from the disturbances of others than their own families. Eight sets of apartments for married officers are needed. It is believed that if built on Quartermaster plans somewhat modified to harmonize with the other buildings at the post that satisfactory results can be reached without great cost."

Of almost as much urgent need is the long promised West Point Hotel, to take the place of the old hotel that has been at West Point so long. The West Point Hotel is a little more than eighty years old, and, as Col. Townsley says, it is "beyond economical repair or alteration."

"The hotel," says Col. Townsley, "is inadequate, miserably heated by some forty stoves and open grates, and is defective in plumbing—only three bathrooms for the 150 guests sometimes crowded into it. During the Summer encampment and at week-ends and holiday periods through the academic year the hotel is filled and often overcrowded, principally with relatives and friends of cadets, and they cannot be provided with the necessary conveniences and ordinary comforts of even a second-class boarding house, except in the way of satisfactory meals, and because of the arrangements it is with the greatest difficulty that these can be properly served.

"A new hotel has been urged among the other buildings to be constructed under the general improvement plans authorized for this post, and the time has now come when this part of the construction should be started.

"Like my predecessor," Col. Townsley continues, "I believe that the proper place for the hotel is on or near its present site, isolated from officers' quarters, near cadet camp, where parents and friends may be readily visited by cadets without waste of time going and coming. It is true that the new hotel on the present site will cost more than on the one proposed, because for architectural harmony it should be built of stone instead of brick, also because it should be larger."

Another crying need of West Point is the proper repair of its roads, the present roads on the reservation being badly run down.

"Funds for this purpose," says Col. Townsley, "for the last two years have been granted for only 30 per cent. of the amount estimated, and the result is just what would be expected—bad roads that are a discredit to the Government, and in sad contrast to the State roads outside and connecting with the reservation."

Col. Townsley calls attention to the fact that a school building properly equipped for the instruction of the children at West Point is also in urgent demand. At the present time there are nearly 200 school children at West Point, while the extreme capacity of the school building is only 135 children.

"To carry on the instruction it has been necessary," Col. Townsley points out, "to use the basement of the new Cadet Chapel and such other rooms as could be found about the post. This makes proper teaching and control of the new pupils most difficult."

The time has come, the Superintendent adds, when because of the increasing attendance the building of a new school cannot be delayed without serious detriment to the instruction and health of the children of West Point.

There is at present in use at West Point a building which Col. Townsley describes as inadequate for the work required, unsafe because of the heavy machinery in it, and dangerous because of its inflammable nature. This building is the laundry, and to replace it a new and modern plant is required, and Col. Townsley says its construction should no longer be delayed.

"It will require about $3,000,000 to complete the improvements desired and needed," says Col. Townsley, "and this should now be authorized by Congress."

INDIANS AND OTHERS

IN Chicago the Indians are laying claim to the Lake Front and we presume the owners are worried, unless they have title policies and then the title companies are worried.

We have heard of no Indian claims in Greater New York but there are plenty of others.

Anneke Jans—Yellis Hopper—Lancaster Symmes—the Edwards claim and more besides have been or still are nightmares to property owners.

Our title policy on your property will give you peace of mind.

OPERATION SAVES ONE.

Another Mercury Victim Dead, and a Third is Dying.

Of the three women operated on in the Bronx last week for bichlorids of mercury poisoning one died yesterday, another is dying, and the third is doing so well that the surgeons look for her recovery.

The woman who died was Mrs. Irving Pleasants of 590 East 184th Street, who went under the knife on Tuesday evening at Fordham Hospital, where Dr. Edward Kirschbaum, the house surgeon, said yesterday that the operation had been resorted to at too late an hour to save her life. She died yesterday morning.

The woman for whose recovery no hope is entertained is Mrs. Leah Portel of 1,090 Southern Boulevard, who on Friday night swallowed fifty grains of the poison in solution. She was operated upon a few hours after her removal to Lebanon Hospital.

The woman who is doing so well is Mrs. Mary Browning of 1,972 Barnes Avenue, operated upon Friday night by Dr. Alexander Nichols, who also operated upon Mrs. Pleasants. At Fordham last evening the report of her condition was most favorable.

CHILD SEES FATHER SLAIN.

3-Year-Old the Only Witness of Hallway Shooting.

When Frank Sarro, a street sweeper, was shot dead last evening in the hallway of his tenement at 2,431 Belmont Avenue, the Bronx, by one of two young Italians who raced off up the street before any one could stop them, the only witness of the murder was his three-year-old daughter Marianna, who had been out with him when he went to get a pail of beer. The neighbors, who ran into the hallway at the sound of the pistol shot, found Sarro lying dead on the floor and the little girl standing beside him crying. The police tried to coax a story out of her later, but she could tell them nothing.

Sarro lived on the second floor of the tenement with his wife and seven children. None of them seemed to be able to offer any reason as to why any one should have killed him.

BENCH WARRANT FOR J. K. M'GUIRE

BASED ON "BAGMAN'S" TALK

Record of His Request to Condit for Funds for Democrats Is Introduced.

TAMMANY HALL BROUGHT IN

"Fourteenth Street" Was to Pass on McGuire's Authority to Collect Funds.

James K. McGuire, ex-Mayor of Syracuse, was indicted yesterday morning by the General Sessions Grand Jury for soliciting a campaign contribution in 1912 from the Union Oil Company of California, a corporation doing business in this State. The offense, under Section 44 of the General Corporation Laws, is a misdemeanor, and the maximum punishment is a year in the penitentiary and a fine of $1,000.

McGuire is the leading member of the firm of McGuire & Co., Incorporated, of Syracuse, which has done much of the bonding business for contractors on the barge canal and State highways. His firm, according to testimony given by his brother, George H. McGuire, had a business arrangement with Charles F. Murphy, Jr., also in the bonding business. James K. McGuire for years has been a leading figure in the Democratic politics of the State.

A bench warrant for his arrest was issued by Judge Crain at 1 P. M. yesterday, but District Attorney Whitman's men had not found McGuire up to a late hour last night. Mr. Whitman has been informed that McGuire has sailed for South America or the West Indies. He thinks that he will return to his home in New Rochelle sooner or later, and when he does the warrant will be served on him.

Mr. Whitman left town last night to attend the White House wedding without giving much thought to the capture of McGuire. He acknowledged before he left, however, that he was well pleased [illegible] as clear that he expected important developments to follow the indictment.

The basis of the indictment against McGuire, as told in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, was the testimony of Fillmore Condit, for ten years the New York representative of the Union Oil Company of California. Condit testified, it is understood, that James K. McGuire came to him on Aug. 5, 1912, and asked his company for $5,000 for the Democratic State Committee. McGuire, according to Condit, said that he would have the oil and asphalt products of the Union Oil Company approved by the State Highway Department, thus making it possible to sell them to State contractors if this contribution were made, and if a commission of 1 cent a gallon on all material sold were paid to George H. McGuire of Syracuse, his brother. This brother furnished the necessary corroboration of Condit's story, making it possible to find the indictment. He unknowingly set the trap for the ex-Mayor.

Following the indictment of James K. McGuire there were important developments at the John Doe inquiry into graft which was resumed in the afternoon before Chief Magistrate McAdoo. Incidentally the name of Paul McLoud, former chief engineer of the Department of Highways, was brought into the case.

The new developments make it certain that the trail of graft has been followed a little nearer to Tammany Hall. It came out in the course of the proceedings that Mr Whitman's chief witness, Mr. Condit, was approached as late as Sunday afternoon and that he was warned not to mention the Democratic Party if he were called to testify.

It was also brought out in the John Doe proceedings by eight up-State contractors that Everett P. Fowler of Kingston, against whom an indictment for extortion has been returned, was a most active bagman for the Democratic State Committee.

One of the checks introduced in evidence yesterday came from a corporation and was made payable to Arthur A. McLean, State Treasurer of the Democratic State Committee. The check bears the indorsement of McLean and was cashed at the Fourth National Bank of this city.

The new information, it is held by the District Attorney's office, makes the case against Fowler much stronger. It means, it was said yesterday, that Mr. Whitman will have at least a dozen witnesses to call upon in the trial.

Arthur B Chamberlin, asphalt broker and agent for a number of corporations which sell products to the State, is the man upon whom a great deal may depend as the John Doe inquiry proceeds. He was a most unwilling witness in the proceedings yesterday.

Chamberlin was employed by the Union Oil Company about a year ago to sell asphalt and road oils. The Union Oil Company had sold some material to a State road contractor, but it was notified from Albany that its product did not "measure up to the specifications." Chamberlin went to Albany and there saw Paul McLoud, then chief engineer of the Highway Department.

"I showed Chief Engineer McLoud that the products did meet the specifications," said Chamberlin. "Then the Union Oil Company's asphalt was accepted."

Chamberlin had been employed by Condit. He remained with the Union

MITCHEL SHUNS POLITICS.

Won't Discuss Appointments Until His Return—Visits Culebra Cut.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 24.—John Purroy Mitchel, Mayor-elect of New York, refused to-day to discuss any political appointments.

"That will be trouble enough," he said, with a smile, "when I get back to New York I am resting here from the strain of the campaign, and my only thought is to enjoy my vacation."

Mr. Mitchel was worn out with yesterday's sightseeing. He remained in his hotel most of the day. Late this afternoon he visited Culebra Cut as the guest of Col. Goethals, with others of his party. At 7:45 o'clock he went by special train to visit the locks at Pedro Miguel and Miraflores. Then the party embarked in a launch and cruised about the Pacific entrance to the canal at Balboa.

Mr. Mitchel will leave Panama tomorrow for the Gatun Dam and for Colon to visit the Atlantic end of the canal. He will sail at five o'clock tomorrow afternoon on the fruit liner Tenedores for Bocas del Toro and Port Limon, visiting Costa Rica and its capital. He will stay a week there and return to Colon on Dec. 2. He will sail the same day for New York, arriving on Dec. 9.

ARMY-NAVY TICKETS UP.

$50 Paid for Two Seats, with $20 Each the Ruling Price.

Interest in the Army and Navy football game to be played at the Polo Grounds on Saturday caused an unusual demand for tickets at fancy prices last night in the hotels, clubs, and Broadway cafes, and in most cases the available supply was quickly exhausted. The highest price reported was paid by a guest at the Hotel Woodstock, who obtained two seats from another guest for $50. The average price was $20 a ticket and the lowest $25 for two tickets. The tickets are issued at the uniform rate of $3 apiece.

At the Army and Navy Club it was said that not enough tickets had been obtained to supply even a small proportion of the demand for seats. Through the New York Baseball Club the Army and Navy Club had obtained ten boxes, seating four persons, for $500 for the lot. But the club had not been able to get more than 25 individual tickets, though many of the members had been provided for individually. At the Hotel Belmont an offer of $100 was made for a box, which could not be supplied. At the Waldorf the few tickets on sale were quickly taken. Some of the hotels were unable to provide any tickets.

RUTGERS STUDENTS RIOT.

Storm a Moving Picture Show and a Vaudeville Theatre.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 24.—Between 300 and 400 students of Rutgers College, after a dinner and a bonfire rally on the campus in celebration of their victory over Stevens Institute in the football game on Saturday, started in a procession down George Street, the Great White Way of New Brunswick, last night. The first thing that occurred to them was to visit a moving-picture show. They brushed aside the gatekeeper, usher, and others who wanted them to pay for their seats, and filled the showhouse to overflowing.

The angry proprietor shut off his moving-picture machine and called a couple of policemen, who, after looking into the theatre, decided that the situation was too serious to be met by the civil authorities. But when the moving pictures stopped, the students gave a few Rutgers yells and poured out into George Street again.

The night was still young, and the students swarmed around their leaders and organized another theatre party—this time at the New Brunswick Opera House in George Street. They overcame the feeble resistance at the gate there, and filled the opera house. The vaudeville show on the boards was stopped, and several student performers took the stage and executed clog dances, while most of the audience joined in yells and songs of praise of Rutgers.

This time the entire police force was called out. There were not enough police to stop the proceedings in the theatre, but they arrested four of the students, and the rest, becoming interested in the fate of their fellow-students, quit the theatre and went to the police station, where they stayed on the outside, threatening to mob the jail, but compromising by throwing stones through the windows of the station. At midnight efforts to get bail for the students had been unsuccessful. The four prisoners said they were R. Brevier, R. Sherman, L. Thompson, and E. Prince.

BLEASE FREES 100 CONVICTS

South Carolina Governor in Three Years Has Released 882.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 24.—Setting a new record for South Carolina and bringing the list of pardons and paroles he has issued since he entered the office of Governor three years ago up to 882, Cole L. Blease has signed papers that free 100 convicts from the State prison and chain gangs of the counties of South Carolina.

With the 90 paroles and one pardon signed the documents go to the Secretary of State to-morrow morning, and Wednesday 100 men now in prison will be free. Blease has made it a rule to free many prisoners just before Thanksgiving Day. Last year he pardoned and paroled 75 men.

Among those who will be paroled are 28 men serving life terms for murder, 28 for manslaughter, 7 for burglary and larceny, 10 for assault and battery with intent to kill, 3 for assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature, 5 for housebreaking and larceny, 1 for highway robbery and larceny, 1 for larceny of livestock, 2 for obtaining goods under false pretenses, 1 for gambling, disorderly conduct and larceny; 3 for criminal assaults on women, 2 for breach of trust, 1 for larceny of a bicycle, 1 for grand larceny, 1 for safe cracking, 1 for larceny and forgery, 1 for bigamy, 3 for violation of the dispensary law.

RAILROADS APPEAL FOR HIGHER RATES

Hint to Commerce Board That Nation Otherwise May Have to Shoulder Burden.

PROFITS DWINDLE YEARLY

Urgent Pleas of Eastern Lines for Five Per Cent. Advance Supported by Detailed Statistics.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—That the Government will be placed in the position of having to take over the railroads and run them itself unless relief from present conditions be granted was the prospect held out at the preliminary hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day on the proposal that a general increase of 5 per cent. be permitted in all interstate freight rates of railroads in the region north of the Ohio and the Potomac Rivers and East of the Mississippi River.

The case of the railroads was presented by Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio and Chairman of the Railroad Committee of Presidents, and by Frederic A. Delano, President and receiver of the Wabash system.

Approximately 250 representatives of the railroads and of shippers' organizations were present. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston and Frank Lyon of this city appeared as counsel for the commission to develop facts in opposition to the proposed advance in rates.

President Willard presented arguments and figures tending to show that, as a result of constantly diminishing net revenues, the normal development of railroad facilities in the territory affected had been checked, if it had not been stopped altogether.

President Willard related that the railroads had spent in property investment something like $600,000,000 during the past three years, or at the rate of $200,000,000 a year. Nevertheless, because of the increased cost of operating expenses, the roads during 1913 earned $16,311,321 less than in 1910. The railroads not only failed to earn any return whatever upon the new capital invested, but saved even less from gross earnings, as return upon the original property investment, than they were able to show before this large additional expenditure was made.

Mr. Delano said the evidence would show that the lines in the Central Freight Association territory would have to spend in the near future millions of dollars in improvements on which they would receive no adequate return, and that many of the lines did not have the credit necessary to raise this money.

The statements of Messrs. Willard and Delano were supported by statistical data in great detail, presented by George M. Shriver, Second Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio, as Chairman of the committee of statisticians for all the roads joined in the proceedings; W. C. Wishart, assistant to the Vice President of the New York Central system, and C. M. Bunting, Controller of the Pennsylvania lines.

Helpless to Fulfill Obligations.

Mr. Willard's intimation that unless the railroads were permitted to increase rates Government ownership must follow, was made at the opening of his address. He said:

> While the carriers fully recognize and acknowledge their obligations to the public and are alive to the responsibilities so imposed, they are helpless to fulfill these obligations unless the financial result of their operation is such as to inspire the confidence of private capital and encourage the support of private enterprise, and the result of operation during the last three years is not such as to inspire the one or encourage the other.
> The problem in a broad and true sense affects all interests, and the outcome of this particular case—whichever way it is decided—will mark an epoch, because it will, in effect, very largely determine whether we shall, as in the past, continue to look to private capital and private enterprise for our transportation requirements, or be compelled finally to accept the only alternative possible.

Mr. Willard said that during the two years following the refusal of an advance in 1910 the commerce of the country showed little, if any, change, but during the last fiscal year there was a marked activity in business of all kinds and the gross earnings of the railroads generally for the year ended June 30, 1913, were the largest in their history. Notwithstanding the increased gross, however, the railroads in official classification territory continued to show decreases in net earnings. He continued:

> During the fiscal years ended June 30, 1911, 1912, and 1913 the railroads interested in this movement increased their property investment $659,862,000. The gross earnings of these roads during the last fiscal year were $1,424,119,000, or $186,775,000 greater than they were in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1910.
> The operating expenses and taxes during the last fiscal year for the same roads at $1,087,385,000 were $203,087,000 greater than they were in 1910; so that even though these railroads earned in gross during the last fiscal year $186,775,000 more than was earned three years previous, the net result, after paying operating expenses and taxes, was actually $16,311,000 less than it was in 1910, notwithstanding the fact that over $659,000,000 of additional money had been spent in the meantime for additions, betterments, and equipment. These companies apparently not only failed to earn any return whatever upon the new capital invested, but saved even less from gross earnings, as return upon the original property investment, than they were able to show before this large additional expenditure was made.

Normal Development Checked.

The result, as might be expected, of this constant tendency toward diminishing net returns has been to seriously check, if not altogether stop, the normal development of railroad facilities in the territory affected. The tables show that during the ten-year period these railroads found it necessary to increase their property investment approximately $2,000,000,000, an average of about $200,000,000 per annum, and it is certain that an equal if not greater amount per annum will be necessary to meet the requirements of the future.

Railroad managers would hardly be expected, under the circumstances just stated, to continue large capital expenditures for betterments and additions, if possible to avoid doing so, at least unless they had reason to believe that something had happened, or was about to happen, which would materially change the situation.

It is believed that the preceding statements, if confirmed, are sufficient to justify the request which the carriers now make for advanced rates, unless it can be shown that the causes which have operated to bring about such results are of a temporary character, or have now ceased to exist. As already stated, while the matter has only recently reached an acute stage, the influences which have as a whole served to bring about the present condition have been operating for a number of years. Evidence will be submitted to show some of the contributing causes and their effects.

Expenses Steadily Piled Up.

Mr. Willard cited the increased wages awarded to the different classes of railroad labor in the Eastern territory since 1910, the increased cost of materials, increases in taxes and in ex-

WILSON REHEARSES FOR THE WEDDING

Leads His Daughter Through "Lohengrin" March as Played by the Full Marine Band.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The President and Mrs. Wilson entertained at dinner this evening complimentary to Mrs. Robert H. Sayre, mother of their future son-in-law. The company was strictly a family gathering, all the guests being members of the Wilson or Sayre families.

At the same hour Miss Jessie Wilson and Mr. Sayre, with the members of their bridal party, were being entertained at dinner aboard the Mayflower with Commander Douglas C. McDougal and the other officers of the vessel. Informal dancing followed the dinner. The company broke up at a comparatively early hour, allowing the bride and her sisters to return to the White House in time to participate in the closing moments of the family dinner party.

Miss Jessie Wilson has accepted few invitations, and except for to-night's dinner did not leave the White House to-day, even to accompany Mr. Sayre to the luncheon given by his aunt, Miss Blanche Nevin, at the Shoreham. Miss Nevin, in whose charming old country place in Pennsylvania Miss Wilson and Mr. Sayre first met, entertained several friends and relatives.

Following the luncheon Mr. Sayre and his best man, Dr. Grenfell, the latter having previously been entertained at breakfast by the Secretary of State, went to the White House for the final rehearsal of the wedding ceremony.

The full Marine Band was present, giving the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." The President, escorting the bride, the four ushers, and five bridesmaids, walked from the state dining room to the platform that served as an improvised chancel just before the great east window of the East Room. The President laid aside all care this afternoon and entered into the joyous spirit of the occasion as merrily as the youngest member of the company. The progress from the dining room to the place of the ceremony takes in nearly the entire width of the White House. This, added to the width of the East Room, where an aisle is formed by heavy white silk cord, is quite as long as the aisle of any Washington church, thus affording time for the Wagner music to be played at its best. Mr. Sayre and Dr. Grenfell descended the grand stairway from the second floor, entering the East Room from the corridor.

Diplomats in Uniform.

By a decision reached late this afternoon, the diplomats invited to the wedding will attend in full uniform, thus establishing a new precedent for White House weddings.

According to one of the Envoys, the Ambassadors and Ministers are invited in their official relation to this Government and as representatives of their own sovereign or ruler. The invitation comes through the State Department, and is in the name of the President of the United States. Few, if any, of the diplomatic guests invited to-morrow's ceremony have any but an official acquaintance with the Presidential family, and are not personal friends of either bride or bridegroom. Hence it is an official affair to them, and the formal attire is necessary.

This decision was communicated to the members of the corps late this afternoon by the dean M. Jusserand, Ambassador from France.

The army and navy officers among the guests also will be in full-dress uniform, making the occasion one of the most brilliant ever known in any Administration.

Gifts on View.

Tea was served following to-day's wedding rehearsal, which was witnessed by the house party and friends who came in to see the wedding presents.

The silver service presented by the United States Senate which had not reached the White House in time for this private view, was shown to-day at the Capitol. It is to be placed with the other numerous gifts early to-morrow morning.

The gift of the President and Mrs. Wilson to their daughter will take the practical form of furniture, this decision being reached this afternoon when it became obvious that any addition to the plate, china, glass or linen of the most exacting young housekeeper would be more than superfluous.

The bride's parents will furnish the dining room of the new home in Williamsburg. Mr. Sayre's family already has supplied a large supply of flat silver.

A present received to-day was a folding mirror of antique Persian workmanship, brought from Teheran by the Chargé d'Affaires of Persia and Mme. Al Kuli Khan. It is a toilet mirror 12 by 12 inches, with frame and backs of lacquer inlaid with birds, flowers, and small cupids. There also is a superb traveling bag that is coming in for much admiration, and is to be used by the bride on her wedding journey. It is of black leather, with all the bottles, boxes, and other receptacles mounted in solid gold.

An unusual gift sent to the White House to-day was a wedding cake made at a local cooking school by a class of thirteen young women, who sought in this way to show their admiration for the thirteenth White House bride. This cake weighs thirty-five pounds and is very artily decorated in a white and pink icing with tiny orange blossoms. The young women who sent the cake were Miss Mary Greenwood, Miss Ethel Barnes, Miss Gertrude Innes, Miss Florence Long, Miss Edith Woodruff, Miss Helen Deuse, Miss Mildred Makley, Miss Stella Cable, Miss Alice Ensign, Miss Maud Rummell, Miss Alma Gaub, Miss Jessie Balentine, and Miss Edith Reese.

At the luncheon complimentary to Dr. Grenfell at the home of the Secretary of State the additional guests were Alfred Harding of the Protestant Episcopal Church; Bishop Earl Cranston of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, the Rev. J. T. Kelly, the Rev. Charles Wood, the Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, the Rev. S. H. Greene, the Rev. Randolph H. McKim, the Rev. Charles S. Steck, the Rev. J. H. Taylor, the Rev. Henry Austadt, the Rev. Earl Wilfley, the Rev. C. F. Lukens, Mgr. William T. Russell, Chaplain Conden of the House, and Chaplain Prettyman of the Senate, William Knowles Cooper, and Henry B. F. McFarland.

SAYS VAIL SOUGHT GRIP ON LAWMAKERS

Proposed Wire Merger to Enable Indepenoents to 'Handle' Legislatures, Witness Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Testimony that H. P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. offered in 1911 to purchase for cash those independent telephone companies capitalized at $400,000,000, which agreed to merge with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, to end enormous losses due to competition, was given at the anti-trust hearing to-day by Richard Valentine, general manager of the Rock County (Wis.) Telephone Company. Mr. Valentine was testifying about a meeting here when the independents were addressed by Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Company.

"Mr. Vail, during his talk, said that one of the benefits of the merger would be that the State Legislatures could be better handled by the independents than by the Bell Company," said Mr. Valentine. "He said his company was having a good deal of trouble with the Legislatures in a number of States. He added that we independents all over the country stood nearer to the Legislatures than they did and that we could handle them better. In fact, he proposed that, in the event of a merger, the handling of Legislatures would be turned over almost entirely to us."

"There was mention of several Legislatures that needed handling. The Texas Legislature, I remember, was one that he said especially needed to be handled, as they (the American company) had not been able to do much with that crowd themselves.

"The lining up and handling of Aldermen and all local boards within the State was to be put up to us also, as I recall the suggestion of Mr. Vail," Mr. Valentine continued.

At this meeting in 1911, when it was suggested to the independents that the field be divided between them, Mr. Valentine said H. P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. joined Mr. Vail in making the proposal.

The independents were informed, according to the witness, that hundreds of millions of dollars were being lost by competition, and that under noncompetitive conditions the capitalization of the telephone business might be increased.

"Mr. Vail's plan," said the witness, "was that his company should monopolize the business in sections where they had a present preponderance of it, and the independents were to have a monopoly where they were in the ascendant.

"Mr. Vail was asked," said Mr. Valentine, "what was to become of the independents who were to be driven out of business by this scheme, and he said his company was prepared to purchase all companies which could be absorbed, or which were to be wiped off the map. He was asked also how the unfair competition of his company could be stopped and he said agreement to the merger was the only way.

"In a general way, Mr. Vail's plan was to control all of the cities, leaving a fairly free rein to the independents in the country," said Mr. Valentine.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was in his box at the opera to-night when shown the testimony given in Chicago to-day relative to his alleged attempts to buy up independent companies in 1910. After reading the dispatch he had nothing to say except "Piff."

FIANCE FAILS TO APPEAR.

Bride-Elect, Dressed for Altar, Gets Wire Asking Postponement.

Cornelius Hoare of 115 Nostrand Avenue, Williamsburg, scoured Brooklyn yesterday for some trace of John W. McCann, who on Sunday night was to have married his daughter, Elinor, at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Ambrose. The wedding supper was in readiness to serve, the wedding guests had begun to arrive, and the bride with her sister, Catherine, was ready in her wedding gown when a telegram came from McCann asking that the ceremony be postponed, as he had been called out of town. The bride fainted.

Messengers were sent out immediately, even while the disappointed wedding guests were putting on their things to leave, but they could learn nothing of McCann's whereabouts, and yesterday's search was unavailing. Inquiries made at his place of business, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, in Brooklyn, and at his home, 243 Lee Avenue, Williamsburg, brought no light on the matter. McCann had been at the Hoare home Sunday morning and had gone with his fiancée to communion at St. Ambrose.

Miss Hoare is only 19 years old. McCann had been courting her for three years.

CUBA WOULD SELL DIRECT.

Seeks Sugar Consumer by Finishing Product Without Refiners' Aid.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 24.—President Menocal sent Dr. Gasteona Cuadrado to Louisiana to-day for the purpose of studying the process of making pure white sugar direct from cane juice.

The Government desires to find a method whereby Cuban sugar producers can refine the product sufficiently to sell directly to the consumer or retailer, thus obviating their present necessity of selling everything through American sugar refiners, who, they say, do not pay the prices current in the world's markets.

Friend Fears Stover May Be Amnesia Victim—Checks Sent Here on Nov. 11 to Settle Bills.

Friends of Park Commissioner Charles B. Stover, who has been missing since Oct. 16, when he went on a vacation without telling any one his destination, are now seriously alarmed over his continued absence, and one suggested yesterday that Mr. Stover might be suffering from amnesia. Police Commissioner Waldo, it was announced, had decided to send out inquiries, in an unofficial way, for the vanished Commissioner.

The fact came to light yesterday that Mr. Stover on Nov. 11 sent a number of checks from Philadelphia to New York to settle up certain personal accounts here. These checks, although mailed on Nov. 11, were dated Nov. 13. It was J. L. Lavery of 119 West Seventy-first Street, with an office at 99 Reade Street, who discovered the Commissioner's check transactions.

Mr. Lavery has been a close friend of Mr. Stover for years, and for three years was associated with him in the University Settlement work, with which Mr. Stover has long been connected. Mr. Lavery admitted yesterday that he had been carrying on a systematic search for his friend for several weeks. He came to the conclusion that the best way to discover his whereabouts would be to find out if Mr. Stover had drawn any money to pay his personal expenses. Mr. Lavery has an account at Mr. Stover's bank, and learned that while the latter had drawn no money for himself since he had been gone, he sent a check made out to Morris Rosenfeld, a photographer, of 116 Nassau Street, for $20. Mr. Rosenfeld has taken many Park Department pictures for Mr. Stover, and the latter apparently considered the work as personal.

Traced Four More Checks.

Mr. Lavery then found traces of four more checks, all in payment of personal bills. It was recalled yesterday that the only other letters that had been received from the missing Commissioner also came from Philadelphia and at the same time. One was to Louis F. La Roche, an Examiner in the Park Department, designated Acting Commissioner by Mayor Kline, and the other was to Robbins Gilman of the University Settlement, another friend. The letter to Mr. La Roche gave instructions concerning certain matters in the department and ended with the words:

"Best regards to all, and regretting that my travels keep me away, I am," &c.

The letter to Mr. Gilman contained instructions regarding the payment of a bill.

Mr. Stover's friends admitted that the sending of the checks by Mr. Stover under the circumstances looked ominous.

"On the surface," said one, "it may look as if Mr. Stover was planning not to come back. He is apparently anxious to settle all his outstanding bills and to cut himself off from all communication with his friends."

Mr. Lavery said that he was greatly worried over the Commissioner's continued absence.

"Mr. Stover was so devoted to his duties," he said, "and so wrapped up in serving the Park Department that he is certainly not staying away if he has any idea that his absence is interfering with the work of the department. Therefore the one conclusion that can best be drawn in the face of the wide publicity given to his disappearance is that he is the victim of some mental malady, perhaps amnesia."

This might result in his forgetting his official life of the past few years, and in his looking on himself as a private citizen with the right to go and come as he pleases. A blow on the head or an excess of grief over the death of Mayor Gaynor might produce this."

Moving-Picture Search.

Mr. Lavery conceived the idea that moving pictures might be profitably employed for finding Mr. Stover, and he communicated with the proprietors of Pathe's Weekly with the result that on Thanksgiving Day picture films showing Mr. Stover's activities in the Park Department will be sent to 10,000 moving-picture places all over the United States. A large portrait of him will first be flashed on the screens, with these words of explanation:

"Friends of Charles B. Stover, Park Commissioner of New York, who mysteriously disappeared on Oct. 16, have not had a trace of him since."

It is hoped that some one or more of the thousands of persons who will see the films will have seen Mr. Stover recently, and that in this way a clue can be obtained to his present whereabouts.

Commissioner Stover has been absent from his duties thirty-eight days, and it was rumored yesterday that Mayor Kline would remove him unless he returned at once. The Mayor would not discuss this phase of the matter, but it is said that unless he learns something definite from the Commissioner within the next few days he will take removal action and allow Acting Commissioner La Roche to finish out the Commissioner's term. The Mayor is disposed to be lenient with Mr. Stover, as he realizes that it is his first vacation in four years and that he is entitled to a rest.

Acting Commissioner La Roche called upon the Mayor at the City Hall during the day, but he said that his visit was for the purpose of informing the Mayor that he had received no news from his chief, and to discuss certain matters affecting the department. Friends of Samuel Parsons, Jr., who was removed as landscape architect of the Park Board in the second year of Mr. Stover's administration, started a campaign yesterday to have Mr. Parsons appointed Commissioner in Mr. Stover's place.

The dedication of Gaynor Park at 151st Street and Amsterdam Avenue, which was to have been held this week, has been postponed indefinitely. Commissioner Stover conceived the plan to perpetuate the name of the late Mayor by the founding of a park, and the plan may now be abandoned.

Earthquake Shock in California.

EUREKA, Cal., Nov. 24.—An earthquake shock was reported from towns between Eureka and Fort Seward, Cal., at 7:05 o'clock to-night. The shock at the fort caused a lamp to topple from a table. No damage was reported.

WARRANT OUT FOR ZELAYA.

Ex-President of Nicaragua Charged With Murder—Disappears.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 25.—Attorney General McReynolds issued a warrant to-day for the arrest and extradition of Gen. José Zelaya on the charge of murder committed in Nicaragua. It is understood that the allegation on which the warrant is based is that Zelaya murdered Leroy Cannon and Leonard Groce, two American citizens. But it is reported also that Zelaya is charged with having killed a Nicaraguan, José Sixto.

The warrant was sent to the United States District Attorney in New York for execution, but the report came back to Washington to-night that a Deputy Marshal had been unable to find Zelaya.

Groce and Cannon were shot by Zelaya's order when he was President of Nicaragua in 1909.

The warning that he would be sought by Government agents seems to have reached Gen. Zelaya, for when anxious friends went to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel yesterday, they found that he had given up his rooms there and had disappeared. No one seemed to know where he was. Even the close friends of the former Nicaraguan President, who were daily visitors at his rooms last week, could not be found yesterday.

HARRIMAN LEARNING JOB.

Young Millionaire Starts to Acquire Railroad Experience in Omaha.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 24.—William Averill Harriman, son of the late E. H. Harriman, began his education in practical railroading in Omaha to-day. Mr. Harriman arrived from the West in his special car and went to work in the locomotive department of the shops here. While in Omaha he will be the guest of the President of the road and live in the President's home.

Mr. Harriman will spend several weeks in the shops and headquarters to learn something of railroading at first hand without depending upon employes for information.

Some years ago he spent a Summer pulling a chain with an engineering crew, and later acted as fireman on a locomotive. Because of the experience he will spend no time now in the engineering or mechanical operating department.

ILL, RACES HOME IN TRAIN.

Doctors Accompany President Emerson of Atlantic Coast Line.

Special to The New York Times.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Nov. 24.—Seriously ill from acute indigestion, President T. M. Emerson of the Atlantic Coast Line, was placed on board a special train here to-night to be taken to his home at Wilmington, N. C. He was accompanied by two physicians and a trained nurse. The special is expected to reach Wilmington to-morrow morning.

The physicians believe Mr. Emerson will recover if no complications are caused by the trip. It is understood that the physicians objected to the trip, but that Mr. Emerson insisted upon being taken home.

President Emerson and other Coast Line officials had been on an inspection trip. While en route to Montgomery, Ala., yesterday Mr. Emerson was taken ill at Dupont, Ga. He was brought here after midnight and was taken to a hospital, where he spent the day.

VOTE SCHENECTADY STRIKE.

Negotiations Fail and 12,000 General Electric Workers Quit To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 24.—At a meeting of the Electrical Workers' Trades Alliance to-night, a vote was taken for 12,000 employes at the local plant of the General Electric Company to go on strike to-morrow morning.

This action was taken after a five-hour conference between representatives of the union and James A. Smith, general superintendent of the plant, had failed to result in a settlement of the trouble. Mr. Smith offered to attempt to find employment in the plant for Frank Duval and Miss Mabel Leslie, discharged union workers, whose removal caused the differences, if they would ask for a transfer to a different department from that in which they formerly worked. No absolute promise was made to give them new employment, however.

MRS. H. H. JENKINS, FARMER

She Joins Prof. Pupin in Big Stock Raising Venture.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Nov. 24.—Prof. Michael Idvorsky Pupin of Columbia University and Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, both of New York City, who maintain large estates at Norfolk, in this county, have filed with the Secretary of State articles of association of the Hemlock Hill Farm of Norfolk, and will engage in stock raising on an extensive scale.

They have acquired 1,800 acres in Norfolk, Canaan Valley, Bald Mountain, Grantville.

DE VILLERS GOES TO JAIL.

Larceny Charge Rises Out of Deal for Aeroplane Motor.

Yves de Villers of 1,780 Broadway, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Detective Edmund Leigh of the District Attorney's office on an indictment charging grand larceny in the first degree from the Curtiss Aeroplane Company of Hammondsport, N. Y. In default of bail, de Villers was sent to the Tombs.

The larceny charge grew out of an order for a 140 horsepower Gnome motor placed with de Villers in March. The motor was to be used in an aeroplane constructed by the Curtiss Company for the United States Army. It is charged that by fraudulent representations regarding his relations with the Gnome Company, the horsepower of the motor and the amount paid for it. De Villers obtained from the Curtiss Company a bank draft for $5,239.67, with intent to appropriate it to his own use.

BRITAIN FULLY REASSURED

Sir William Tyrrel's Visits to Wilson Said to Have Cleared Away All Doubts.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 24.—The Federal Army, moving to recapture Juarez from the Constitutionalists under Gen. "Pancho" Villa, began a general attack at 5 o'clock this afternoon along the whole rebel front, stretching for ten miles between Bauche and Lamesa, which is twelve miles south of the border. The roar of cannon and the rattle of rifle fire are plainly heard in El Paso and the smaller towns up and down the river for several miles.

To-night the Federals appear to be attempting to flank the rebels east and west, as well as engaging their centre. A heavy rain has fallen all day and both armies are struggling in the mud.

Rebels Depend On Artillery.

The rebels say they have fourteen cannon planted in a semi-circle around Juarez to guard the town and bridges, and a rear guard sufficient to hold the Federals in check, should they break through the lines.

A train carrying ten dead and seventeen wounded rebels arrived in Juarez at 8:30 o'clock to-night. The cars had been riddled by rifle and cannon fire. Robert Dorman, an American photographer, who was with Villa when the battle started, returned on the train. He said Villa's men began the battle by opening fire on the Federals as they approached the main body of rebels near Tierra Blanca.

The Federals immediately retreated to await reinforcements, and later they returned, both armies keeping up a continual artillery fire during the remainder of the afternoon. At dusk Villa started a flank movement in the direction of Bauche, and the Federals did likewise. The two armies met at the little hamlet and a desperate hand-to-hand struggle

At 11 o'clock to-night Gen. José y Salazar's command was completely surrounded south of Saragosa and his capture was expected momentarily.

Gen. Pancho Villa has ordered his soldiers to take Gen. Salazar alive, so he may be publicly executed as an example to Federal officers and Federal sympathizers.

resulted, with heavy losses on both sides.

The frontal attack on the Constitutionalists under Gen. Villa began at 4:30 about twenty-five miles south of Juarez. The artillery on both sides was engaged. A report that the Federals were attempting a flank movement from the west reached Juarez about the hour the frontal attack was reported.

One thousand mounted men hurried to Rancho Flores to hold the western mouth of the pass, which enters the town from the west. Later reports were that Villa's western flank, in command of Gen. Rodriguez and Col.

withdrew ten miles from their position at Samalayuca early this morning, reoccupied the position at 3 o'clock, and immediately began an advance on the rebel positions seven miles north.

Late advices said the Federals were reinforced during the day by troops from Chihuahua and reports reaching Juarez to-night said that Gen. Pascual Orozco and Gen. Salvador Mercado brought 2,000 additional Federal troops from the State capital and they engaged in the battle.

The United States border patrol heard to-night that Orozco with 2,000 men attempted a charge from Samalayuca around the left wing of Villa's army, with the hope of entering Juarez, but the rebel wing on the left was reinforced by troops from Villa's main body, and Orozco's forces were driven back.

The patrols also heard that Chihuahua had been evacuated by the Federals, and that the city had been occupied by rebel troops under Gen. Manuel Chao

Americans were ordered out of Juarez to-night by Col. Juan N. Medina, commander of the rebel forces there. Detachments of rebel soldiers went through the streets arresting all Americans they met and escorting them to the international bridge, where they were deported.

Col. Medina explained this action as necessary to protect foreigners in case the rebel army met with defeat.

Late to-night Villa reported to the Cuartel General in Juarez that his forces had driven the Federals from the centre and that firing had ceased. The attack on the rebel right flank also was repulsed, Villa reported. He also said he hoped to cut the Federal forces to pieces by a cavalry charge, which he intended to execute under cover of darkness.

Further reinforcements sent to Rancho Flores to-night were commanded by Capt. Emel Holmdahl, an American.

LIND ORDERED TO TAMPICO.

Going with Fletcher on the Rhode Island to Investigate.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 24.—All the Waters-Pierce and Mexican Eagle Oil Companies' employes and their families are returning to Mexico City as well as many others who fled from the capital recently.

All are greatly disgruntled over being led to leave their homes and have decided to see things out in the capital.

The battleship Rhode Island is now in the outside harbor coaling, Rear Admiral Fletcher having orders to proceed with her to Tuxpam to give every protection to the oil fields.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 24.—Clarence A. Miller, the Consul at Tampico, reports that his special messenger, bearing a letter from Capt. Wood of the Nebraska to Gen. Aguilar, the rebel commander at Tuxpam, has returned with assurances from Aguilar that the lives and property of foreigners will be protected, and that any of his men molesting Americans will be shot.

John Lind, President Wilson's representative, went aboard the battleship Rhode Island to-night and will proceed to Tampico in accordance with instructions.

FLETCHER GOES TO TUXPAM.

Admiral Ordered There After British Aid Visits Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The need of protecting foreign interests at Tampico and Tuxpam has produced a situation that may have a serious bearing on the relations between Mexico and the United States. Under orders telegraphed by Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, after 10 o'clock last night, Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the United States naval forces on the east cost of Mexico, has started for Tampico and Tuxpam aboard the battleship Rhode Island to take charge of affairs at both these places. The orders to Admiral Fletcher were issued following a visit paid to President Wilson last night by Sir William Tyrrell, private secretary to Sir Edward Grey, the British Minister for Foreign Affairs.

No official was willing to-day to admit that representations made to the President by Sir William Tyrrel were responsible for the orders to Admiral Fletcher. The semi-official explanation is that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Chargé d'Affaires in Mexico City, telegraphed that there was much excitement in the Mexican capital over a report that American marines were to be landed at Tampico and Tuxpam and the Administration thought it best to send Admiral Fletcher to those places to ascertain conditions and to give assurance that the landing of forces was not contemplated.

It was admitted that conditions at Tampico and Tuxpam, where British and American capitalists have plenty investments in oil fields, were confusing and it was regarded as desirable to have Admiral Fletcher on the spot. At the Navy Department it was said that his only instructions were to make a full investigation and report by telegraph.

No Forces to Land.

In the dispatch Admiral Fletcher was told that the Government had no intention of permitting armed forces to be landed at either Tampico or Tuxpam. A similar message was sent to Mr. O'Shaughnessy. Admiral Fletcher acknowledged his instructions by telegraph to-day. While official confirmation was lacking, everything went to show that British concern over danger to the great oil wells was responsible in large measure for the instructions to Admiral Fletcher. There is mystery outside of official circles over the matter, and this is intensified by the fact that an American flag officer, Rear Admiral Boush, second in command to Admiral Fletcher, already is at Tuxpam with the battleship Louisiana. It is believed that the purpose of Sir William Tyrrel's visit to the White House was to ask the President to provide adequate protection of British interests at Tampico and Tuxpam. The great British syndicate, headed by Lord Cowdray, has heavy investments in the Tuxpam oil fields, and there have been reports that oil wells and machinery were to be destroyed by the revolutionary forces in the vicinity. It was because of these reports that Rear Admiral Boush was sent to Tuxpam.

Why Admiral Fletcher should be sent to Tuxpam when Admiral Boush was there, was something that officials would not explain.

Around the Navy Department it was reported that Admiral Boush contemplated landing bluejackets and marines to protect Americans and other foreigners and their property, and it was surmised that this was the basis of the rumor that had caused excitement in Mexico City.

Lends Irony to Situation.

The action of Secretary Daniels in ordering Admiral Fletcher to go to Tampico and Tuxpam, assumes primary importance on account of its apparent bearing on the visit of Sir William Tyrrel to President Wilson a short time before the instructions were drafted. It derives additional interest from the fact that some Government officials have suspected the Cowdray syndicate of having furnished funds to Huerta at a time when there was reason to suspect that the Huerta Administration was in need of money. The irony of the situation is obvious if it be true that Sir William Tyrrel, acting under instructions from his immediate chief, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, asked President Wilson to utilize the naval forces of the United States for the protection of the Cowdray properties.

Thorough Exchange of Views.

Little doubt remains that there has been a thorough exchange of views between the British and American Governments over the Mexican situation, with particular reference to the invitation to Washington on account of the recognition of Huerta's administration by Great Britain, the criticisms of President Wilson's Mexican policy by Sir Lionel Carden, and the suspicion that Huerta was obtaining money from the Pearson syndicate. Whatever Great Britain's indifference may have been at the beginning, it is now apparent that the Ministry is anxious to have this Government understand that Great Britain is not antagonizing the United States, but is willing to work toward the establishment of law and order in Mexico without coming in conflict with the programme of President Wilson.

At both the White House and the State Department it is admitted that Sir William Tyrrel discussed the Mexican situation with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. Sir William is in this country on a personal visit, according to the conventional explanation, but all that could be learned to-day tended to prove that he had taken up in an official way with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan the matter of adjusting conditions in Mexico. It is believed here that as a result of these conferences he will be able to give Sir Edward Grey an intimate understanding of what the President is seeking to accomplish, and that the attitude of Great Britain in the future will be in harmony with the purposes of this Government—at least as to the extent of being non-partisan.

If a guess may be hazarded as to the immediate effect of Sir William Tyrrel's visit to Washington, it is that, notwithstanding the presence of British warships in Mexican waters, the United States will undertake to give particular attention to the lives and property of British subjects in Mexico. The matter of co-operation between the British and American forces has not been discussed, and the fact that Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, who commands the British squadrons on the Mexican waters, outranks Rear Admiral Fletcher, has no bearing on the situation. Admiral Fletcher will act independently of the British Admiral.

President Wilson let it be known today that his address to be read to Congress on Dec. 2 would be comparatively brief and would be devoted to several subjects, one of which would be the Mexican situation.

REPORT POWERS ARE RESTIVE.

Rumors in Mexico City That They Are Now Encouraging Huerta.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 24.—Rumors were persistent in political circles to-day that several European powers had given Huerta comforting assurances during the last few days. It was asserted that these nations were tired of waiting for Washington to act and thought themselves forced to do something to safeguard their own interests.

One diplomat was quoted as saying: "The United States made certain promises to Europe in order to insure that we would not interfere in the Mexican problem, thus relieving the pressure on Washington.

"When this pressure was relieved because of the belief inspired in Europe that the United States was prepared to take the situation in hand, Washington calmly decided that there was no further reason to do anything, since Europe appeared satisfied."

It was reported to-day that France was greatly incensed over the alleged fact that French citizens had been forced to flee from Santa Rosalia, in Lower California, after France had asked Washington to give them protection. Considerable feeling has been caused among Frenchmen here.

The War Department issued an announcement to-day that military operations would be started in earnest beginning Dec. 7.

The reasons for setting this date are not stated, but it is believed that operations are being held back at the present time on account of lack of ammunition, which will arrive this week.

The belief is current among diplomats here that Huerta has held back operations during the last few weeks with a view to the possibility of trouble with the United States. This is thought to account for the progress made by the rebels. The general theory now is that Huerta has definitely decided that Washington is not prepared to back up its demands, and that consequently the best thing to do is to continue the campaign against the rebels.

Several of the European legations are secretly arming their nationals and otherwise preparing to defend the foreign colonies in case of trouble here, due either to local uprisings or intervention on the part of the United States.

Great secrecy is being observed regarding this, particularly among the German and the French, who are considered to be the leaders in the movement. The Spanish also are expected to participate, although probably not so pfominently.

The German and French Ministers communicated at length with their Governments to-night, and while the matter contained in these communications was not divulged, it is believed that they related to this movement.

The Clearing House Association today began settling accounts with certificates, according to the agreement made a week ago by all of the seventeen banks which are members of the Clearing House.

A high official of one bank said to-day that this was merely putting the Mexican Clearing Houses on the same basis as others. It was stated that this would have no effect on the banking conditions of the country. In fact, however, the action was due to the lack of strong reserves in specie.

The banks prefer to have transactions conducted on a credit basis, thus making unnecessary the circulation of large sums of currency at the present time.

Want Decrees Validated.

The Finance Department to-day sent a bill to Congress asking approval of the decrees of that branch of the Government which were enacted during the time that no Congress existed. The bill was referred to a committee.

It is expected that bills of a similar nature will be presented covering the decrees of other branches of the Government. The approval of these measures by Congress is certain according to prominent political leaders.

The presentation of these measures before the general consideration of the recent Presidential elections has caused much comment here.

One report circulated here to-day was to the effect that one demand by Washington was for a concession to establish a naval station in Magdalena Bay. It was stated that if Huerta acceded to this Washington was prepared to allow him to fill out his term, on condition that he would not be a candidate for re-election.

A report was current to-day that Manuel Garza Aldape had gone to Paris to try to obtain intervention by the French Government as it is believed that Huerta would be willing to accede.

The feeling here is that Washington is unprepared to do anything to bring about a solution of the present difficulties.

Many Americans are returning here from Vera Cruz, bringing their wives and families from the United States. They seem to have a general impression that the present conditions will continue indefinitely and that there was no reason why heavy expenses should be incurred for the purpose of safety when there was no probability that anything would happen.

Some of those coming from Vera Cruz circulated a rumor to-day of tension between John Lind and Washington officials which was nearing the breaking point, since, it was asserted, Washington had refused to support him in his stand and had put him in a ridiculous position by not keeping him advised as to what progress the negotiations were making here.

It was further asserted that Lind was considering leaving Vera Cruz for the United States this week and breaking off all connection with the administration.

Adverse comment continues here regarding the action of the United States in giving refuge to the Maderos and their party at Vera Cruz and transferring them to foreign soil. Some Americans were among the critics.

Several business men stated to-day that they saw nothing but bankruptcy ahead unless some definite steps were taken in the immediate future. Several managers of large business houses declared that the uncertainly made it impossible for them to do business.

Huerta Sorely Needs Money.

The Mexican Government is forced to meet heavy payments on Dec. 1 amounting to millions of dollars. This includes interests on several State debts which already are overdue. Some of these are guaranteed by the Federal Government. A heavy payment also is due on the debt of the national railroads.

Bankers here are unable to see where the Government is going to obtain the money unless a loan is placed in Europe, which is considered very improbable. This will force Huerta to take drastic measures practically amounting to confiscation.

LIND MESSAGE FOR WILSON?

Ship Passenger Said to Have Dispatch—Chester Nears Havana.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 24.—Daniel and Evaristo Madero were not aboard the Ward liner Morro Castle when she arrived to-day. It had been thought they would be transferred from the cruiser Chester to that vessel. Capt. Hough said he had neither seen nor heard from the Chester since leaving Vera Cruz. The Havana Marconi wireless station picked up the Chester this evening and she reported that she would arrive at noon to-morrow.

The Morro Castle had among her passengers Joseph A. Robertson, who, while appearing on the list as a merchant, was said to be the bearer of important dispatches from John Lind to President Wilson.

Felix Diaz, accompanied by Señor Ocon, visited the various Havana newspapers this afternoon and expressed their gratitude for their treatment of Diaz after the attempt to assassinate him.

HEAVY LOSS AT MONTEREY.

Refugees Report 850 Killed and Many Wounded When City Fell.

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 24.—Deplorable conditions and a total loss of life approximating 850, with hundreds wounded, during the recent Constitutionalist attack on Monterey, were reported here to-day by fifty American refugees who reached the border on the first train run from Monterey in six weeks. Besides the Americans the train brought 150 of the better class of Mexicans.

Some of the Americans came from Durango and Torreon. They report food scarce and exorbitant prices asked for what little there is. There was an undercurrent of anti-American feeling, but no American has been molested in those regions, the Americans said.

Very few of the refugees appealed to the representatives of the State Department for financial aid, preferring to pay their own fares to their homes.

MARINES FOR PENSACOLA.

Daniels Carries Out Advanced Base Idea in Transfer of Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—In line with the policy announced last Spring of establishing an advanced base station for the Marine Corps at Pensacola, Fla., Secretary Daniels to-day ordered a detachment of 750 marines to proceed from the Philadelphia Navy Yard to Pensacola and take station there. Other marines probably will be ordered to Philadelphia in connection with the expeditionary training school work, so that the number of marines there will not be diminished because of the establishment of the advanced base at Pensacola. The men probably will sail the latter part of this week on board the transport Prairie.

Hereafter the tendency will be to keep the larger garrisons of marines in stations on each coast, where they will be available for the protection of the Panama Canal. The garrisons in the most northerly stations on each coast will be gradually depleted as the process of rearranging stations goes forward.

Train Marines to Run Engines.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—United States Marines from Camp Elliott in the Panama Canal Zone are being trained in running locomotives and operating trains on the Panama Railroad. It was said at the Navy Department that this was being done so the men would be able to handle troop trains in foreign countries in case of emergency.

penses due to legislation, such as employers compensation and liability acts, full crew bills, semi-monthly pay laws, safety appliance and standardisation of equipment acts and acts requiring the elimination of grade crossings. One other very important influence upon the expense of railroad operations, when considered in a broad sense, was the higher rate of interest which the companies have been obliged to pay in recent years for new money raised for improvement purposes. He added:

It is believed that in the case of the carriers particularly the cost of new capital has been made higher than it otherwise would have been by the constantly narrowing margin between income and outgo, as it is upon this margin chiefly that the railroads in this territory must rely as the basis for raising additional capital.

In short, the railroads have felt the burden of the increased cost of living like all other enterprises or individuals, but unlike all others have not been permitted so far to raise their prices or adjust their charges in recognition of that burden.

The continuous decline in the value, that is to say the purchasing power of money, for a number of years past has had the effect of diminishing still further the burden of the rate to the shipper, while at the same time increasing the burden of the carriers. This influence, reflected in the higher cost of operations, has been worldwide and has been recognized by rate advances recently made by railroads in England, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, Denmark, Russia, Austria, Hungary, and other countries.

Increased Charges Only Solution.

The relief needed, Mr. Willard argued, could not be afforded through further economies or through increased gross earnings, which would involve much greater traffic and greater capital expenditures in order to handle it. The only solution, he said, was increased charges. Inasmuch as passenger fares were fixed by law and mail pay and express rates were beyond the control of the roads, an advance in freight rates was the available source of increased earnings. While an increase of 5 per cent. was not adequate to meet the situation, it had been determined upon as small enough not to upset existing commercial adjustments and large enough to be of material assistance to the roads.

Mr. Delano spoke specifically for the Central Freight Association lines, embracing one of the three distinct railroad territories and rate zones in the official classification territory. The official classification territory as a whole includes everything east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. The three divisions are the New England territory, embracing the New England States; the trunk line territory, embracing that portion west of the Hudson and the Atlantic seaboard and east of Buffalo and Pittsburgh, and the Central Freight Association territory, embracing the portion from Pittsburgh and Buffalo west to the Mississippi.

Mr. Delano took exception to the conclusion of the commission in 1910 that the Pennsylvania, New York Central, and Baltimore & Ohio systems were typical of the roads in the entire official classification territory. Those systems, he believed, were entitled to an increase, but if the ruling that they were typical should be affirmed its application would cause irreparable injury to the Central Freight Association lines

Central Association Problems.

The conditions in the Central Freight Association territory, he said, were different from those in the other two subdivisions, as the population was more largely rural, the traffic more diversified and different in character and the development more affected by water competition, resulting in relatively lower rates. He continued:

The influences I have mentioned, which we will show in detail in the evidence, have resulted in the bankruptcy of a substantial portion of the railroad mileage in the territory, and in depleting the earnings and credit of the remaining lines to an extent which, unless relieved by prompt and substantial advances of rates, will naturally result in impeding the commerce and transportation of that section of the country.

Mr. Delano divided the territory into four railway groups, the third of which he said was typical of the whole. This embraced such lines as the Big Four, Vandalia, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Nickel Plate, Grand Trunk Western, Grand Trunk of Canada, Pere Marquette, Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, Illinois Central Alton, and Wabash, and went on:

We believe a mere glance at the map of this large mileage will indicate that it is fairly representative of the territory. In any event, we may be assured that this mileage is not influential in determining the reasonableness of rates, the prosperity, commerce, and development of the whole territory to be placed in jeopardy.

This great network of railroads covering the entire territory during the year ended June 30, 1910, earned $239,000,000, and during the year ended June 30, 1913, $275,000,000, or a gross increase of about $36,000,000; but in the former year the operating expenses and taxes were $182,000,000 and in the latter year $227,000,000, or an increase in expenses of about $45,000,000, resulting in a decrease in net revenues, after payment of taxes, of over $9,000,000 and in net corporate revenue of more than $16,000,000.

As stated in other words, the ratio of operating expenses and taxes to earnings during the same period increased from 76.3 per cent. to 82.8 per cent.

The evidence will show that the lines in Central Freight Association territory are confronted with the expenditure in the near future of millions of dollars in the separation of grades in various cities, on which they will receive no adequate return, and many of the lines have not the credit to raise this money.

This circumstance, in view of the present condition of the roads, Mr. Delano argued, presented a serious situation which called for prompt relief.

Statistical Data as Proof.

The statistical tables submitted by Messrs. Shriver, Wishart, and Bunting developed the whole situation, year by year, for the past eleven years, and showed the actual operating results during the past three years. They demonstrated that the forty-nine principal trunk lines in the territory affected, owning 53,070 miles of track, have total capital obligations of $6,589,000,000, of which the funded debt is $3,820,000,000 and the rest capital stock.

These forty-nine companies earned last year in gross $1,424,000,000. Their net earnings, after deducting expenses and taxes, were $347,000,000. Their income after the payment of interest on their funded debt was $290,000,000.

Out of this income the companies declared dividends of 5.10 per cent. on the capital outstanding amounting to $130,000,000, which was $19,000,000 less in dividends than was paid out in 1912 and $7,000,000 less than was paid out in 1910.

Mr. Shriver in his analysis of property investment, income accounts, operating revenues, and expenses and taxes for the combined systems of forty-nine roads, said their gross earnings from 1910 to 1913 increased $186,000,000, while operating expenses and taxes increased $201,000,000. Tax payments alone increased from $42,900,000, in 1910 to $54,490,000 in 1913, while the net operating income actually decreased $14,000,000. Consequently, he said, even if these companies had made no increase in capital expenditures in the period they would still have been worse off in 1910 by this amount of over $14,000,000.

Mr. Shriver said it required about $3.50 new property investment for each dollar of increased gross earnings, and for each $1.86 of increased gross earnings the increased expenses and taxes were $2.01, without any allowance for the new money spent to supply facilities to earn the increased gross revenue. In 1910 the companies showed net operating income equal to 6.28 per cent. on their property investment, but in 1913 this percentage had fallen to 5.36 per cent.

New York Central's Showing.

The financial status of the New York Central Lines was set forth during the examination of Mr. Wishart. He showed that since June 30, 1910, the New York Central Lines had added $150,000,000 to the property they devote to public use, the gross earnings had increased $49,000,000, the net operating income had increased $3,765,000, and other income the year just closed had $3,284,730 less net corporate income than in 1910.

Mr. Wishart said the New York Central dividends declared in 1913 were over $3,000,000 less than in 1910, notwithstanding the increase of $49,000,000 in gross operating revenue. In other words, he explained there had been added to the New York Central property investment about $1,000,000 a week, while the net corporate income of 1913 was less by about $800,000 a week than in 1910, indicating that expansion of business had caused a net loss to stockholders. Continuing he said:

The road has been extended less than 60 miles and only about $16,000,000 of the amount spent has gone into the Grand Central Terminal during the years. The money has been spent for improvements and additional facilities required to render adequate public service and the additional facilities have been necessary to enable the road to handle the enormous increase in traffic. In the freight service alone this increase represents the addition of 67 tons to the load of every train and the running of 24,717 more freight trains that in 1910. And yet there is left to show for this service $9,000 a day less than in 1910.

The consolidated statement filed by Mr. Wishart demonstrated the low average rate of return which the whole New York Central system is able to earn upon the investment in road and equipment. The highest rate for any year of the last eleven was 5.89 per cent. in 1910. The average for the first ten years was 5.07 per cent., and for 1913 the rate was only 5.47 per cent.

"This rate," said Mr. Wishart, "is based upon a property investment that will compare favorably with any road in the United States. This reached $52,142 per mile of all tracks, and $78,740 per mile of all main tracks. These lines served twenty-two of the fifty cities having 100,000 population or over."

In 1903, the speaker said, the New York Central was able to borrow money with which to make improvements at the rate of little over 3½ per cent. per annum. To-day the road was paying nearly 5 per cent. upon borrowed money. Moreover, taxes had grown at a greater rate than either revenues or operating expenses. In 1913 they absorbed 14.4 per cent. of the net operating revenues of the road, or an amount equal to 64.5 per cent. of the total dividend disbursements.

Burden of the Pennsylvania.

C. M. Bunting said that the Pennsylvania system had increased the amount of wages about $36,000,000 since 1910, approximately $15,000,000 of which was due to increased rates of pay. The return on the property investment of the Pennsylvania system showed a declining tendency since 1903, and a steady decline since 1910.

"Between 1903 and 1913," said Mr. Bunting, "there has been an increase in property investment account of $330,750,075, and an increase in net operating income of $11,500,533, or only 3.29 per cent. on the increased property investment. Indeed, between 1910 and 1913 there was an increase of $207,186,919 in the property investment of the Pennsylvania, and a decrease in the net operating income of $11,485,511. In other words, the Pennsylvania system was $11,485,511 short of even receiving one cent additional return on its enlarged investment."

The net corporate income of capital stock was 14.07 per cent. in 1909, 13.17 per cent. in 1910, and 9.64 per cent. in 1913, or a drop of nearly one-third between 1913 and 1909, and of over one-quarter between 1913 and 1910. The dividends paid (percentage of all stock outstanding) were 5.62 per cent. in 1909, 6.53 per cent. in 1910, and 6.7 per cent. in 1913.

OBJECTION TO BRANDEIS.

Freight Payers' League Counsel Protests to Commerce Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 24.—Formal protest against the participation of Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, sometimes designated "Attorney for the People of the United States," in the pending case before the Interstate Commerce Commission involving the proposed 5 per cent. increase in freight rates, was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day by Thomas C. Spelling, a lawyer of 115 Broadway, New York. One member of the commission said last week to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that it would be the special province of Mr. Brandeis to "apply the acid test" for the commission, to the data submitted by the carriers.

Mr. Spelling, who has asked that his appearance be entered in the advance rate case as attorney for the Freight Payers' League of the United States, and whose protest is signed by him in that capacity and also as "T. C. Spelling, per se," takes his objection "to the appearance or participation herein of any person assuming to represent the people or any part or number of them, except as shall see fit to employ him in some proper and legal way, or for himself alone."

This objection, Mr. Spelling explains, is not raised by him against any one regularly employed by the commission to represent it, nor against any sworn officer of the Government. He bases his objection on the ground "that neither the Constitution nor any law gives any person any authority to so appear nor is there any law which gives even the semblance of authority to the Interstate Commerce Commission to employ any one to represent the public, otherwise than as an attorney or other employe of the commission."

Mr Spelling argues that such a practice, if adopted would "open the way to the grossest frauds and oppressions, and open the door to perversions of official power and authority which might be thereby prostituted to base purposes."

TRIBUTE TO JOHN H. MARBLE.

Late Member of Commerce Commission Eulogized by Chairman Clark.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—When the Interstate Commerce Commission assembled to-day Chairman Clark delivered this tribute to the late John H. Marble, a member of the commission, who died here on Friday night:

"The commission assembles this morning under extremely sad and very trying circumstances. Yesterday we laid to his last rest a colleague who, by his genial, helpful, and splendid personality, indefatigable industry, sterling integrity, unswerving loyalty, and broad fair-mindedness, won our affections, regard, and esteem to a superlative degree.

"Were we to follow our personal wishes and inclinations we should suspend business affairs for a time, but the demands of the public service are such as to lead us to forego those inclinations and to proceed with the work, knowing that no formal action which we could take would add to the honor and esteem which he so fully and ably earned, and realizing that neither formal action nor words could adequately express the profound sorrow that has entered deeply into each of our hearts and that can never be overcome."

INSURGENTS TO CONTROL.

Assemblymen-elect Count on 52 in Independent Movement.

Thirty Assemblymen-elect, representing the Republican, Progressive, and Democratic Parties, who have organized to carry out an independent programme at Albany during the next session of the Legislature, held their second meeting last night at the Hotel Brevoort and appointed committees. Twelve others who were not present sent letters indorsing the independent plan. It was stated that ten more are expected to join in the movement, thus making at least fifty-two Assemblymen who will break away from party rule, if necessary, to carry out their programme.

It was the consensus of opinion of those present that the revision of the Assembly rules was of more importance than the personality of the Speaker, although the independents will try to select their own Speaker. The Committee on Speakership took up the consideration of these candidates who have announced themselves as being in the race: H. V. Hinman of Albany, Michael Schaap of the Thirty-first District, New York; John L. Sullivan of Chautauqua, Clinton D. Horton of Buffalo, Alexander McDonald of Franklin, and Thaddeus C. Sweet of Oswego. It was told that Assemblyman-elect William Sulzer has sent each Assemblyman a letter announcing that he also was a candidate. Mr. Sulzer is lecturing in the West.

Andrew F. Murray, Assemblyman-elect from the Nineteenth New York, was elected Permanent Chairman of the conference. This committee on Speakership was appointed: Henry M. Patton, Wilmot E. Knapp, Hamilton Fish, Jr., August Martin, Mark Esiner, and T. C. Crane. Michael Schaap was elected Chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Senator Dunnhamel, an Independent Democrat from Brooklyn, attended the meeting and said:

"I advise you to go slow. Don't announce your choice of a candidate for the Speakership. As long as you have the other side guessing you have an advantage over them. Lay low for a while and you will get more Assemblymen to come to you as independents. Independent politics have come to stay. The old organizations are going to pieces. Fusion and all independent movements will be the real power next year. Next year Roosevelt will be back among us. Hearst will be in the fight with the independent forces and sweeping victories are certain. Keep independent at Albany."

The next meeting of the conference will be held on Dec. 6. Several Republican Assemblymen of the city also met last night at Republican headquarters, 102 Montague Street, Brooklyn, and started a movement to take control of the Republican Party in the State from Chairman William Barnes, Jr. Resolutions were passed authorizing Ogden L. Mills to confer with the Assemblymen-elect of the other parties throughout the State in order to obtain their views regarding the selection of a Speaker.

The speakers at the Brooklyn meeting were Jacob A. Livingston, Representative William M. Calder, Ogden L. Mills, Samuel S. Koenig, President of the New York Republican County Committee; F. J. H. Kracke, and Alexander M. White.

GROCER'S BOY SHOT DEAD

Accidentally While Playing with Employer's Revolver, Police Decide.

The sound of a pistol shot on the fourth floor of the Syrian tenement at 87 Washington Street at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon brought Mrs. Mary Wahby hurrying into the hall to find a 12-year-old boy lying dead at the head of the stairs, a bullet wound in his chest. He was Anthony Aront, errand boy for Abraham Kalwand's grocery next door, and to Mrs. Wahby it looked as though he had fallen after running out of the grocer's flat just across the hall from her own.

Detectives from the Greenwich Street Station, Coroner Feinberg, and Assistant District Attorney Murphy searched the flat and examined the grocer. In the end they decided that the boy had shot himself accidentally, and Kalwand was held only on the charge of having had a revolver in his possession.

This revolver was the puzzle of the case. It was found with one chamber discharged on the shelf in the closet of Kalwand's flat. How it got there Kalwand vowed he had no idea.

The puzzle was solved when a woman tenant said that she had mounted the stairs to find the boy lying in the hall with the pistol on the floor beside him. Recognizing it as Mr. Kalwand's weapon, she had taken it into his room and put it in the closet.

MURPHY COUNTS ON ALL BUT 4 LEADERS

Tammany Chief Not Worrying, Friends Say, Over Possible Revolt.

POINTS TO THE GOOD JOBS

With Scarcely an Exception Head of Every District Holds Paying Office.

Charles F. Murphy has been "taking stock" of the Wigwam members, and his friends said yesterday that he was perfectly satisfied with the result. They said the Tammany leader was convinced that not more than four district leaders at the most would join any movement to oust him, and that the chances were that not more than two would actually kick over the traces.

"Murphy is more solidly intrenched in the Tammany organization than he has ever been before," said one of Murphy's close advisers. "A few of the district leaders were naturally disgruntled right after the election, but that feeling has worn away, and practically every leader will stand by Murphy to the finish There has been a lot of talk that Murphy must go. Well, Murphy has been going good for the last eleven years, and he will go some more before he is thrown out."

Murphy's confidant went over the list of district leaders to show that practically every one had the best of reasons for remaining true to Tammany and Murphy—that they have been taken care of in the way of patronage.

The list as prepared by the Tammany Chief's spokesman shows that in the First District Daniel E. Finn is now Secretary to the Fire Department, although his term of office expires on Jan. 1, and that he is a strong Murphy man.

In the Second District, "Big Tom" Foley, former Sheriff, is a stanch Murphy man; in the Third, John E. Fitzgerald is a State Senator; in the Fourth, John F. Ahearn's brother is Fire Marshal and Joseph Scully is City Clerk. Charles W. Culkin, leader of the Fifth, has a position in the Surrogates' office. David Lazarus of the Sixth is a Port Warden, while in the Seventh Frank J. Goodwin is Deputy Commissioner of Charities, although his term of office expires on Jan. 1.

In the Eighth, Christy Sullivan is a State Senator; in the Ninth, Peter J. Dooling is a Congressman, and William Dalton a Deputy State Superintendent of Elections. In the Tenth, Solomon Goldenkranz has a State position, and in the Eleventh, The McManus, although he holds no position, is a strong Murphy adherent. The Twelfth is Murphy's own district, and in the Thirteenth, John F. Curry holds a position in the Surrogates' office.

Michael J. Cruise of the Fourteenth, who is known as a Murphy supporter, has no position, but James J. Hagan, leader of the Fifteenth, has a job in the State Controller's office. Edward F. Boyle, leader of the Sixteenth, is Chief Examiner in the Public Service Commission. In the Seventeenth District Ross Williams is the leader, and he is the only one who has come out openly against Murphy. He holds no position, and Murphy's friends say that is the reason for his present attitude. In the Eighteenth District, Bart Dunn is a contractor, which, in many cases, is equivalent to a city or State job, and John V. Coggey has a State job. Michael J. Hines, leader of the Nineteenth, is a Deputy City Clerk, and in the Twentieth William Shannon is a contractor and a staunch Tammany man. He replaced Matthew Featherson, who warred against Murphy during the McClellan Administration.

In the Twenty-first District Leader John J. O'Connell never held a position, but he is with Murphy in the present trouble. In the Twenty-second William H. Sinnott is Deputy Bridge Commissioner, and although he goes out of office on the first of the year, he is a strong Murphy supporter. Thomas F. McAvoy of the Twenty-third is Deputy Excise Commissioner and in the Twenty-fourth John J. Dietz is a Municipal Court Clerk. In the Twenty-fifth Joseph F. Prendergast is Deputy City Clerk, and in the Twenty-sixth James J. Frawley is State Senator. In the Twenty-seventh George L. Donnellan is counsel to the State Excise Board. Nicholas Hayes, leader of the Twenty-eighth, has no position, but he is loyal to Murphy. Thomas E. Rush, leader of the Twenty-ninth, has a $10,000 job as counsel to the State Controller; in the Thirtieth Percy Nagle has a State job, and in the Thirty-first William J. Wright is at present Deputy Commissioner of Correction, his term expiring on Jan. 1.

Out of this list Murphy, according to his advisers, feels that only four might be classed as doubtful—Lazarus, Goldenkranz, Rush, and Wright—but, as all four have been taken care of by Murphy in the way of patronage, it is considered as unlikely that they will turn against the Tammany chief now.

"There isn't the slightest chance of the district leaders, or a majority of them, turning against Murphy," said the chief's confidant. "The district leaders have been so well taken care of by the head of the organization that they have nothing to be dissatisfied with. No leader of Tammany Hall ever had the record Murphy has. During his leadership for the past eleven years Tammany has had two Governors, Dix and Sulzer,

BIG THRONG HEARS MRS. PANKHURST

English Militant Leader Gets Enthusiastic Reception at Carnegie Hall Meeting.

ATTACKS WHITE SLAVERS

Calls Suffragettes' Cause a "Holy War"—Women Have Put Fear Into Cabinet Ministers' Hearts.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette leader, held her last big public meeting before sailing away from America at Carnegie Hall last evening, and the great auditorium was filled from top to bottom. At 6:30 o'clock a big crowd had already gathered for the meeting, which did not open until 8:30 o'clock. Five minutes after the doors were opened the few unsold seats had been exhausted and a few on the stage were disposed of to the eager crowd, but with that at least 1,000 people were turned away. There was no attempt to decorate the hall, the only banner being the large one of the militants, the Women's Social and Political Union, which hung over the centre of the stage, the words of the slogan standing out:

"Resistance to Tyranny Is Obedience to God."

Mrs. Charlotte P. Gilman presided and on the platform as special friends and supporters of Mrs. Pankhurst were Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Eugene Beissevain, (Inez Milholland,) Mrs. John Rogers, Jr., Miss Alice Perkins, Miss Elizabeth Ellsworth Cook, and Miss Caroline Lexow of the Women's Political Union.

Many other well-known suffragists, however, did not attend the meeting. Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, President of the Women's Political Union, was not there, nor was Mrs. Nora Blatch de Forest.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, head of the international suffrage organization, was absent, as also were Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Miss Mary Garrett Hay of the Woman Suffrage Party, and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Manhattan Borough Chairman of the party.

Mrs. Henry Butterworth of the Women's Political Union had charge of the ushers, who were drawn from Mrs. Blatch's and from Mrs. Belmont's societies, and Miss Beatrice Brown of the union sold Pankhurst literature at a table near the door. Miss Mary Shaw, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Martha Klatschenken, and Miss Doris Fowler Trow were others on the platform.

There was one man speaker, Dr. James P. Warbasse, who opened the meeting making a stand for Christabel Pankhurst's book, which he said could not be sold in New York. Miss Boissevain, however, informed the audience later in the evening that she understood that the ban put on it by Anthony Comstock had been removed. A letter from Dr. John Haines Holmes was read approving of it. Mrs. Gilman, in introducing Mrs. Pankhurst, said she was the greatest speaker of our times.

Mrs. Pankhurst spoke principally upon the white slave traffic and upon the need of an equal code of morals for men and women.

"Women will not fight for things that threaten the pocketbook," she said, "but they will fight for that which threatens life and the human race. It was when these were threatened that the women became militant."

She then told of the industrial needs of the 5,000,000 working women of England, whose average wages were $2 a week, and the attempts made to lead them astray, and said if the women had the vote they could at least force the English Government to pay its own employes a living wage.

"The English Government is the greatest white slaver there is," she said. "It is engaged directly in the white slave traffic in the miserable army of native women its provides for its army and navy in the East."

"They have flogged a few men among the white slavers. Why don't they begin with the cabinet ministers? Why do not they arrest all the men in making a raid on disorderly resorts—why only the women? I have visited your night courts. The Judges, the police and officers all men and the prisoners all women. A broken window is a small thing when one considers the broken lives of women, and it is better to burn a house than to injure little children. This is a holy war.

"There is a time when peace ceases to be a virtue and becomes a crime. They tell us to wait, but we have waited fifty years. If men for unjust taxation take lives, the women are justified in fighting for the liberties they have so long been deprived of. They say if you want anything go and tell the men. No, gentlemen, we do not trust you."

"They say American women shirk the duties of motherhood, and even men say it who ought to know better. They should know that it is not the fault of the women, but of the wild oats of men. I cannot think that men know the misery they inflict upon their wives and children. If we can make men think as we do we shall build up a beautiful race."

"Without an attempt on a life, we have so frightened the Cabinet Ministers that they dare not leave the house without protection. The Czar of Russia needs guards, and Englishmen have been assured that their lives are safe, but they keep detectives in the house, land at small stations with an automobile load of police, and they are guarded at golf, meetings, and dinners.

"It shows that even women can put fear in the hearts of men and make it difficult for them to carry on the ordinary routine of Government. The antis say that government is sustained by force. It is not true and never will be. With all your armies you cannot control the feeblest person who will not be governed. We are giving the people in England a lesson in government. All just Government rests upon the consent of the governed. You cannot keep the weakest person in prison if he will not consent. If that was not so I would not be here."

Mrs. Boissevain spoke during the taking of a contribution, and later Mrs. Pankhurst answered questions.

TWO ARMY AVIATORS PLUNGE TO DEATH

Lieuts. Eric L. Ellington and Hugh M. Kelly Killed by Fall at San Diego, Cal.

SERVICE DEATH ROLL NOW 13

Ellington, a Skilled Airman, Loses Control of Machine When It Nears the Ground.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 24.—Lieuts. Erie L. Ellington and Hugh M. Kelly of the United States Army Aviation Corps were killed to-day in a fall of about eighty feet in an aeroplane. The accident occurred across the bay from San Diego on the grounds of the army school on North Island. No reason for the accident was discovered, although a careful examination of the aeroplane was made. The machine was shattered.

"They were trying out a new six-cylinder machine," he said, "and were between 80 and 100 feet from the ground when they lost control of it.

"The machine was a new one, and Kelly was not familiar with it. Ellington went as instructor. The machine had a dual control, which enabled either occupant to manage it at will. The controls were connected, enabling the instructor to correct instantly any mistake made by the pupil.

"The men went up at 7:53 A. M. and sailed around the field for about five minutes. Of course, they were making no attempts at sensational work. They fell about one mile from the headquarters tent, toward Point Loma. The land slopes down toward the beach and is so low we could not see the machine strike.

"Apparently it began its descent in a proper manner and at the usual angle. Then it appeared out of control. The altitude was so low we felt the officers would have only a rough fall.

"A careful inspection of the wrecked aeroplane convinced us that the controls were in good order. The men were killed instantly.

The deaths of Lieuts. Kelly and Ellington at San Diego yesterday brought the number of aviation fatalities in the United States Army and Navy service to thirteen, twelve in the army and one in the navy. Besides the thirteen officers killed since the Government adopted the aeroplane in 1908, two civilian instructors, Al Welsh and Paul Peck, also lost their lives in the course of their experiments.

THE WORKMANS LECTURE.

Describe Himalayan Journey to Royal Geographical Society.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Mrs. Fannie Bullock Workman and Dr. Hunter Workman to-night lectured to the Royal Geographical Society upon the results of their exploration of the Himalayas in 1912, many of the details of which have been published in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Mrs. Workman said that the Rose Glacier, the sources of which they succeeded in reaching, was forty-six miles long, the longest and largest glacier in Asia, and probably in the world, except those in the polar regions. She added:

"Near the head of the glacier I found two native stone cairns, nearly demolished, but quite plain. Only human hands could have placed the rocks as they were discovered."

CONDITO RUNS DOWN BOY.

Autoist Is Under Bail for Killing Little Girl Last Week.

Not more than three blocks away from the spot where, on Friday night, he ran down and killed nine-year-old Katherine Quinn in front of her home at 4,008 Third Avenue, Marino Condito was driving his automobile along Washington Avenue, the Bronx, last evening when he ran down and seriously injured seven-year-old Samuel Pear.

The accident occurred at 173d Street and Washington Avenue, and the little boy, whose home is near by, had been playing tag in the street. He darted just in front of Condito's machine, then too close to him to be swerved away.

Condito jumped out, picked up the injured boy and drove at top speed to Fordham Hospital. There the doctors said the child had been injured internally. Condito then called at the Tremont Police Station and reported the case. The police did not detain him.

He is already under $1,000 bail to answer to the charge of homicide made against him by the police when his car killed Katherine Quinn last Friday. The next morning Coroner Healy released him until after the inquest. Condito, who lives at 3,156 Bathgate Avenue, had his lawyer with him when last night's accident halted his drive downtown.

Hans Schmidt Trial Dec. 8.

When the case of Hans Schmidt, the murderer of Anna Aumuller, comes up this morning before Judge Foster in the Court of General Sessions, W. M. K. Olcott, Terence McManus and Alphonse G. Koelble, counsel for the defense, will ask for a two weeks' adjournment to give them time to prepare their case. Assistant District Attorneys Delehanty and Koenig will not oppose it. This will bring the case to trial on Dec. 8.

NOTED LAWYER WEDS NURSE ON SICKBED

A. C. Braxton, Too Weak to Stand, Reclines at Ceremony in Atlantic City.

BRIDE SAVED HIS LIFE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 24.—With members of his family gathered in his sickroom at the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel here, Allan Caperton Braxton, a lawyer noted in Virginia, was married here yesterday to his nurse, Miss Mary P. Miller of Staunton, Va. Staunton is his home and hers, and she had come to Atlantic City some weeks before to nurse him back to health. Mr. Braxton was still too weak yesterday to stand for the ceremony, and the marriage was performed while he reclined in bed.

Mr. Braxton was suffering from a complete nervous breakdown when he was brought here in early September, and for many weeks he showed not the slightest trace of improvement. Early in November his condition was such that those about him despaired of his life, and it was at this point that Miss Miller was called from Virginia and put in charge of the sickroom. From that day, according to the stories told at the hotel and in the Marriage Bureau this morning, he began to improve.

No announcement of the wedding was made save to the immediate circle of Mr. Braxton and Miss Miller, and they received the news only a week ago. The preparations were simple. Registrar Glenn of the Marriage Bureau went to the hotel to fill out the necessary blanks. Mrs. Carter Braxton and Clarke Worthington of Staunton and Joseph Wheat of Charlottesville arrived on Saturday, and they were the witnesses at the ceremony yesterday afternoon. The clergyman was the Rev. Charles Martin Niles, pastor of the Church of the Ascension of Atlantic City. Miss Miller is 40 years old and Mr. Braxton is 51.

Allen Caperton Braxton is one of the best known lawyers in Virginia, and he was at one time President of the Bar Association of that State. He is the author of the amendment to the State Constitution which provides for a State Corporation Commission, an act which has been copied extensively throughout the United States. His law firm, which has offices in Richmond, is Braxton & Eggleston. He was formerly counsel for the receivers for the Seaboard Air Line Railway and is now counsel for the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac, and for other railroad interests. Mr. Braxton was delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis in 1904.

EVA TANGUAY MARRIES.

Vaudeville Actress Weds John W. Ford, a Dancer in Her Company.

Special to The New York Times.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 24.—Eva Tanguay, the vaudeville actress, was married to John W. Ford, a dancer and member of her company, by Justice of the Peace John D. Thomas in his office this evening. The marriage came as a surprise to Miss Tanguay's manager. Three members of the company acted as witnesses.

"The lady does not like an audience," said Ford to the Justice, and the courtroom had to be cleared before Miss Tanguay would enter. Ford, when he obtained the marriage license, gave his age as 32 and that of his bride as 33. He said he had been married once before, but this was Miss Tanguay's first matrimonial venture.

By the will of Francis Gottsberger, which was filed yesterday afternoon in the Surrogate's Court in Brooklyn, a sum of money estimated to be upward of $100,000 is left to the Right Rev. George W. Mundelein, Auxiliary Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Long Island. Mr. Gottsberger, who died recently at his home, 187 South Oxford Street, was a retired public accountant. He was an art collector, and gave to the Brooklyn Institute some time ago a collection of paintings valued at $125,000 in memory of his wife. He also established a ward in St. Mary's Hospital, Brooklyn, as a memorial to her.

Mr. Gottsberger and Bishop Mundelein had long been close friends. After providing for his children, Mr. Gottsberger directed that the residuary estate be given to the Bishop.

Mrs. A. E. Stevenson Seriously Ill.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, wife of the ex-Vice President and Past President General of the Daughters of the Revolution, is seriously ill at her home at Bloomington, Ill.

DISTINGUISHED people turn to SANATOGEN for new strength and vitality. Why not follow their example?

Countless people in all walks of life have testified in writing that they have been revived, reinvigorated, restored, reanimated by Sanatogen.

Among them are score upon score of distinguished men and women, statesmen, famous authors, princes of the church, captains of industry, society leaders, people whose sense of discrimination is keen. When such people commend Sanatogen, you may be sure that they are absolutely convinced of its beneficial effects.

When 18,000 physicians, moreover, take the trouble to write to the manufacturers of Sanatogen, in letters which it has been a matter of pride to file, to tell of their pleasure and satisfaction with what they have seen follow the use of Sanatogen, in hospitals and in private practice, then, too, you may be sure that the good accomplished by Sanatogen is indeed extraordinary.

If you are weak, therefore, or anemic, nervous or run down, a victim of the strenuous conditions of modern life, can you do better than follow such distinguished examples?

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M. S., Ph.D., the well-known research chemist, New York, writes: "The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a product containing phosphorus in the organic phosphate condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with the greatest ease."

Mme. Sarah Grand. Author of the "Heavenly Twins," writes: "I began to take Sanatogen after nearly four years' enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again and also am able to do as much of both as I ever did.

Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., the eminent novelist-statesman, writes from London: "Sanatogen is to my mind a true food-tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigor to the overworked body and mind."

Colonel Henry Watterson, the famous editor, writes: "I feel I owe it to truth to state that I have made a thorough trial of Sanatogen, and that I have found it most efficacious and beneficent. I do not think I could have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers."

Hall Caine, the dramatist, writes: "My experience of Sanatogen has been that as a tonic nerve food it has on more than one occasion benefited me."

Charles D. Sigsbee, Rear Admiral, U. S. Navy, writes: "After a thorough trial of Sanatogen, I am convinced of its merit as a food and tonic. Its beneficial effects are beyond doubt."

If you wish to learn more about Sanatogen, before you use it, write for a copy of this booklet, beautifully illustrated and comprising facts and information of the greatest interest.

Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere, in three sizes, from $1.00

Oil Company only three weeks. It was in those three weeks that James K. McGuire went to Condit's office. Condit told Chamberlin about McGuire's proposals and Chamberlin thought the visit so significant that he asked Condit for a typewritten statement of his relations with the McGuire brothers. Condit gave him the statement and a copy of it lay on the counsel table before the District Attorney yesterday when Chamberlin was cross-examined.

The statement was not read into the record, but often was referred to by Chamberlin. It was learned that it told not only the story of the McGuire brothers' activities as bagmen and commission agents, but also quoted Chamberlin himself as scouting the notion that the McGuire brothers were acting as "official" bagmen. Here is the sentiment credited to Chamberlin in this statement:

"I don't believe the McGuire brothers were ever authorized to make such an offer. I am going to Fourteenth Street and find out about it."

Further along in the statement, it was learned, was the comment of Condit that Chamberlin did go to Fourteenth Street to find out, and that Chamberlin at that time was a personal friend of Charles F. Murphy and of his nephew, Charles F. Murphy, Jr.

Mr. Whitman wanted to know if Chamberlin had not called on the telephone George Barrett, an agent of the Union Oil Company, a few days ago. Chamberlin said that he remembered the incident, but he couldn't recall what they had talked about.

"Didn't you tell Barrett that George H. McGuire had talked too much and that everything would have been all right if McGuire hadn't remembered so many things?" asked Mr. Whitman.

"No, Sir, I never did," replied Chamberlin.

"Didn't you tell Barrett that you expected to be subpoenaed here and that if you were you would be able to remember very little?"

"No, Sir."

"Well, what did you tell Barrett?"

"I can't recall," replied the witness. "I just wanted to find out about the John Doe proceedings, that's all."

It then developed that Chamberlin had called Condit on the telephone at the latter's home in Caldwell, N. J., on last Sunday afternoon. The call was made from Chamberlin's office at 7 East Forty-second Street, and in the office with Chamberlin at the time, he acknowledged, was ex-State Chief Engineer McLoud. He had telegraphed for McLoud at Albany, he said.

Wanted Party "Kept Out."

"Why did you call up Condit?" asked Whitman.

"I just reminded Condit of the statement which he had made to us some months ago," began Chamberlin. "I understood that he was to testify and I wanted him to leave out the name of the Democratic Party in that McGuire story. He had said nothing in his typewritten statement about the Democratic Party. He just said that the McGuires had asked him for a campaign contribution."

"Didn't you say to Condit: 'We understand that you are going to be called to testify and we want to warn you to be careful?'"

"No, I didn't use those words," replied the witness. "I just asked him to leave the Democratic Party out of it."

"Why should you say this?" asked Mr. Whitman sharply.

"Because I didn't want a slur on the Democratic Party," he replied.

The witness became somewhat involved, and at one point the District Attorney reminded him of the crime of perjury. Chamberlin said that he was telling the truth. The typewritten statement, he finally said, had been obtained from Condit as part of a plan "to open up a square deal for State work."

"Didn't you say to Condit: 'We are arranging things at Albany so that your products will be accepted?'" shouted the District Attorney.

"No, Sir," replied the witness.

"Do you mean to say that you did not mention Albany?"

"Yes, I mentioned Albany," said the witness, "but I merely told him that we were trying to get a fair specification adopted at Albany."

"Didn't you tell Condit: 'You treat us right and we'll treat you right?'" continued Mr. Whitman, growing angry.

"No, Sir. I told him that we were arranging things at Alabny so as to get a fair road specification."

"Who do you mean by 'we'?" shouted the District Attorney.

"There were four or five of us," answered the witness.

Then Chamberlin said that by "we" he meant the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, Henry A. Rubino, counsel for the Warner-Quinlan Company; the Standard Oil Company, the United States Asphalt Refining Company, and the R. F. Conway Company.

His talks with Mr. Quinlan of the Warner-Quinlan Company and with Mr. Rubino relative to his plan for getting a "fair specification," the witness said, had occurred months ago. As a matter of fact both Mr. Quinlan and Mr. Rubino are aiding the District Attorney in the present investigation. Mr. Rubino conferred with Mr. Whitman a few hours before the proceedings began.

Mr. Whitman wanted to know why Chamberlin had telegraphed for McLoud at this particular time, and the witness replied that McLoud was trying to get back into the Highway Department, and that he intended to talk the matter over with him.

McLeud, the records show, was appointed as Chief Engineer of the Highway Department by C. Gordon Reel on Aug. 27, 1912, to displace Harry P. Willis. There was much objection to the appointment because McLoud's name was not taken from the civil service list. State Engineer Bensel and Superintendent of Public Works Peck refused to confirm Supt. Reel's appointment, but following a visit to the Capitol by Gov. Dix the appointment was approved by Peck. McLoud went out of office with Reel.

When Chamberlin left the stand Assistant District Attorney Clark questioned a few contractors, and this gave Mr. Whitman time to summon George H. Barrett of the Union Oil Company. There was some surprise when Barrett took the stand. This is Barrett's story:

"Chamberlin called the office of the Union Oil Company on the telephone on Nov. 10. He asked for Condit, but Condit was not in and I talked to him. I asked him what he thought of John A. Hennessy, and he said that Hennessy talked too much. I asked him whether he was going to get mixed up in the case, and he said that probably he would; that a subpoena had been served on him. I told him to be sure and tell the truth and not get into the same fix as George H. McGuire. He told me it was easy; that all he had to do was to say that he couldn't remember."

Contractors Tell of Gifts.

The contractors called yesterday included Patrick N. Murray and Henry C. Schroeder of Rochester, Charles Mosher, Isidore H. Folk, and Frank L. Cohen of Buffalo; John Hendrick and Thomas F. Griffen of Oswego, and Harold B. Owens of Utica. They told of contributions amounting in all to $5,000 collected from them by Everett P. Fowler of Kingston.

Contractor Murray has had contracts for more than $500,000 for State road construction in the last three years. He is an independent Republican. Despite this he gave $50 to George H. McGuire in 1911, $500 to Fowler in 1911, and $500 to Fowler in 1912.

"Shortly after I paid George McGuire $50 as a campaign contribution in 1911," said Murray on the witness stand, "Fowler came around to my office in Rochester. He came there to collect, he informed me. I told him that I had already made a contribution. He said that was nice, and that it made things very easy for him. The conversation drifted along, and then suddenly he asked me how much I had given. I told him about the $50.

"'Why, that's no contribution,' said Fowler. 'The least I'll take from you is $1,000. You ought to be ashamed of yourself.' I told him he was barking up the wrong tree. I had no notion of giving $1,000. Finally I asked him why I should contribute to the Democrats. He said that the Democrats needed money badly; it was easy for the Republicans, he said, because they had the factories to draw on. He argued with me and told me that I had some road contracts and that he expected to get $1,000 at least. Finally we compromised on $500 and I made my check to Mack.

"In 1912 Fowler came to Rochester again. He asked me for $500 more. I complained that they had tied up $20,000 on me. He told me he didn't doubt it. 'I'm going to Albany to-morrow,' he said, 'and I'll look after that.' Then I gave him a check for $500, but I never saw him again. This check was made out to A. A. McLean, the State Treasurer of the Democratic Committee."

"Did you know that the second contribution of $500 appears in no statement filed with the Secretary of State?" Mr. Whitman asked.

"I didn't know that," replied Murray.

Both of the checks were introduced as evidence.

Contractor Henry C. Schroeder said that he had been an enrolled Democrat in 1911 and 1912, but that he was now an enrolled Republican. He was a member, he said, of the Schroeder-Hicks Construction Company and had six road contracts, amounting in all to $150,000.

Schroeder said that in response to a demand from Fowler in 1912 he made out a check for $125 payable to A. A. McLean. Continuing his testimony the witness said:

"I got some asphalt from the Union Oil Company of California at a low price. It was up to the Union Oil Company to get it passed at Albany, and they couldn't get it passed, so when I saw they couldn't make good, I saw there was nothing else to do but order from the Barber Asphalt Company. Thereafter I bought from the Barber Company and had no more trouble."

Charles Mosher of Buffalo testified that he sent Mack a check for $250 after he had received a letter from William H. Kelley of Syracuse telling of Fowler's visit, and suggesting that he make a contribution. He said that he had been a Republican since he was born, but he thought it was "policy" to give to the Democrats.

Isidore H. Folk, a contractor of Buffalo, said he was a Democrat, but had never contributed before 1911, when he got State contracs amounting to $400,000. Folk said that in 1911 in response to requests he gave Fowler a check for $150 for the campaign. In 1912 Fowler, he said, came to see him and told him he was a Deputy Fire Marshal. Fowler said that he wanted a sprinkler system installed in a building on which Folk was working. According to Folk, Fowler said: "'You weren't liberal with me on that contribution last year, and I don't see why I should give you any consideration. I'll give you ten days, and charge you $50 a day after that if you don't put it in.' Then I got mad and said: 'Don't wait ten days. Start something right away.'"

Contractor Folk said that he had installed all the improvements except the sprinkler, and that he met Fowler again subsequently in the Hampton Hotel at Albany.

"He told me then," continued Folk, "that he had resigned as Deputy Marshal. He said he would give me a tip. He said: 'You don't have to make those improvements on your building.' Then he asked me for a check 'for the boys.' I told him to forget it."

Later in 1912 Folk said he made out a check for $1,500 to McLean.

"Did you know that the $1,500 was o nthe list, but that the $150 contribution was not?" Mr. Clark asked.

"I didn't know that," replied Folk.

Thomas F. Griffen of Oswego said that Fowler had a sheet in his hand when he went to see him in Kelley's office in Syracuse and, looking at the sheet, told him that he was on the list for $300. Griffen had road contracts for $142,000, he said.

"'What's the idea?' I asked Fowler," testified Griffen.

"'The idea is,' replied Fowler, 'that if you contribute you'll be one of the family.'

"I asked him the basis of the apportionment, and he said there was no basis, but that I was down for $300. I talked it over with my partner, and we agreed that we'd better pay the money. I drew a check to McLean and sent it to the New York office at 1 West Thirty-fourth Street."

"Why did you make the contribution?" asked Mr. Clark.

"I considered it good policy to get into the family," replied Griffen. "Otherwise I would not have given up $300."

Harold B. Owens of Utica testified that he had $250,000 in road contracts in the name of the Dale Engineering Company. He met Fowler, he said, through ex-State Senator T. Harvey Ferris of Utica. Ferris told him, he said, that Fowler was the "accredited collector" of the Democratic State Committee. Fowler asked him for $1,000, he said, in Kelley's office in Utica. That was too much, he insisted, and they compromised on $400, and he drew a check payable to McLean.

This check, Mr. Clark brought out, was given by the Dale Engineering Company, a corporation. Mr. Whitman has the check in his possession, and it bears the indorsement of McLean.

When Owens saw the importance of his testimony he added:

"I'm not sure that they knew that we were a corporation at that time."

The next session of the John Doe investigation will be held on next Monday at 2 P. M.

GLYNN MAKES NEW RULE.

Abolishes Asphalt Specification, but Contractors Must Give Guarantees.

ALBANY, Nov. 24.—Gov. Glynn said to-night that after a conference with Commissioner John N. Carlisle and others it had been decided that hereafter no certain grade of asphalt should be specified for State highway work. Instead contractors would be permitted to use any sort of asphalt, provided they would guarantee it to give good service for from three to five years.

The formal charges against Carlisle were handed to him to-day by Gov. Glynn.

In making known his new plan, Gov. Glynn said:

"After consultation with Commissioner Carlisle, the Attorney General, and Commissioner of Efficiency and Economy Delaney, it has been decided from now on to throw the roads of New York State open to the asphalt markets of the world. It has been decided to have the specifications so drawn that every suitable asphalt known can be used, but to insert the conditions that every contractor must guarantee the road he builds for at least three and possibly five years. This will do away with the asphalt scandal. This provision will give every asphalt dealer in the world who has an asphalt which he will guarantee for five years an equal chance with every other asphalt man for the business of New York State.

"It will also be notice to the contractors that they must get an asphalt whose makers are willing to give a five-year guarantee for the contractors' security.

"The specifications also will require every contractor in connection with the presentation of any estimate for payment of State moneys to make a solemn affidavit as to the work performed, showing that it has been performed in exact accordance with the specifications so as to subject him to such penalty as may be involved in case he makes a false affidavit.

"I have also directed that hereafter no one shall be employed upon the roads except for special competency and ability, and I positively will prevent the use of the highway department for political patronage purposes. Hereafter Inspectors in the highway department will be employed for their ability to inspect roads, not for their ability to deliver votes or retain for the administration the friendship of political leaders.

"My own idea is that the State should maintain a suitable training school for highway Inspectors, analogous to the training schools and methods in force in the New York City Fire and Police Departments.

"I have designated Commissioner Carlisle, Attorney General Carmody, and Commissioner of Efficiency and Economy Delaney a committee to carry out these views in the specifications and contracts for road construction and maintenance."

Gov. Glynn said to-day that he believed that the John Doe investigation in New York City conducted by District Attorney Whitman, and the Statewide investigation which James W. Osborne is to begin to-morrow, would not clash. He could see no reason why Mr. Whitman should go outside his own county in prosecuting cases involving illegal contributions to campaign funds.

Gov. Glynn and District Attorney Sanford of Albany County have held several conferences of late. Gov. Glynn said to-night that he would not call an extraordinary Grand Jury for Albany County, and that his talk with Mr. Sanford had no relation to the work Mr. Osborne had undertaken.

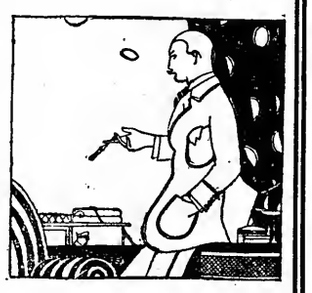
Some Blessings For Which We Are Thankful



WE are thankful because we have never been tempted to lower our business standard.

* *

We have not, for a temporary increase in business, deceived the public with false prices and false reductions.

* *

The public, in helping us build up the largest haberdashery business in America, and one of the most successful clothing businesses, has taught us to keep absolute faith with it.

* *

And we are thankful for that—because we preferred to do it that way.

* *

We are thankful for a good year's business and hope that similar success is visiting you.

And let us suggest, unselfishly, that YOU may be just a little thankful because you can now get ready-to-wear clothes of a standard almost equal to the best made-to-order clothes at a fraction of the price.

IMPROVING MARCONI RAILROAD WIRELESS

RAILWAY MEN INTERESTED

But They Have Grave Doubts Whether Wireless Will Come Into Use on Their Lines.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—English railway men were much interested when told by a NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day of the successful employment of wireless telegraphy yesterday between the Lackawanna Limited train and Scranton, but they expressed the opinion that, while wireless telegraphy might revolutionize railroading in America, it could not do so in England because the conditions were totally different here. Nothing, they said, could be gained by equipping English trains with wireless apparatus, as it would be superfluous under the system of operation obtaining here.

So far as can be learned, no British railway is experimenting with wireless or planning to do so, though several big railways are experimenting with a view to finding a practicable automatic train-stop. An official of the London & North Western Railway said:

"The report of the successful Lackawanna experiment is possibly of far-reaching importance in America, but under the present method of operation here we would not gain anything even if moving trains could be in constant wireless communication with the stations. There is never any need here to tell an engine-driver how he is to go. All trains are controlled through the signal towers. The only way in which wireless would be applicable here would be in giving a danger signal to a driver, but experiments with automatic stops are now in progress on our system."

An official of the Great Western Railway said:

"I do not think wireless will help English railroads largely, as our trains are not controlled by messages to the train crews. Though it is difficult to speak definitely till fuller particulars are to hand, I do not think wireless communication would prevent rear-end collisions."

Marconi Company officials were greatly interested in the success of the test, which was along lines on which they have been working. General Manager Bradfield said:

"While this test is highly interesting and significant for the future, I do not believe that the wireless equipment of trains will come generally in the immediate future, partly on account of its great cost and partly because at present there is no apparatus that is reliable enough under the difficult working conditions of swiftly moving trains to justify general adoption by the railroads.

"However, we have been experimenting along these lines and trying to perfect an apparatus, designed to meet the peculiar conditions which can send messages from a jolting, fast-moving train. I do not believe it is absolutely impossible. In fact, I think we shall yet get an apparatus that will be inexpensive and reliable under the most trying conditions."

PRAISE FOR OUR SAILORS.

Mayor of Nice Speaks of Their Good Behavior and Fine Bearing.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

NICE, Nov. 24.—A reception in honor of the officers of the American warships now anchored at Villefranche was given to-day by the Nice municipality at the Hotel des Anglais. Among those present were M. Jolie, Prefect of the Alpes Maritimes Department; Mayor Goiran of Nice, Capt. Van Duzer of the Utah, Capt. Hughes of the Wyoming, and Capt. Rodman of the Delaware.

The Mayor in welcoming the American guests spoke of the excellent relations existing between France and the United States. In toasting President Wilson he also raised his glass in honor of the American Navy and the American colony on the Riviera. He spoke of the excellent conduct and fine bearing of the American sailors.

M. Jolie welcomed the fleet in the name of the French Government.

Capt. Van Duzer thanked the municipality for its cordial reception, and said the whole fleet would preserve pleasant memories of its Mediterranean cruise.

ROME, Nov. 24.—The Pope continues daily his audiences of bluejackets from the American warships.

SUFFRAGETTE TO JAIL.

Forbes-Robertson's Sister Convicted of Window Smashing.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A suffragette who on the occasion of Premier Asquith's visit to Birmingham in July smashed a window and when arrested refused to disclose her name to-day announced at the Birmingham Quarter Sessions that she was Miss Forbes-Robertson, a sister of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, the actor.

At the police court investigation she was known simply as "Eliza." On being committed to the sessions, she refused bail, and after some days' imprisonment was released under the "cat and mouse" act. To-day she described Home Secretary McKenna as "a greater murderer than Dr. Crippen."

Medical evidence was given that, while not feeble minded, Miss Forbes-Robertson was very eccentric. She was ordered to pay the damage, or in default undergo fourteen days in the Second Division. She declared that she would not pay and would go on a hunger and thirst strike.

Daisy Fox said at the weekly meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union to-day:

"We do not know whether or not the Government will try to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst on her return. We are not going to allow them to do so. We have our bodyguard already formed, with Gen. (Mrs. Flora) Drummond at the head, and we are going to take every means in our power to prevent Mrs. Pankhurst's rearrest."

WORKS BY BLAKE SOLD.

First Edition of His "Gates of Paradise" Brings $455 in London.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The sale of rare books, the property of Lady Brooke of Armitage Bridge, Huddersfield, was begun at Sotheby's to-day.

A first edition of "For Children. The Gates of Paradise," by W. Blake, frontispiece, engraved title, and sixteen plates with full margins, small square octavo, published in London in 1793 and extremely rare, brought $455. It is from the Beckford Library and is a presentation copy from H. G. Bohn, May 19, 1835, to Mr. Beckford.

Blake's "Illustrations of the Book of Job," twenty-one plates, brilliant proof impressions on India paper, royal folio, 1826, binding by Riviere & Son, realized $90.

"Quatuor Libri Amorum," Nuremberg, 1502, the extremely rare work of Conrad Celtes, the first German Poet Laureate, brought $250. It contains eleven spirited full-page wood cuts, two of which are attributed to Albert Dürer. There are in all 120 quarto leaves, together with the folding view of Nuremberg.

HEAVY SENTENCES ON PEARL THIEVES

The Men Who Stole the Famous Necklace Convicted at the Old Bailey.

SCOTLAND YARD'S TRIUMPH

Chief Inspector Ward Declared to be the Foremost Criminal Investigator of the Present Day.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The trial of the men accused of stealing the famous $675,000 pearl necklace was ended at the Old Bailey to-day. The jury found the four prisoners guilty on two counts of the indictment, those charging them with stealing and receiving the necklace while it was the property of the Postmaster General. A verdict of "not guilty" was returned on the charge of stealing the necklace in France.

Lockett and Grizzard were sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, Silverman to five years in jail, and Gutwirth to eighteen months' hard labor. Silverman and Gutwirth were also recommended for deportation.

The court was crowded, the majority of the spectators being women, for whom the case exercised an extraordinary fascination, their chief desire being to get a glampse of the necklace.

A woman sitting at the back of the court shrieked when Mr. Justice Laurence sentenced Lockett, but otherwise the case came to an end without dramatic incident. One pathetic note was the application of Silverman for permission to see his aged mother before he went to prison. "The old woman," he said, "may die at any minute." The Judge granted the application.

A sinister feature of the trial was the sending of a threatening letter to a juror. The Judge said the letter appeared to have come from some friend of the prisoners. He warned the sender that if any steps were taken to fulfill the threat condign punishment would follow.

After the verdict was returned a Police Inspector gave details of the prisoners' careers. Lockett was sentenced to five years' imprisonment at Liverpool for burglary in 1906 and had previously been convicted in the United States and Milan. Grizzard had also been previously convicted. Silverman has been suspected of several crimes.

The investigation of the pearl necklace mystery was one of the most remarkable examples of detective work on record, and is declared to stamp Chief Inspector Ward of Scotland Yard as being the foremost living criminal investigator.

All that the police had to guide them consisted of three pieces of French sugar and a torn scrap of a Paris newspaper that were found in the registered packet which should have contained the necklace. Inspector Ward took up the case, and the record reward of $50,000 was offered for information leading to the recovery of the necklace and the conviction of the thieves.

Inquiries were prosecuted in every direction, and, although even now the actual place of the theft has not transpired, it soon became obvious that the jewel crooks of London were excited over some unusual event. The Paris police proved of little assistance and somewhat hampered the investigations of Scotland Yard by the premature publication of details of the inquiry.

Weeks passed before definite information came to Inspector Ward and those associated with him in the inquiry, but it was obvious that the thieves had by mistake brought off a coup far beyond their expectation. They had hoped to obtain a consignment of precious stones which could easily be offered for sale. Instead, they obtained possesion of a world famous necklace, every pearl of which would provide an instant clue to their detection.

The coup doubtless cost the thieves a considerable sum, which they were anxious to recover, so, throwing discretion to the winds, they determined to sell the necklace as a whole. That decision was the first definite step toward their apprehension. It brought Messrs. Brandstatter and Quadranstein, two Paris diamond and pearl brokers, on the scene. These Parisians communicated with Scotland Yard, and it was under the direction of Inspector Ward that they entered into definite negotiations with the gang.

Inspector Ward and his officers were always within hail, and it is safe to say that from the first moment that the suspects' identity was known not one of them was out of sight of a police officer. All could have been arrested at the first meeting, but Ward determined to have every link of the chain of proof complete before taking action.

The thieves suspected that all was not well, and broke off the negotiations. Still the Chief Inspector held his hand; the net was not completely woven. Finally, it was decided to arrest the men on Sept. 2.

Doubtless to the disappointment of the police, the pearls were not found in the possession of the prisoners, and the arrest of a fifth man, Dan McCarthy, failed to lead to the discovery of the jewels. McCarthy was discharged at Bow Street on Sept. 15.

How the pearls were eventually recovered is the most astonishing feature of the case. Early on the morning of Sept. 16, the pearls, with the exception of two or three, were deposited on the sidewalk of St. Paul's Road, North London. They were picked up at the spot where a moment before a workman named Horne, the finder, had seen a man and a woman standing. Who that man and woman were has never been established, although the police made every endeavor to find them. That fact, however, does not detract from the brilliant achievement of Inspector Ward and his subordinates.

That other persons besides those convicted were concerned in the robbery is admitted, but undoubtedly a daring gang of jewel thieves and one which is thought to have been operating for yeara has been broken up.

BIG PRICES AT CHRISTIE'S.

Fitzhenry Sale Continued—A Louis XVI. Clock Brings $2,100.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A total of $24,290 was realized at Christie's to-day from the continuation of the sale of the late J. H. Fitzhenry's works of art, chiefly of the mediaeval and Renaissance periods.

The highest price was $2,100, paid by Lion for a Louis XVI. clock, sixteen inches high. The movement is by Lechopis of Paris.

Abbey gave $1,470 for a bronze group of "Hercules and Cacus," nineteen inches high, on green marble pedestal.

A Venetian workbox, a casket with painted wood borders and glass sides, and a small gilt work case, pierced with Gothic tracery, went to Simon for $1,100.

GEMS OF EMPRESS OF 900 YEARS AGO

Jewelry Found at Mayence Believed to Have Belonged to the Beautiful Gisela.

MAY HAVE BEEN PAWNED

Troubious Times Followed the Coronation in Rome of Gisela, Who Was the Wife of Conrad II.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Dr. von Falke, Director of the Berlin Museum of Industrial Art, has made an exhaustive examination of a collection of old jewelry recently discovered by workmen while excavating at Mayence.

One of the most remarkable objects found is a breast ornament consisting of five chains hanging straight down, connected by six horizontal rows, each of nine precious stones, pearls, and antique gems. Suspended from the lowest horizontal row is an ornament decorated with topaz, precious stones, and pearls.

Dr. Falke has come to the conclusion that the jewels belonged to the beautiful Burgundian Princess Gisela, consort of the German Emperor Conrad II., who reigned from 1024 to 1039. The filigree work and the setting of the stones correspond in character with similar work known to have been executed by German goldsmiths in the first half of the eleventh century.

There is great similarity between the workmanship of the ornaments and that of the celebrated imperial crown preserved at Vienna. This was made before the year 1027 for the Emperor Conrad.

Dr. Falke remarks that the magnificence of the jewelry worn by Gisela at her coronation in Rome was referred to in historical records, and he considers it quite conceivable that her most valuable ornaments were pawned or hidden during the stormy times that followed.

The jewelry is now in the possession of the Kaiser.

Won't Dance the Tango Till Late.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Emperor William's order against the tango has caused a hurried change in the programme for the dance to be held after the Thanksgiving dinner of the American colony. It was learned that any members of the Diplomatic Corps present would withdraw should the tango or two-step be danced. These were consequently eliminated from the programme, but will be permitted during the latter part of the evening after the official guests have retired.

Archbishop's Golden Jubilee.

PEORIA, Nov. 24.—Two hundred visiting clergymen to-day attended the golden jubilee celebration of Archbishop John Lancaster Spalding. Pontifical mass was celebrated, the cathedral being packed to its capacity. Archbishop J. J. Glennon of St. Louis delivered the sermon. Archbishop Spalding is very feeble, and with much difficulty walked to the altar. A big public reception planned for this afternon was called off on account of the Archbishop's condition.

MISS LA RUE CAUSES SCENE.

Interrupts Performance at London Theatre to Protest to Audience.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Some excitement was caused at the Palace Theatre to-night when Grace La Rue, an American vaudeville performer, stepped upon the stage and interrupted another performer in order to make a public protest against the action of Manager Alfred Butt, who, she said, had refused to allow her to sing a certain song.

While Miss La Rue was speaking the curtain was rung down and Mr. Butt stepped before the footlights. He explained that Miss La Rue had been notified that she must not sing any song which had not previously been submitted to the management. As he had not heard the song which she wished to introduce, he said, he could not sanction its public presentation.

Grace La Rue in private life is the wife of Byron Chandler, a wealthy New York man. She has been appearing in London for several seasons. She was well known here in vaudeville as a singer of coon songs.

BOLIVIAN ENVOY ACTS.

Is Making Inquiries in Regard to the Alleged Rubber Atrocities.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Col. Pedro Suarez, the Bolivian Minister in London, when seen to-day in regard to the charges of the Aborigines' Protection Society as to slavery in the rubber region, declared that the Bolivian Government was unable to arrest criminals of Peruvian nationality unless requested to do so by the Peruvian Government. He said he was in cable communication with the Bolivian Government on the subject.

Col. Suarez said he had also been in communication with Washington.

Haldane Complains That Young Men Prefer Sports and Tango.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Premier Asquith to-morrow will receive a deputation which is to propose measures such as increased pay and certain privileges to attract men to the Territorial Army, which is 62,000 short.

The voluntary system under which the territorials are recruited is considered by many persons to have been a failure from the beginning.

Viscount Haldane, the Lord Chancellor, speaking in London to-night, complained that young men were attracted by football, golf, and latterly by the tango, rather than by service in defense of their country.

Big Shackleton Expedition.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, interviewed to-day regarding his proposed Antarctic expedition, said he hoped to lead another expedition, but the plans, financial and otherwise, had not matured sufficiently for him to make a definite pronouncement on the subject. The expedition, however, would be on a big scale.

NEED ONLY $572,753 TO GET $4,000,000

Workers for Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. Fund Will Make Final Effort To-day.

HOPE TO REACH GOAL

Conditional Subscriptions Lapse if Project Fails of Success—J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Gives $25,000.

There was a magnificent spurt on the next to the last day of the campaign to raise $4,000,000 for new buildings for the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations of this city. The leaders announced yesterday gifts amounting in all to $435,905, which make the grand total to date $3,427,247. The total of the subscriptions of yesterday was more than twice as large as the subscriptions taken on any other one day of the campaign.

Following the despair of the leaders at 6 o'clock on Sunday night, when only $40,000 had been subscribed toward the million necessary to complete the fund, the enthusiasm at yesterday's luncheon in the campaign headquarters at 25 Broad Street was marked. The headquarters was crowded to the doors with workers who were hoping to hear the best but were fearing the worst. As the team leaders announced their totals the applause grew in volume. There was a hush when George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee, arose. When he said that his committee had obtained $330,000 in subscriptions the women present joined the men in enthusiastic applause.

There was more applause when it was learned that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had telephoned to the headquarters just as the luncheon started, to say he would give $25,000.

There is still $572,753 to be raised before the campaign ends to-night, but the fact that the leaders were able after eighteen hours work yesterday to obtain record subscriptions for any one day, has spurred the workers to greater efforts than ever. Every man and woman left the luncheon yesterday determined to do his and her part toward completing the fund by to-night. It is expected now that the project will be a success.

On the other hand, if the campaign to reach the $4,000,000 mark fails the building fund will lose $450,000 which has been subscribed conditionally on success. It was announced yesterday that of this sum $350,000 is in one gift and that it includes two other gifts of $50,000 each from anonymous friends of the two associations. The only $350,000 subscription was made by John D. Rockefeller and was announced at the opening dinner of the campaign in the Hotel Astor.

The congregation of Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst's church on Madison Square contributed $950, which was included in yesterday's total. It was also announced that a well-known architect had volunteered his services in drawing up the plans of the new buildings to be constructed, and that four taxicabs of the Mason-Seaman service have been placed at the disposal of the workers for a real whirlwind finish of the campaign.

Besides the gifts already mentioned other subscriptions yesterday of $1,000 or more were:

Two one dollar bills were left at THE NEW YORK TIMES office last night for the fund. The money was inclosed in an envelope which was delivered by a messenger boy. A note, written in ink on letter paper of the City Club of New York, which gave no clue to the identification of the donor beyond the signature "Englishman," was folded about the bills. The note ran:

"The Missing Million."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Sir: Would not one rich man or woman go hond for the balance of the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. fund?

Recently Lord Plymouth put up a million as bond to release the Crystal Palace, in London, from going to the hammer. Except a small sum he has got it all back—and during the next three months almost every one would give a small dopation. I incloss $2, and wish them all luck.

ENGLISHMAN.

The guests of honor at yesterday's luncheon were Miss Grace H. Dodge, Mrs. William M. Kingsley, Mrs. William Curtis Demorest, Dr. L. L. Doggett, President of the Y. M. C. A. Training School in Springfield, Mass., and William P. Sidley, President of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., who made a brief address.

WRIT AWAITS EARLE.

He Must Produce In Court Son He Kidnapped In Paris.

Ferdinand Pinney Earle, who is expected to arrive either at this port or at Boston in a day or so, will be served with a writ of habeas corpus directing him to produce his eight-year-old son, Harold Erwin Earle, before Supreme Court Justice Seabury. Mr. Earle is accused of having kidnapped the boy on Nov. 9, in Paris, from the home of his first wife, Marie Emma Emilie Fischbacher-Earle. Miss Charlotta Herman, who is said to be Earle's traveling companion, is charged with participating in the kidnapping.

The purpose of this action is to recover the boy and return him to his mother's home in Paris. A criminal action, it was said yesterday, would be begun against Mr. Earle and Miss Herman if the court upheld the habeas corpus proceedings. The papers in the application for the writ assert that Earle is either on the steamship Marquette, due in Boston, or on the steamship Finland, bound for this port.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 24.—The advance list of the Red Star liner Marquette, on the way from Antwerp to Boston, was received here to-day. The name of Ferdinand Pinney Earle does not appear, but it is possible that he booked under an assumed name. The authorities searched the White Star liner Canopia, which arrived from Naples to-day, but Earle was not on board. A sharp lookout for him and Miss Herman will be maintained.

CLAIMS $5,000 FOR BAIL.

Put Cash Up In a Bet, Says Jeffries —Stranger to ex-Bluecoat.

Following the dismissal yesterday of the indictments against former Patrolman Eugene F. Fox and Ashley Shea, charged, respectively, with bribery and perjury as a result of District Attorney Whitman's police graft investigation, the secret of the mysterious deposit of $5,000 cash bail for Fox's release from the Tombs was disclosed. It developed from affidavits filed at the District Attorney's office that the bail was put up by Herbert Jeffries, an entire stranger to Fox, as the result of a wager.

According to the records on file in the County Clerk's office, Fox was released from the Tombs on Jan. 15 upon the deposit of the cash with Warden Fallon of the Tombs. The money was deposited by Louis J. Grant of Grant & Rouse, Fox's attorneys.

Mr. Jeffries is an explorer. He has made several trips to Africa and South America, and has been interested in several South American revolutions. Through his attorney, Col. Alexander S. Bacon, he filed an affidavit yesterday with Assistant District Attorney Laselle, asking for the return of the money. The affidavit says that he delivered to Grant & Rouse, Fox's attorneys, $5,000 to be deposited by them as agents for Fox's bail.

Mr. Jeffries, according to the affidavit, was in the office of Col. Bacon at the time the police investigation was taking place. He had just returned from South America. In the office he met an acquaintance with whom he entered into a discussion of the police question.

"The police are not as bad as they are painted," Mr. Jeffries asserted. Grant & Rouse and put up the money, it is asserted.

"If you think that way about it," the other replied, "why don't you bail out Fox?"

The upshot of the discussion was a wager of $500 which Mr. Jeffries made with his friend that he would bail Fox out. Mr. Jeffries then visited Grant & Rouse and put up the money, it is asserted.

There's a Fat Boy

who is the courageous and resourceful leader of four live country boys in a new book called "Mark Tidd." It's a story your boy will warm up to—and there's no telling, you might like "Mark Tidd" yourself. Clarence B. Kelland wrote it.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS

¶ Horses who talked and men who are no bigger than ants—but you've guessed that it's Gulliver. There's a new "Gulliver's Travels" and every young reader should have the book. The big, new full-page pictures by Louis Rhead make it really a new book—and more interesting than ever.

JOE THE BOOK FARMER

¶ The boy champion corn-raiser's story is a new book of success, called "Joe the Book Farmer." It is so good a book that one State board has adopted it for regular reading, and more than one other State has sent it broadcast. Garrard Harris wrote it—and he tells a real story.

BOOK OF INDIAN BRAVES

¶ Inventing the Cherokee alphabet was Sequoya's job, just as it was Powhatan's to rule over thirty warlike tribes. You know of course that these men were great Indians. Their stories—and many others—are told in a new book called "The Book of Indian Braves," by Kate Dickinson Sweetser. You get acquainted with Sitting Bull, Black Hawk, and other big red men. A splendid book for boys to read.

OWEN SAYS BANKS AID STOCK GAMBLING

Currency Bill Will Check Lending of Reserves for Speculative Accounts, He Asserts.

TO DIVERT FUND TO TRADE

Quotes Bankers Here as Welcoming Regional System for Loaning Money on Commercial Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—That large bank reserves concentrated in New York were loaned in speculative accounts on the New York Stock Exchange was asserted by Senator Owen to-day in opening the debate in the Senate on the Owen-Glass Currency bill, adding that the measure would remove this condition. After the Senate wrangled for half an hour over the printing of the bill, Mr. Owen of Oklahoma, Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, made the formal defense of the measure as amended by the Democratic wing of the Senate Committee. Mr. Owen spoke for two hours, and adjournment was then taken.

Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska, the Democratic head of the Republican half of the committee, will reply to Mr. Owen Wednesday. Mr. Owen's speech adhered closely to the lines of his report on the bill Saturday, but he was listened to by a good attendance of Senators.

Miss Margaret Wilson and Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughters of the President, came into the gallery, accompanied by a party of friends, and heard Mr. Owen speak.

The suggestion was made by Senator Cummins of Iowa that State institutions might be forbidden by the laws of their States from joining the regional systems proposed in the pending bill and from subscribing to their capital stock.

His remark followed a question to Mr. Owen as to whether Mr. Owen considered the participation of State banks necessary to the successful inauguration of the system.

Mr. Owen replied that he did not, but it had been definitely known all along that the Administration forces counted heavily on the co-operation of State institutions.

Reviewing the details of the bill, Senator Owen urged that by the creation of a market for discounted commercial paper and by mobilizing the reserves in public utility regional banks, the measure would remove the great dangers of the present financial system.

Asserting that at present New York bankers who hold a large percentage of the country's reserves were forced to place those reserves in call loans in the Stock Exchange, the Senator said:

"We are advised by representative New York bankers that the great banks there would be glad to have the system improved by the establishment of Federal reserve banks strong enough to furnish money on demand against good commercial bills, and thus enable the New York banks to withdraw their funds from the Stock Exchange—which has become the most gigantic gambling establishment in the world—and place such funds in the service of legitimate industry and commerce. This will be one of the great benefits of the pending measure—that is it will withdraw from the gambling enterprises on the Stock Exchange the bank reserves of the country and enable such reserves to be used for the commerce of the nation."

Senator Owen explained the security that would be behind the new currency, which under the bill would be issued against commercial paper. Besides this paper, he pointed out, the notes would be secured by the liability of the member bank discounting the paper, the liability of its stockholders, the liability of the reserve bank, issuing the notes and its stockholding banks, a 33 1-3 per cent. gold reserve, and the guarantee of the United States.

"There has never been issued a note with such safeguards surrounding it by any banking system of the world," he said.

Senator Owen urged speedy action on the bill by the Senate, declaring that banks and business men throughout the country were "holding back" to discover just what form the legislation would take. He said that the differences between the two divisions of the Senate committee should be adjusted, and, as Chairman, expressed his willingness to accept some of the proposals made by the anti-Administration faction.

NAMED FOR FILIPINO BOARD.

Wilson Nominates H. S. Martin, C. L. Riggs, and W. T. Denison.

Secretary of Public Instruction and Vice Governor of the Philippine Islands—HENDERSON S. MARTIN of Kansas.
Secretary of Commerce and Police—CLINTON L. RIGGS of Baltimore, Md.
Secretary of the Interior—WINFRED T. DENISON of New York.

Mr. Riggs was graduated as a civil engineer from Princeton University in 1887. Subsequently he became a manufacturer and retired from business some years ago. His military record covers service in the National Guard of Maryland and in the Spanish-American War. His home is at Catonsville, Md.

Mr. Denison was born in Maine, but is now a legal resident of New York. He was graduated from Harvard University in 1896 and from Harvard Law School in 1900, and is an Assistant Attorney General in the Department of Justice.

Henderson S. Martin is Chairman of the Kansas State Utilities Commission. He also is Chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

CHURCHILL PARTY CLAIMING VICTORY

Profess Confidence That Mayor Kline Will Name Him Again for School Board.

APPLAUD MITCHEL'S STAND

Opposition, Led by President Butler of Columbia, Considers Mayor-elect's Indorsement "Unfortunate."

While Mayor Kline declined to commit himself directly yesterday as to whether he had made up his mind to reappoint Thomas W. Churchill as a member of the Board of Education, it was understood at the City Hall that Mr. Churchill was practically certain to be designated.

All that Mayor Kline could be induced to say when asked whether the cablegram received from Mayor-elect Mitchel on Sunday had induced him to make up his mind in favor of Mr. Churchill, whom Mr. Mitchel warmly indorsed, as was told in a cable message from Panama, was that in his own time he would appoint a good man. In a previous statements Mayor Kline has said he would probably decide the matter by the middle of th's week.

Alrick H. Man, who was appointed by former Mayor Low as a member of the Board of Education, and reappointed by former Mayor McClellan, was particularly happy over the situation yesterday afternoon. Mr. Man has taken the lead among members of the Board of Education in defending the policies of Mr. Churchill and attacking those of City Supt. Maxwell, to whom the Churchill administration has been opposed.

"Mayor-elect Mitchel knows," was the first comment of Mr. Man on reading the cablegram from Panama. "There are few men," he added, "who have shown a deeper interest in educational matters than Mr. Mitchel. His experience in the school inquiry, conducted by a committee of which he was Chairman, has resulted in his being very thoroughly posted on local school conditions. While he made mistakes in the early stages of the inquiry his good common sense and the knowledge derived during the work fully appear in his later reports and the conclusions of the committee as finally published.

"While his original position was critical if not antagonistic, he could not fail to discern in the course of the inquiry the keen insight, practicability, and good judgment with which Mr. Churchill was steadily improving conditions which had long been regarded as irremediable."

Members of the Public Education Association and some of those who signed with President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University the letter to Mayor Kline asking him not to reappoint Mr. Churchill were disposed to object to the terms in which Mayor-elect Mitchel came to Mr. Churchill's support.

"I don't see why this indorsement of Mr. Mitchel should have anything to do with the question of Mr. Churchill's fitness for the office he holds," said Frederic R. Coudert. "Mr. Kline is the Mayor, and it is upon him that the duty of making appointment falls. Our position with regard to Mr. Churchill is entirely an impersonal one. He may be a very worthy man, but he stands for a system in public education which is retrogressive. He may think that his policy is progressive because it heads toward simplification. But, on the contrary, the idea of progressivism is toward differentiation of function and not toward simplification. Mr. Churchill and others who come in from the outside cannot overthrow the progress of a hundred years.

"My conclusion after three years of service on the Board of Education is that the ideal arrangement must be one which looks to the employment of the very best experts obtainable from whom the initiative in matters of school management will come. At the same time there must be a board of lay members in which is vested the financial power and the power of ratification of recommendations of the experts. To break that arrangement down is to go backward instead of forward."

Howard M. Nudd, Secretary of the Public Education Association, characterized Mr. Mitchel's stand as "unfortunate."

"If the Mayor-elect will read the Howe-Goodenow report," he said, "he will find that the opinion is expressed that about 85 per cent. of the functions now exercised by the Board of Education ought to be performed by experts. Mr Mitchel's attitude in regard to efficiency in public service makes his stand in regard to the Board of Education matter very surprising."

Does thinking tire you out?

Does your mind get hazy when you are trying your best to think straight? Do you tire in the middle of the afternoon, just at the time when your most important work must be done?

Are you nervous, irritable and "snappy"? Do you go home at night thoroughly exhausted and "ready to drop"?

That's no way to live.

How long do you think you can keep it up?

You can remember when you used to get a lot of real fun out of your day's work?

You jumped eagerly into every task. The harder they were and the faster they came, the better you liked it.

Your mind was as clear as a bell; the last hours of the day were the best; you went whistling up the street at night, "as fit as a fiddle."

What's the trouble now?

Don't say you're getting old; lots of older men can double discount you and you know it.

* * *

To enjoy your work and your play, to excel, to succeed, you need bodily strength, a clear head and steady nerves. That's all.

These things you must get out of your food. There is no other way.

Your body and brain cannot give you what you do not give them.

Your problem is only to find some form of food which will meet the demands of your ill-nourished system, some food whose elements will furnish the necessary physical, mental and nervous energy.

Wincarnis is a liquid food. It is not a "patent medicine"; there are no drugs in it.

Here are the three ingredients:—A pure, natural wine; Liebig's Extract of Beef; Extract of Malt.

The Malt Extract is a powerful restorative and vitalizer.

These three ingredients, all foods of the highest value, are combined by a special process which retains and enhances their health-giving properties, in the form of a palatable, satisfying beverage.

* * *

Wincarnis is not a new, untried preparation.

It has been in use in England for 30 years.

10,000 British physicians have recommended it.

They prescribe it for the results of overwork, "brain-fag", anemia, insomnia, debility, exhaustion and nervous diseases of all kinds—that general physical weakness which we call a "run-down" condition—and for invalids convalescing from all diseases.

If you are unfit for either work or pleasure—nervous, irritable, shaky—it must be perfectly plain to you that the right food, and nothing else, can put you on your feet again.

Wincarnis is such a food.

It assists tired, worn-out human nature in a natural way.

You know that steel wires, millstones and steam shovels wear out in time and need renewing.

So it is with the human machine.

You can keep it in good repair or neglect it and pay the price in lost vitality, shattered nerves and general debility in some serious form.

Wincarnis contains precisely the ingredients which will assist Nature in that process of rebuilding and renewing which she is always striving to effect.

Just a trial will convince you, by the evidence of your own senses, that this is true. The coupon printed below enables you to get a sample free. Use the coupon today.

MALONE SWORN IN; WILL FIGHT BOSSES

Urges Support of Mayor-elect Mitchel and Interest in City Affairs.

COLLECTOR HITS TAMMANY

To Work for "Radical Changes of Party Purpose and Party Leadership."

Dudley Field Malone took the oath of office as Collector of the Port of New York yesterday. He asked those who had gathered at the Custom House to witness his induction into office to do all within their power to uphold the cause "of clean party politics" in this city by supporting in every way possible John Purroy Mitchel as Mayor. Mr. Malone referred to the result of the recent municipal election as "a fortunate day" in the political history of this city.

The ceremony of swearing in the new Collector was held in the large office room adjoining the office of the Collector. Mayor-elect Mitchel was represented by his secretary, Bertram De N. Cruger, and others present were former Collector William Loeb, Jr., George Gordon Battle, who has a plan for the reformation of Tammany Hall; Francis Lynde Stetson, Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A.; President Churchill of the Board of Education, Gen Nelson H. Henry, Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo, Raymond B. Fosdick, Robert Adamson, John L. De Saulles, John D. Crimmins, Julius Henry Cohen, Gen. Theodore Bingham, the Rev. Father Wall, and Charles W. Culkin, Thomas Rush, and William Dalton, three district leaders of Tammany Hall. Many Customs officials were in the gathering.

At 10:30 o'clock the veteran United States Commissioner John W. Shields advanced to the centre of the room and administered the oath of office to Mr. Malone. Then Mr. Cruger, as the representative of the Mayor-elect, read a speech that Mr. Mitchel would have delivered had he been in the city.

"My regret," Mr. Mitchel said, "in retiring from the Collectorship of this port is equaled only by my delight that I am to be succeeded by my friend, Dudley Field Malone.

"It was my pleasure and honor to take up the duties of this great and important office as the successor to a very distinguished incumbent, Collector Loeb, whose splendid work prepared the way for and made possible such improvements in the service as I have been able to put into effect in my short tenure of the office.

"And now that I am to be succeeded by a man for whose character and ability I have the highest opinion, I can lay down the office in fullest confidence that it will be ably and successfully administered.

"I cannot leave this office without saying to you, Mr. Stuart, and the other gentlemen in the Customs Service at this port, what I would wish to say, and what I know I would have had occasion to say again and again, were I to remain here. I wish to tell you how deeply I have been impressed by the splendid spirit of the men in this service, and by their great fidelity and ability. My association with you gentlemen of the Customs Service has been a very great pleasure. I leave you with the profoundest regret.

"I congratulate you on Mr. Malone's appointment. You may remember that early in March I urged the President to name him. He will make a great Collector. You will find him a rare associate and an inspiring leader. I need not bespeak for him your hearty co-operation, because I know you will give it. Under his leadership you will carry out the reorganization of the service and deal with the new and difficult problems which will arise under the new tariff law. The term of Collector Malone will be an epoch-making one, and it is with the greatest regret that I am not with you in person on this occasion to join in greeting him. I wish him godspeed."

The room rang with applause as the new Collector arose to reply to the welcoming words of his absent predecessor. He said that it was to him a great honor to be the successor of Mr. Mitchel, and that he would always endeavor to prove worthy of the confidence that the Mayor-elect has publicly expressed for him.

"We are living," said Mr. Malone, "in a fortunate day. We have recently witnessed the election of a new Mayor of the great City of New York by a political army composed of Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, and Independents. Because of the fact that men of all parties participated in the election of John Purroy Mitchel, I know I offend no sense of propriety and inject no note of partisanship in asking you all to uphold the cause of clean party politics and the administration of good government in this community under the new Mayor of New York.

"It is the duty of every good citizen to interest himself, not merely on Election Day, but 365 days of the year, in the affairs of politics and government. Without such vigilance on the part of the men of patriotism and ideals, republican institutions cannot endure.

"I, for one, wish to say to-day that, after I have completed my hours of service at the Custom House, the performance of the non-political business duties of the Collectorship of the Port of New York, I reserve the right, which belongs to every citizen, to spend my leisure time in fighting for clean politics and sound administration. I am not interested in the results of one contest. Those leaders of parties—and we have them in all parties—who work for purposes of government which are not republican and not American never take one defeat as conclusive. And I intend to dedicate not merely one campaign, but the rest of my life, in this City of New York to a fight for radical changes of party purpose and party leadership.

"You, gentlemen of the service, are to continue in co-operation with me under a Democratic President and a Democratic Administration in Washington, but for an absolutely non-partisan conduct of the business affairs of the Port of New York.

"The American people, before Election Day, divide themselves into parties and differ on policies, but after Election Day these party differences are merged by a spirit of patriotism into a well-known desire on the part of all the people to serve the country and its interests without regard to faction or previous divergence of party view. Consequently it should not only be the object, but it is the duty of the officials of Government to bend the administration of office to the service of all the people, without regard to partisanship."

Mr. Malone closed his speech with a promise that as Collector he would have no policies to proclaim. He said he realized his office was not a political one, and that he would know no such word as "favoritism" and would enforce the law strictly and impartially.

DEMOCRATS SPENT $33,147 ON STATE

MITCHEL CAMPAIGN FUNDS

W. H. Reynolds Gave $5,066 and Vincent Astor $2,500—J. B. Ford Helped Republicans with $2,500.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 24.—George H. McGuire of Syracuse, now prominent in the public eye through revelations made by him to District Attorney Whitman in New York regarding up-State Democratic "bagmen," contributed $1,000 to the Democratic State Committee's fund for the late campaign, according to the statement of Treasurer Arthur A. McLean made to the Secretary of State. The contribution was made on Oct. 30.

When the campaign opened the State Committee had a balance of $62,246. This was swelled to $65,790 by contributions. George B. Van Namee, Clerk of the Assembly, and Lou F. Betts each contributed $100; Frank Disney and W. H. Follette each $30; James W. Fleming and John J. O'Connell each $250, and William Mansfield $125. The other contributions were in sums of from $10 to $50. The total expenditures were $33,147, and the estimated unpaid bills and other liabilities $19,518.

The statement of expenditures, which covers a year, shows that great interest was taken in the inauguration of William Sulzer; items for "inaugural expenses and "Governor's reception" run from Nov. 27 to Feb. 27. These include five items for Thomas J. Torpey aggregating $506; three for Charles White, $200; John A. Mason, $50, and Edward Burke, $25. The largest expenditure was for plate matter for newspapers, $7,967. To the Kings County Democratic Committee $5,000 was given. The State Committee's inauguration expenses were $23.24, a hotel bill, and those of the electors $5.70, also a hotel bill.

Republican County Committee.

Ogden Mills, Treasurer of the New York Republican County Committee, reports receipts from Sept. 24 to Nov. 6 of $37,985 and expenditures of $37,015; balance, $970; notes outstanding, $6,000. Other Reports.

The New York County Progressives received $25,418 and expended $22,767; balance, $2,646. To each Assembly district was given from $25 to $75. The principal subscribers were: W. Emlen Roosevelt and Mrs. Willard D. Straight, each $500; H. E. Verran and A. H. Scribner, each $200; Melvine G. Palliser, $150; Henry M. Stevenson and John E. Lowe, Jr., each $125; John W. Ilnigram and James S. Meng, each $100.

William R. Hearst gave the New York City Independence League Committee $1,000 on Oct. 24 and $1,000 on Nov. 3. The receipts were $2,797, the expenditures $2,666, and the liabilities $5,323. Among the subscribers were Herbert R. Limburg, $250; P. D. Riordan, $200; James A. Allen and J. Irving Haushe, each $100.

This was the final day for filing campaign statements, and the office of the Secretary of State was flooded with them. Reports filed showed:

Anti-Tammany Jeffersonian Alliance of New York, receipts $9,596; expenditures, $6,571; liabilities, $6,737.

Citizens' Union of New York: Receipts, $8,494; disbursements, $8,490. Isaac Seligman contributed $500, the largest individual sum.

Bronx County Progressives: Receipts, $5,525, including $1,500 from August F. Schwarzler; expenditures, $5,434.

Lorenz Zeller (for New York General Sessions Judge) Committee received $10,275; disbursements, $11,180.

SAY WILSON AIDS CATHOLICS

Methodists Attack Appointments—Thus Explain Mexican Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 24.—President Wilson's appointment of Catholics to Federal offices was criticised to-day by the Rev. Dr. James W. Marshall, Superintendent of the New Brunswick District of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Marshall also scored the President for his "vacillating policy in Mexico," and said that the reason he was "so tardy in taking action" was because Mexico was a Catholic country.

Dr. Marshall's criticism of Mr Wilson came in a discussion of a paper on "Thanksgiving and Patriotism" before the New Brunswick Preachers' Association in St. Paul's Church, Ocean Grove, this morning. Methodist ministers along the shore attend these meetings, which are held weekly.

The District Superintendent said that 80 per cent. of Mr. Wilson's appointees were men of the Catholic Church. Dr. Marshall's criticism was concurred in by other ministers, though one or two of them doubted that the Superintendent had the percentage correct. There was no comment on the Mexican policy of the President.

Dr. Marshall also said the Catholic Church had become aggressive in matters of State recently, and he deplored what he called President Wilson's furtherance of that aggression

There is no worry on The Claridge menu

How like a man playing roulette is a man speculating on hidden secrets of the menu.

And this, of course, is all wrong, because worry or apprehension before a meal is inimical to the benefits of eating it.

To eat with profit, you must eat with pleasure, and to eat with pleasure you must banish all worry from your mind.

We realize, of course, how difficult this is as a rule, and that is why we urge upon you the wisdom of dining at The Claridge, where there is neither worry nor need of it, but cooking which faithfully interprets all the flavor and the verve of the viand and the vegetable.

M. E. STONE SAYS WE ARE NEWS MAD

The Newspaper Should Be Informative, He Tells Students of Journalism.

IT MAY ENTERTAIN ALSO

Highest Mission Is to Lead Current Opinion by Intelligent Discussion.

The making of a newspaper was described by Melville E. Stone, General Manager of The Associated Press, in his address yesterday on the subject "What Is News?" to the School of Journalism at Columbia University. Because of the limited time at his disposal, Mr. Stone confined himself to the chief function of a newspaper, the gathering and presentation of the news.

"The newspaper as you and I know it is distinctly of American origin and growth," he said. "There is nothing like it in any other place on earth. The nearest approach is, of course, to be found in England, but if you carefully study the English papers, you will agree that their resemblance to American newspapers is not so close as to make them twin enterprises. The newspapers of France, Germany, Italy, and Austria, with rare exceptions, are not newspapers at all, but are the mouthpieces of individual publicists.

"Here and there, as in the case of two daily papers of Buenos Aires, and the Cologne Gazette, and the Temps of Paris, there are journals which rise to the level of some resemblance to the products of our efforts in America. I should also include the papers of Canada and Australia. But these isolated instances constitute the exceptions which prove the rule."

Reviewing the long conflict between the Government and the people that resulted in a free press and free speech, Mr. Stone continued:

"I believe that the newspaper to perfectly fulfill its mission should first furnish the information upon which the citizen may form a judgment for his guidance in both his business and his political relations; second, it should be an intelligent presentation and discussion of public questions and fairly lead the citizen in the path of business and civic righteousness; third, it may very properly contribute to the healthy entertainment of the reader."

Mr. Stone said that as a nation we are a news-mad people, and, after summing up a list of things so often treated as news, such as executions, prizefights, divorce cases, and matters of the domestic circle, he added:

"Now, as a matter of fact these things are episodes. They are in no sense contributions to the real history of the world. This sort of journalism is, after all, not the most profitable sort of journalism. I have had some experience in the business, and that experience demonstrated conclusively that the publication of real information brought subscribers in large numbers, and the class of subscribers which it brought became fast friends of my newspaper. Seeking to secure a proper perspective of the world's happenings, I dismissed the episodes of the hour in short measure and set out to learn and to present the things which the world was doing in the field of science, of ethics, of politics, of economics. I found that a responsive chord was touched at once.

"We are a peculiar people. Drawn from all quarters of the globe, with many millions having no just conception of the mission ordained for this republic, with racial prejudices which are natural and inevitable, we as a people are facing problems of tremendous import. It is imperative that somebody, somehow, shall do some thinking. And I cannot help believing that there is a great body of the people who would like to do this thinking if they had only a chance.

"Are we doing all we can to better such a condition? The newspaper has practically driven out of existence in this country the review; even the magazines are devoted, as a rule, to fiction of the most inconsequential character; even in the newspapers, in large measure, editorial opinion has disappeared. Where, then, shall you turn for a serious, thoughtful consideration of any public question? May I suggest that I believe there is a great longing on the part of many people for real information and that I believe it would prove profitable to attempt to minister to this desire.

"It follows from what I have said that I think it is as reporters and not as advisers or as entertainers that we rise to our highest stature. An intelligent reporter is far more valuable than an intelligent editor. I have indicated to you my belief that the highest and best form of news was informative in its character; that we should be writing the real history of the world and that so far as may be we should dismiss the episode and the tittle-tattle. I know there is a present rage for so-called human interest stories. It is not a new form of media.

"What we need are newspapers having such vision that they are able to present a fair perspective of the really important things that are happening in the world, to whom, for instance, the chaotic condition in Mexico is of some more moment than a Nan Patterson case here."

Matters of real human interest, Mr. Stone said, were like those questions involved in unrest conditions in England, the agitation now going on in the Chinese Republic; the development of race prejudice in South Africa, where the struggle between the whites and natives presents a difficult problem to the British Government; the current inquiry in national finance; the high cost of living, and the question of equal suffrage for men and women.

"They are all subjects furnishing news of the very highest order," he said. "As compared with them the antics of our friends at Newport, the proceedings of the divorce courts at Reno, a fire in Grand Street, or a report of the Court of General Sessions seem to be somewhat inconsequential. As a rule, the profitable and influential newspapers devote a great deal of their space to matters of an informative character.

"But lest I be entirely misunderstood let me repeat that a newspaper to be successful should be entertaining, but mere entertainment should not be its final end and aim. Moreover, I believe in sensational journalism. To be news at all a thing must be sensational. It is the unusual, the startling quality to any information which makes it news.

"The story of the recent murder trial in Kieff, Russia, was of enormous worth, and rightfully was of great news value. I think the publication of it saved hundreds of lives. I have no doubt that if the old methods in Russia still obtain and if the trial of Beilies had been a secret one, the probably would have been convicted, and there would have followed a massacre of the Jews. I think that such a massacre would have followed his acquittal but for the publicity given to the case, and I firmly believe in the moral value of mere news publishing."

Talcott Williams, director of the school, announced to the class after Mr. Stone had gone that the latter was instrumental in making an arrangement with the Russian Government whereby it was possible to send out to the world the news of the trial of Beilies.

Discrimination and Favoritism Also Complained Of by New York Team Owners' Association.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Allegations of discrimination and charges of confusion in the placing or freight in the terminals of the leading railroads and steamship lines centring at New York are contained in a complaint filed to-day with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the New York Team Owners' Association, composed of sixty-five members, who have 1,500 horses and auto trucks hauling freight.

The railroad and steamship lines have about five acres of freight stations in New York. It is alleged that merchandise is placed in these stations in a heterogeneous mass, piled frequently without longitudinal or transverse aisles, and the commission is informed that where there are aisles they are barely large enough for the passing of a truck.

The charge is made that fragile articles, like those of glass, are mingled with iron pipe, and oil with carpets, rags, wool, cotton and other inflammable materials, that beer in barrels is piled with furniture and machinery, and that the goods of one merchant are superimposed on the goods of another, while boxes, bales, and bundles are dumped together when unloaded from freight cars without regard to whether the markings on the goods are visible, parts of consignments arriving together being frequently separated by careless handling and so promiscuously scattered as to be reported "lost."

It is averred that at the end of three days such reported "lost" goods are put in storage houses owned by the railroads or steamship companies and that consignees are compelled to pay the unloading and storage charges. It is asserted that drivers frequently are compelled to go into the cars on the tracks to obtain goods to be delivered by team.

This condition, the petition alleges, results in confusion and congestion, causing long lines of teams to wait at the entrances, and resulting in great delay and loss to patrons.

The association, through its President, Joseph K. Orr; its Secretary, Charles E. Ertz, and J. M. Lovejan and Joseph Loria, alleges that the carriers show favoritism to certain team and truck owners, allowing them to drive past teams having prior position in line. It is alleged that the carriers do not employ enough clerks, weighers, and checkers.

The complaint alleges that at terminal freight stations in many other cities in the United States the same railroads are affording to consignees what is known as tail-end delivery, but that this is denied to consignees in New York City. At those stations in other cities where there is tail-end delivery, it is averred, there is no congestion, no discrimination and no delay. The commission is asked to order the carriers to put a system of tail-board delivery into force in New York City, and order such other changes as are considered necessary.

The railroads named as defendants are the New York Central, New York, New Haven & Hartford, Long Island, Pennsylvania, Central of New Jersey, Lackawanna, Reading, Lehigh, Baltimore & Ohio, West Shore, Central Vermont, and New York, Ontario & Western.

The steamship companies designated as defendants are the International Mercantile Marine, Cunard Line, North German Lloyd, Hamburg-American Line, Scandinavian-American Steamship Company, Anchor Line, Panama Steamship Company, American Transport Line, Old Dominion Line, Merchants and Miners Transportation Company, Southern Steamship Company, Clyde Line, American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railway and Steamship Company, Austro-American Steamship Company, New London Steamship Company, Providence Steamship Company, New England Steamship Company, Central Hudson Steamship Company, Cuneo Steamship Company, Holland-America Line, and Furness-Withy company.

Mr. Simonson's Chauffeur Acquitted

SOMERVILLE, Mass., Nov. 24.—Frederick A. Copman, chauffeur for William Simonson of New York, was to-day freed from a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Charles Nickerson, who was run down by an automobile driven by Copman on Nov. 9. Judge Wentworth of the District Court found that the chauffeur was not at fault.

A Keen Creative Brain

Has value far above money alone because such a brain can win not only money, but—what money often fails to win—SUCCESS.

Brains are built—same as other parts of the body—from the food one eats.

The ordinary diet often lacks certain elements essential to the well balanced nourishment of both body and brain. Especially is this true of white bread flour, which, to make it white, is deprived of valuable mineral salts in the milling process.

Grape-Nuts
FOOD

made of finest whole wheat and barley, retains the mineral salts (grown in the grain) and other nutritious elements, and thus supplies perfectly what white flour bread lacks.

This lack is often the difference between a weak body and dull, ineffective brains and the strong, keen, creative kind.

Grape-Nuts comes ready to eat direct from package—fresh and clean. Delicious with cream or good milk.

It is a concentrated, easily digested food, and as the cereal part of the usual meal has helped thousands toward a new and successful life.

"There's a Reason for Grape-Nuts"

Shaw

has made an astonishing confession of faith in which he fathers the most daring remedy ever proposed for the social and economic evils of our day. It is a remarkable contribution in more ways than one. It is Shaw rampant. You will chuckle at the thrusts of his rare wit. You will squirm under the welting lash of his indignation. The tall, red-bearded Irishman cracks every head he sees and rollicks along from love to marriage to money to business to religion to happiness. Lack of space kept him this side of the grave. Don't miss "The Case for Equality." It's a literary joy-ride. Read it to-night. (All news-stands.)

"THE PROPHETS"

John S. Sargent's Famous Paintings in the Original Colors

These paintings, which are one of the features of the Boston Public Library, will be reproduced by the same process used when The New York Times issued the Morgan pictures and Abbey's "Holy Grail." The complete frieze, as printed in the original colors, will be 56 inches long and 10 inches wide, on super-paper and suitable for framing. It will be equal to anything ever offered by the Christmas publications costing 50 cents and a dollar.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY

To reproduce these photographs, the new rotogravure process will be used. The pictures were selected by seven noted artists from hundreds submitted when The Times asked its readers for photographs representing the typical American girl. So many attractive photographs were received that it was decided not to limit the selections to 29, as originally planned. The seven artists chose 90 altogether, and a second rotogravure section with the remaining 61 will be issued on December 14. Soon after the beginning of the year all the regular Pictorial Sections of The Times will be printed by the rotogravure method.

THE BARGE CANAL CONTRACTS.

GOV. GLYNN will know how to instruct the State's special attorney, Mr. OSBORNE, in his investigation of contracts for building the State Barge Canal. It was on March 19, last, that Mr. GLYNN, a member of the Canal Board, said:

> We demand to know if the people of the State are going to have a barge canal that costs $101,000,000, as decreed by popular vote, or are going to have a canal to cost millions more than the original estimate.

The people now know that it will cost millions more. In his address before the New York State Waterways Association at Albany on Oct. 30 State Engineer JOHN A. BENSEL announced that the cost would be, not $101,000,000 as voted by the people, but $146,000,000. Mr. BENSEL, who is one of the pillars of Tammany Hall; Secretary of State MAY, whose sponsor was Mr. MCCOOEY, the ally of Mr. MURPHY in Brooklyn; Superintendent of Public Works PECK, and State Treasurer KENNEDY last Spring voted to approve a number of contracts pronounced by the army engineers, Major SIMMONS and Col. LUCAS, to be superfluous and not contemplated in the original plan. Up to Nov. 1 work costing $13,000,000 had been done under this Tammanyized Canal Board; the total of work then amounted to $64,000,000, and the remaining contracts yet to be finished will entail an added cost of $82,000,000.

The scandal of millions wasted on the State highways is great, but the scandal of political jobbery, extravagance, and criminal activity with respect to the canal contracts is greater. The attention of the Canal Board was, in June, 1912, called to the wholesale defaulting on contracts after the easiest part of the work had been performed, and to the paying of contractors at a rate that applied to the most difficult and expensive part. By getting extensions of time in which to complete contracts, obtaining revisions of contracts by supplementary agreements and submitting large bills for "extras" under the guise of new work done, Supt. PECK estimated that the State was paying from $1.25 to $1.90 a cubic yard for excavations that ought not to cost more than 30 cents. Mr. WHITMAN may find in his investigation into contributions made to the Democratic State campaign fund the names of contractors in this county who defaulted on their contracts after excavating earth and receiving the State's check for sums many times higher than the actual value of their services. Mr. OSBORNE may find plenty of evidence of this nature outside New York County.

WIRELESS FOR RAILROADS.

If we may trust the predictions of Mr. L. B. FOLEY, the Lackawanna's Superintendent of Telegraph, and Mr. DAVID SARNOFF, Chief Inspector of the Marconi Company, wireless service on trains will soon be an accomplished fact. The tests conducted last Sunday on the Lackawanna Limited demonstrated that wireless messages can be successfully sent and received by a train running fifty miles an hour. The experiments were made on the route between Scranton and Binghamton. These cities are sixty miles apart, but while the train was between the two stations it was always in communication by wireless with one or the other of them. Thirty miles east of Scranton the regular conductor was taken ill. But there was no delay. A wireless message was sent forward to the Railroad Superintendent, and when the train reached the station a relief conductor was waiting. At one stage of the journey the train became crowded and the conductor decided that an extra coach was needed. Without stopping at a station to send a message by telegraph, he notified the wireless operator, and when the train reached the next station an extra car was waiting, ready for immediate coupling.

The adaptation of wireless service to moving trains has still to be perfected. But Mr. FOLEY is sure that the difficulties can be eliminated:

> In my opinion the wireless will revolutionize railroading. We won't do the revolutionizing this week, maybe not this month, but the time is coming, and it is not far distant, when the wireless telegraph on trains will make the safety and convenience of railroad traveling 100 per cent. greater than to-day. And as a preventive of accidents I think the wireless will prove of the greatest value.

The use of wireless in the operation and control of signal systems has been tried and proved on a few European railroads. The German Imperial State Railway near Berlin uses the Railophone signaling system, which, its inventors claim, makes the passing of a danger signal impossible by giving three distinct warnings to the engineer, and by an automatic application of the brakes when the fourth signal is disregarded. But the experiments conducted by Mr. FOLEY and Mr. SARNOFF go much further. They represent the first attempt to send actual word-messages from a moving train. Last Sunday's tests were so successful that Mr. FOLEY is convinced that "the only thing required to perfect the service is an "adjustment of the instruments" on trains and stations until they are in tune.

MR. MITCHEL AND MR. CHURCHILL

The announcement by the Mayor-elect that he approves the reappointment of Mr. CHURCHILL as a member of the Board of Education is not calculated to strengthen public confidence in his judgment.

It is true that Mr. MITCHEL is the head of a committee that has investigated the condition of the educational system, and in pursuance of that work there was employed a body of educational experts of great experience and of high authority. With some of the views of some of these experts Mr. MITCHEL strongly disagreed. But there was one principle accepted by them, which happens to be the principle on which the whole educational system of the city is professedly founded, and which is so generally approved that it may be looked upon as fundamental. It is that the teaching work of the schools should be in the hands of professional educators and that the Board of Education should confine its work to administration. Mr. CHURCHILL in practice is not faithful to this principle. He has done much to break it down. He backed the McKee bills in the Legislature last Winter which would have completely undermined it. He has been in favor of taking the authority over the teaching work from the professional educators and concentrating it in the board. And he has advocated special legislation that would introduce confusion and a fatal tendency toward demoralization in the schools.

It is not necessary to question his motives. It is quite plain that his ideas and his methods are hopelessly reactionary and likely to be extremely dangerous. This is the opinion of a number of gentlemen of the highest character, deeply interested in the schools and equipped by study and experience to form a fair judgment. We are surprised that it is not the opinion of Mr. MITCHEL.

THE ALABAMA SENATORSHIP.

The language of the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people, is not obscure, yet the question of the authority of the Governor of a State to appoint a Senator to fill out an unexpired term has been again raised in the case of Mr. FRANK P. GLASS of Alabama, as it was raised in the case of Mr. CLAYTON, named for the same vacancy. The final clause of the amendment declares that "this amendment shall not be "so construed as to affect the election or term of a Senator chosen "before it becomes valid as part of "the Constitution." Senator JOHNSTON of Alabama, whose death created the vacancy in question, was elected in 1909; his term would have expired in 1915. The Alabama case, therefore, is within the scope of the clause above quoted. The amendment, by its own terms, is not to be so construed "as to affect the election or term" of Senator JOHNSTON. His election, of course, cannot be called in question. But of his term more than a year remains. If the amendment is not to "affect" that unexpired part of the term, manifestly it is not to apply to it, because it would be impossible to apply the new provision without affecting the unexpired part of Senator JOHNSTON'S term. That is plain enough, we should suppose, to remove all doubt.

Doubt arises, however, from the second clause of the amendment:

> When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, that the Legislature of any State may empower the Executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancy by election as the Legislature may direct.

The natural, the reasonable, and, it seems to us, the inevitable construction of the amendment as a whole would be that the clause immediately above quoted refers to elections to be held in all coming years when the amendment has been in effect for so long a time that no Senatorial term will have had its beginning in a year prior to the time when the amendment became valid. Thereafter vacancies would be filled as provided in the second clause; until that time the Governor would have power to fill vacancies by appointment, since the amendment is not to affect terms beginning before it became part of the Constitution.

The strained and unnatural construction which would invalidate the appointment of Mr. GLASS to fill out the term of Senator JOHNSTON would impose serious hardship upon the State of Alabama. The Legislature of that State meets once in four years; and the next session will begin in January, 1915. If the Governor must seek authority from the Legislature he will have first to order a special election to fill about twenty vacancies in that body which have occurred in the last two years. Then, too, he will have to call a special session of the Legislature. As it is not at all improbable that the Legislature would authorize the filling of the vacancy by a direct vote of the people, the Governor would have to order a special election for that purpose. All this would cost the people of Alabama more than $100,000. The justification for putting the State to that expense would rest upon the exceedingly narrow ground of lawyers' doubts as to the meaning of the amendment, which does not seem to afford reasonable basis for doubt. The best lawyers of Alabama believe that Mr. GLASS's appointment is entirely valid. Many lawyers of the Senate hold that view. The Senate Committee on Elections, we should suppose, would construe the amendment in the light of reason and common sense, according to its manifest intent. That would give Mr. GLASS his seat and spare the State of Alabama the great trouble and cost of proceedings based upon a very doubtful construction of the language of the amendment.

THE GREAT BUILDING FUND.

Whether or not the full sum of $4,000,000 is all subscribed before the books are closed to-day, the committees of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations have assuredly performed a prodigious labor with remarkable success, while the public response to the appeal has been almost unprecedented. Subscriptions obtained up to last night carry the amount up to such high figures that there can be no further doubt that the full sum will be reached, even if a few thousands are lacking to-day. The money is needed for the best of causes. The value of the work for the social and moral improvement of this city accomplished by these two associations is not questionable.

They are not sectarian, they meddle with the convictions of none of their subscribers or beneficiaries, they are not instruments of pauperization. They provide for many thousands of the young of both sexes shelter, instruction, and training. They maintain libraries, gymnasia, swimming baths, they teach languages and trades. They place all these advantages within the reach of scanty purses. The money now being obtained will be used as a building fund of the two associations, as more buildings are needed for the establishment of branches.

MR. MARKS'S PLAIN SPEECH.

We are glad that Mr. MARCUS M. MARKS, President-elect of the Borough of Manhattan, has felt moved to tell his fellow business men some homely and pertinent facts concerning the part of their class in the recent city campaign. The result of that campaign was undoubtedly of the highest importance to business men as a class, besides the interest they must have felt in the general welfare of the community, which was so deeply involved. And it was hailed, quite justly, as an advance in the application of sound business principles and methods to the affairs of the city, since it secured for another four years the substantial continuation of the best administration the city has had. Yet Mr. MARKS very candidly declares that, so far as his observation and experience go, the business men as a whole took but an inactive part and wielded very much less influence than they might have done.

The President-elect of the borough does not give any full explanation of this unfortunate fact beyond the suggestion that the business men have too much to do with their private affairs to take up the kind and amount of work that is required to accomplish anything in politics. But one fact will occur to any one acquainted with the situation, namely, that the amount of work needed to accomplish anything in politics is grossly excessive under our present system, and should promptly be reduced. Take, for example, the conditions attending the movement by which the successful candidates in the late election were chosen. The result was on the whole a happy one, but the process was absurd. It would probably have been a hopeless failure but for the impeachment of the Governor. The work of the Committee of One Hundred and Seven was practically trade and dicker, and that melancholy and scandalous fact was due to the tangle of party politics in the city, county, and State, and to the numerous offices to be filled.

To start with, there was the desire of the Republican managers to get all the places they could and to secure the second column on the ballot. This led to a long squabble which was complicated by the designs and the intrigues of the Independence League. In the negotiations that ensued a dozen offices in the county were necessarily made the subjects of traffic, and more or less affected the final choice for the principal nominations. When the task was completed it was, of course, the chief nominations alone that influenced the voters. Now for work of this kind it will always be extremely hard to get business men to enlist. The number who will take the time for it and are capable of it will probably increase, but that number will always be insufficient to accomplish much until the number of offices is substantially reduced. That is the object toward which all effective reorganization must be directed. We shall be greatly disappointed if it be not undertaken in earnest by the gentlemen intrusted with the City Government at the late election.

WOMAN IN FICTION AND FACT.

From RICHARDSON'S ineffable Clarissa all the women of English fiction, until the era of HARDY and MEREDITH, in the view of ELLEN GLASGOW, represent a false masculine ideal of womanhood. Even THACKERAY, who went to life for his heroes, "followed the Victorian pattern of femininity for his "heroines." FIELDING, "who feared "nothing else on earth, lived in terror of offending against the popular "legend of the womanly woman." Before MEREDITH'S time, "when English novelists portrayed woman in "heroic dimensions, it was invariably "in dimensions of sex. She lived for "man, and, failing this, she died for "man."

In this vein Miss GLASGOW argues, in the uncommonly interesting and well considered article she contributes to the Holiday Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, to be published next Sunday, on recent literature dealing with the vital subject of feminism. The book she selects as the most notable of the year in this branch of controversial literature is Mrs. WALTER GALLICHAN'S "The Truth About Woman." It combats, powerfully and logically, the tradition that has colored all that man has written about women "from the wisdom of "SOLOMON to the folly of Sir ALMROTH "WRIGHT." Miss GLASGOW'S is one of the ablest and clearest of recent expositions of the newer ideal of womanhood. It is no argument for woman suffrage and no discussion of the wage question, and it is neither prejudiced nor academic. It will appeal to all readers of this noteworthy publication, not to a few, for it is really explanatory. This is one of a series of four articles contributed by experts on the literature of the year relating to subjects of vital importance, and together they form but one extraordinary feature of many in this Holiday Book Number.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Elimination Declared the Remedy.

In explanation of his dislike for and disbelief in prohibition as a defense against the evils of alcohol, Prof. SUTHERLAND SIMPSON of Cornell is quoted as saying that heredity is more potent than environment. Therefore no race will ever be temperate, he thinks, until the strain in it predisposed to excessive indulgence has been eliminated by the effects of such indulgence.

The sober peoples, according to Prof. SIMPSON, are those who have been subjected to the influence of alcohol so long that the survivors are all descended from ancestors who either had no taste for intoxicants or who could keep it within the control of reason. His conclusion, apparently, is that to whatever extent we restrict the consumption of strong drink, by just so much will we defer the happy day when nobody will be a drunkard and nobody will suffer from the various ills that the drunkard creates for all about him.

In other words, those of us with an inclination to drink more than enough should be allowed, and even encouraged, to do it in order that we and our kind may the sooner be weeded out and leave room for our betters.

This is a hard doctrine, but not without a certain cold plausibility. It ignores several important considerations, however. One of them is the fact that between environment and heredity—which has been well defined as merely the sum of past environments—there is no such clear distinction as to make safe calling either more potent than the other. And certainly, in an environment whence alcohol was entirely absent, nobody of any heredity would drink it, though possibly enough clamoring nerves would be soothed to ultimate destruction by other and even worse narcotics. Again, heredity, as a conceivable alternative to killing off the drunkards, may develop people able and willing to protect and cure them, and using prohibition as one means for the attainment of that desirable end. It is, to be sure, a means that has not as yet worked to complete satisfaction anywhere or shown great promise of meriting its name.

Perhaps its chief claim to confidence lies in what it reveals as to the sentiment of a community or congeries of communities, but contentment under it is rarely permanent. Alternations from "wet" and "dry" are characteristic of towns in the local option States, and a most curious phenomenon it is, too, hinting as it does that "wetness" is not quite as bad, or "dryness" quite as good, as the prohibitionists assert.

A Warning for the Housewives.

There is an obvious verging toward what the law recognizes as conspiracy in the effort to unite great numbers of people in a boycotting of eggs as food. This will be a boycotting of the egg dealers as well as of their eggs, and if the dealers had any friends—if they were not generally and next to unanimously held to be guilty of what in ancient legal phraseology was called "regrating and forestalling"—it is at least possible that they might make serious trouble for the estimable Mrs. HEATH and her fellow-preachers of the new crusade.

This particular boycott, however, differs from those which the courts have condemned in that it is aimed at a whole trade, instead of individuals carrying on that trade, and in that the granting of the demands made would, in theory at least, benefit, not a special group seeking only their own interests, but everybody except the regraters and forestallers themselves.

Of course, if great numbers of us did stop eating eggs for a while, the price of that commodity would come down. The plan therefore meets successfully the pragmatic test, and is to be commended on that account if on no other. It is a rather desperate expedient, however, for eggs rank among the very best of foods, combining, as not many others do, the merits of being nutritious, healthful, and to almost all agreeable. A self-imposed deprivation of them is consequently more than a slight hardship, even though most people, nowadays, can get no eggs that have not deteriorated more or less in cold storage, that mitigated blessing without which big cities can hardly live, but with which they live regretful of a Golden Age, when, though we often lacked what we wanted, what we had was fresh.

That Golden Age, by the way, like most others, gains enchantment from distance. There was a good deal of "storage" then, as now, with salt and smoke taking the place of low temperatures, and not even the most vehement of the leagued housewives really wants a return to the old methods and conditions.

The best effect to be hoped from the proposed egg boycott is that it will compel an improvement in distribution and shorten the journey from producer to consumer. Neither would profit any more from that than the dealers themselves, for the latter, even at present prices, are probably making no colossal interest on the capital invested, and it is well known that not infrequently their speculations result in large losses.

An Antique Custom Resuscitated.

There is a reminder of the Middle Ages in the news that the Federals down in Mexico, to protect their railway trains from attack, are forcing the wives and children of the rebels to ride in them on every trip made. This is a survival of the "hostage" idea, once commonly utilized as a means of compelling enemies to refrain from a hasty following of their inclinations to break the peace.

The device went out of fashion when the task of killing the hostage in cold blood, in case his friends broke their promises or otherwise misbehaved, became intolerably repugnant to the sensitive exponents of modern civilization. It was done calmly enough in the good old times, when dying and causing to die seem to have been viewed as a not very important part of the day's work by almost everybody. Our neighbors evidently retain a good deal of the ancient equanimity, though even among them there has been a change, else would they not trust to the presence of these women and children as insuring the safety of their trains.

The hostages, by the way, must have more than a few tremors as they make their journeys, for if there are any rebels who sincerely think the capture or destruction of those trains essential to their country's welfare, they could easily argue out a justification, if not a duty, to disregard the presence of their relatives. The argument would be especially convincing if the women and children happened to be the relatives of other rebels than those making the attack. Several large problems in morals and patriotism are involved in this situation, and doubtless they are all receiving due consideration in Mexico.

WIRELESS PATENTS SUIT.

Injunction Against Marconi Firm Only Suspended Temporarily.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A special dispatch from Trenton, N. J., which is printed in THE TIMES and headed, "Dismisses Writ Against Marconi," seems to be inaccurately descriptive of Judge Rellstab's action in the case. Since many of your readers are interested in this matter I am giving the following outline:

In 1910 the National Electric Signaling Company began suit against the Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Company of America for infringement of United States Patents 918,306 and 918,307, which were issued in 1909 to Prof. Reginald A. Fessenden and are owned by the National Company. The case was fought through the District Court, and on Oct. 20, 1913, the United States Federal Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (Judges Gray, Buffington, and McPherson) handed down an opinion in which the Fessenden patents were sustained and the Telefunken Company declared an infringer.

Having these two patents adjudicated, the National Electric Signaling Company at once began an action for injunction against the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, which is alleged to be one of the largest infringers of the patents. A hearing in this case was held at Trenton last Monday, Nov. 17, at which time Judge Rellstab issued a preliminary injunction restraining the Marconi Company from further infringement except as to its pending contracts with the United States Navy. From the representations of the Navy Department it appeared to the court that a severe inconvenience might result if the Marconi Company were not allowed to deliver instruments already contracted for, so this was permitted by him under the provision that there be given a bond of $25,000 for the protection of the owners of the Fessenden patents.

Following the order of the court described above there was filed a motion to suspend the injunction, with affidavits from the Marconi Company's engineers stating that the apparatus complained of as infringing was installed at over 500 stations, and that to remove it would require some two months' time. In the argument before Judge Rellstab yesterday at Trenton, ex-Attorney General John W. Griggs stated for the Marconi Company that removing the apparatus immediately, as originally ordered, would so cripple the wireless service that if an accident at sea should occur great loss of life might result. With this in view Judge Rellstab suspended the injunction temporarily as to existing ship stations and those on shore intended for ship communication, but still restrains the Marconi Company from installing the infringing apparatus at any new plants, pending final settlement of the case. He further required a bond of $100,000 to guarantee payment to the National Company of any damages which may be proved to arise from the partial suspension of injunction.

It should be clear from the above that there has been no writ dismissed, but that, rather, the Marconi Company is now under injunction for infringement of Fessenden's patents.

The entire question is of so great public interest at this time that I feel you will not wish to leave uncorrected the mistaken impressions which your unintentionally (but none the less regrettably) incorrect item has already given.

Ailing Girl Needs Help.

When it began to be hot last Summer a little six-year-old girl was just getting over a severe attack of scarlet fever, and she and her brother, three years older, were sent to the country. The latter is a cripple, and both are the children of a widow who has lately lost her husband and the brother who had helped her so loyally while the man was ill with tuberculosis. The boy is again at home going happily to a school for crippled children. The girl, however, has made such improvement that a longer stay in the country gives promise of making her really well and strong instead of frail and ailing. The mother and her eldest daughter can care for the every-day expenses of the home, but cannot, without sacrifice, pay to keep her where she is so well off, or buy milk for the boy. The Charity Organization Society asks for $65 to meet these extra expenses during the Winter.

Gifts may be sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street, and will be acknowledged.

The society acknowledges with thanks the following contributions received in response to a previous appeal in THE TIMES.

Adolf Liebmann, $5; Henry Untermeyer, $5; E. A. R., $2; Anonymous, $5; A Widow, $1; Mrs. Robert Stobo, $1; Miss Caroline K. Herrick, $3; through THE NEW YORK TIMES, $1; Mrs. A. L. Millard, $2; B. W., $2; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mitchell, $25; J. W. T., $1; Cash, $25; F. H. H., $2; Maier Berliner, $1; Miss Edith M. Wetmore, $5; Mrs. Z. E. Heyward, $1.

A CENTENARY OF PEACE.

Popular Support Solicited for the Anglo-American Exposition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The organization of the Anglo-American Exposition, to be held in the year 1914 in London under the most distinguished patronage, deserves to receive the hearty and interested support of the people of the United States. The object of this exposition is to celebrate the centenary of peace and progress in the arts, sciences, and industries of the United States of America and the British Empire. This purpose is one of exceptional significance; for it is not the signing of the Treaty of Ghent alone that both nations will unite in celebrating, but also the development and spread among the masses of the people of both countries of that spirit of mutual understanding and good-will which makes the idea of armed conflict between them as abhorrent as its existence is unthinkable.

The United States, drawing, as it does, strong and helpful elements of its population from different nations and from various races in the Old World, is particularly justified in treating as of high significance the celebration of a centenary of peace with Great Britain.

It is the purpose of the Anglo-American Exposition not only to celebrate but to commemorate. It will aim to present with definiteness and with comprehensiveness a historic summary of what the two nations have achieved in their relations to education, to art, to science, to industry, and to commerce. The project for the exposition has received wide popular support. Representative committees on both sides of the Atlantic are generously devoting themselves to furthering the purposes of the exposition, and they invite co-operation and the support of public-spirited citizens everywhere.

In the exhibits, large space will be given to the products of inventive genius and to industry, because it is in these fields that the spirit of advance offers the most tangible and visible evidence of its activity. These evidences of manufacturing enterprise, which will be also witnesses to material prosperity, will help to strengthen the present bond of commercial union between the United States and the United Kingdom, and will, in so doing, serve to insure the continuance of peace and good-will between them. Ample grounds and appropriate buildings are provided to receive the exhibits from both nations, and it may confidently be counted upon that American pride and American patriotism will not be lacking to make the exhibit from the United States worthy of the best elements of our civilization.

TAX ON INSURANCE

Hits the Policy Holders by Making Premiums Higher.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the contents of your editorial article entitled "The Tax on Thrift and Benevolence" were committed to memory by the 40,000,000 life insurance policy holders insured for about $20,000,000,000, and by the legislators who insist upon taxing the institution of life insurance, the former, through public opinion, would constitute so militating a force against the attitude of the latter that the legislators would be compelled to pursue a new policy in the matter of life insurance taxation.

A fact which is not commonly known is that the interests of insurance companies and their policy holders are identical. High taxes affect the ineured just as much as they do the companies. Those who have studied the scientific principles of insurance know that aside from the actuarial calculations of mortality and interest, the size of the premiums depends upon administrative expenses, of which taxation is an important item. If higher taxes must be paid, the premiums must be correspondingly increased; or, what is the same, a possible reduction in the size of the premiums is prevented.

This becomes of vital importance to the masses of our people, when we bear in mind that there are in this country about 27,000,000 industrial policy holders, paying for insurance on the weekly premium plan, and insured for an average amount of about $100. Smaller taxes would mean that these people, who are in dire need of insurance, could have larger policies for their present premiums, or could have theeir present policies for lower premiums. A protest from these people would probably reverse the present attitude, but "our Governments levy [taxes] upon the corporations, and the policy holders neither see nor appreciate the influence which saps their security.

JUSTICE TO RAILROADS.

Deserve an Increase of Rates to Meet "Cost of Living."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the subject of freight rates, which seem to be a very troublesome matter for various Public Commissions, nothing can possibly seem more reasonable than to observe that, if railroad employes can get a 7 per cent. raise because the cost of living has gone up, then the railroads are confronted no less with the same "cost-of-living" problem, since everything they buy has also gone up considerably. And recent added burdens on them have been not only the gensral "cost-of-living" increase—we all remember the full-crew law and the contemporary inauguration of the parcel post, which was designed to help lower the "cost of living" for the people, (no noticeable result yet,) and which has so far netted the Government a magnificent loot estimated at from $10,000,000 to $30,000,000. The Government alone has gained by the parcel post, and the railroads have been shamefully robbed. Mincing words about it will not help matters; it's time for plain speech.

So that if the railroads are not to be outlawed and robbed for the benefit of their employes, the Post Office statistics, and "the people" at large in the parcel post, not to mention the "friends of the people," who seek and obtain political preferment by means of these measures, there seems no alternative but an increase of freight rates. If the railroads may be robbed, what is to save all other property from a like fate? Is property robbery? ROBERT P. GREEN.

Teaching Boys Self-Reliance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your reference in a recent issue to the runaway boy, Harry Butts, who was found through THE NEW YORK TIMES, leads me to suggest that it might be well if more provision were made by school authorities, parents or others in charge of the training of boys, to provide opportunities so that they might develop their latent power of self-reliance and resourcefulness. The father of this boy showed good sense in not punishing him. He runs no little risk, however, of not mixing caution and admonition and all that with his praise of him, which, if not done, is quite likely to encourage similar unwise action with dangers and risks which might lead to serious consequences.

I do not, of course, mean that in encouraging resourcefulness and self-confidence or a daring and venturesome spirit in a boy that I would advise him to take a chance and run away from home. There are other ways, and plenty, in which these qualities may be developed, and without a boy doing such a risky and ungrateful thing as to cut loose from his family and give them the anxiety and sorrow which follow from such an action. This boy shows fine ability, but he most certainly is lacking in judgment and a right understanding of what is due to his parents. JOHN C. COLLINS.

Czar Ferdinand's Abdication.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE FAST MAIL VANS.

Post Office Could Make Their Schedules Safer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the interest of a clearer understanding of the question needlessly raised by Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart as to whether the citizens of New York City should restrict to the legal limit the behavior of automobiles operated by contractors who carry the mails in this city, I submit the following: I would say that all mail matter can be divided into three classes: (1) Incoming, (2) outgoing, (3) local.

Every connection of outgoing mail matter with railroad and steamship terminals that is now made can be continued without any material change and without operating the mails vans at a speed in excess of nine miles an hour by simply closing the mails ten minutes earlier than they now close, applying the time thus saved to extending the running time of the mail trucks on their various trips. This would require no changes in schedules other than sending out the wagons that collect from chute boxes, and the collectors who bring in the mail from street boxes, ten minutes earlier than they now start. The quantity of mail matter that would be delayed by closing the mails ten minutes earlier is so small as to be negligible; particularly so when considered in conjunction with the increased hazard to life and limb that is a corollary of the present schedules.

Ninety-nine per cent. of all incoming connections with the local free delivery system that are now made can be continued without change by a similar extension of the running time between the railroad and steamship terminals and the Post Office and its branch stations and a corresponding change in the schedules of the free delivery routes.

The same facts apply to local mail matter. In many cases no change at all need be made in the schedules. Intelligent supervision and improved facilities for handling local mail matter will save much time that is now lost.

That is all there is to it. Why this tempest in the postal teapot?

Two branches of the Postal Service are involved in handling the mail—the transportation system under the supervision of Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart and the free delivery system under the supervision of First Assistant Postmaster General Roper. While Mr. Stewart has endeavored to improve the transportation of the mails, he has been placed in a false light by a combination of circumstances. Any one who listened to him at the hearing before the Aldermen could not fail to be impressed by his sincerity of purpose. No one who knew the facts could escape the conclusion that he had been badly advised as to the truth about local conditions.

He has been severely condemned by the press and accused of pompously and impudently announcing his intention to ride rough shod over our ordinances, when, in fact, there was not the slightest trace of pomposity or impudence in his manner and nothing in his utterances other than an honest statement of what he conceived to be his duty as an officer of the Government.

Unfortunately for him he has the bureaucratic habit of mind, and is obsessed with the value of the schedules put into operation by the local branch of his department. He lacks a proper sense of proportion, in this matter, because he has failed to receive or failed to weigh judicially the evidence adduced in the public interest against the alleged increased efficiency of the mail auto schedules.

Of course, the life of one child of the tenements is of far greater importance than the expeditious handling of the mails. WILLIAM V. MCMANUS, Ex-President, New York Letter Carriers' Association.

ART NOTES.

Fine Paintings in De Ridder Collection—Peixotto's Drawings.

The De Ridder collection, reviewed in a previous issue, contains, in addition to the canvases of first importance by virtue of the name and fame attached to them, a number of pictures by men not familiar to the general public, but capable of producing on occasion work rivaling any in the collection. There is Pieter Codde, for example, who imitated Terborch and Both and developed a delicate, firm style. His "Lady at the Piano," in the present exhibition, would hold its own with the best of Codde's masters, so pure and sensitive is the drawing of the blonde head, so alert and dignified the bearing, so reticent and exquisite the color.

There is also Adrian van Ostade's "Party of Smokers," in which the painter has placed his characters in a peasant's dwelling, taken pains that the time should be early in the evening before the great beer mugs had been too many times refilled, and has succeeded in avoiding the generally bibulous suggestion so common to the majority of his subjects. With this in his favor to start with, he has made his shadows so luminous, his lights so mellow and clear, his tone so quiet and unified that he takes a place in the gallery as a worthy associate of Metsu and De Hooch.

The landscapes form a particularly fine group. There are not only the noble Hobbema and a brilliant Albert Cuyp, but a bold and blonde van Goyen, a gloomy rich little Jacob Ruisdael, and serene river scenes by Salomon Ruisdael, two of Van der Velde's "Calms," and a skating scene by Jan van de Capelle. The entire collection is on view at the Kleinberger Galleries, an admission fee is charged of 50 cents in the morning and $1 in the afternoon, and the proceeds are to be given to the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor and to the Montefiore Home.

In a little upper gallery which has been dedicated to art exhibitions, Charles Scribner's Sons are showing the drawings by Ernest Peixotto, made as illustrations for his new book, "Pacific Shores From Panama." Some of the drawings are in wash and convey the effect of light falling strong and full on flat walls, as in "The Fortress of Sachsahuaman"; but departing from his staccato method of rendering the sparkle and shimmer of blazing sunlight, Mr. Peixotto loses much of his vivacity. A light, skipping touch conveys under his guidance the sense of atmosphere and mood, and where he is at his best, as in his drawings of the Acapulco streets, he gives the impression of intense color.

BOOTH BROTHERS MEET AS FRIENDS

But No Attempt Is Made to Unite Societies Which Split Seventeen Years Ago.

EVA BOOTH TO STAY HERE

Positive Denial of Her Transfer to London—Farewell Demonstration for Bramwell Booth Planned.

Gen. Bramwell Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, and his brother, Gen. Ballington Booth, President of the Volunteers of America, met for the first time in eight years yesterday, and for the second time since Ballington Booth led the secession from the Salvation Army seventeen years ago and founded the Volunteers of America. The previous meeting was when Ballington Booth was in London in 1905.

The brothers were the guests of the Rev. Alden L. Bennett, a neighbor and personal friend of Gen. Ballington Booth, at luncheon at the Alpha Delta Phi Club, 136 West Forty-fourth Street. All sources of information about the meeting agreed that it was of a personal and friendly nature. There was no formality and no one except a few of the closest associates of the two brothers knew when and where it was until several hours after it was over. It was stated authoritatively that no business was discussed by either of the Booths and the subject of amalgamating the two organizations headed by them was not mentioned.

A statement about the meeting was given out yesterday afternoon at the headquarters of both organizations. It was drawn up by the two brothers at the luncheon in the presence of Mr. Bennett, and read:

> Gen. Bramwell Booth of the Salvation Army and Gen. Ballington Booth, President of the Volunteers of America, have met today as the guests of the Rev. Alden L. Bennett, at the Alpha Delta Phi Club, 136 West Forty-fourth Street, New York City. After luncheon there was a private meeting between the two brothers. The interview was a friendly and brotherly one, and was, of course, entirely concerned with personal and family matters.

The rumor that Gen. Booth contemplated transferring his sister, Miss Eva Booth, from her command of the army in America to the head of an international bureau in London was emphatically denied yesterday by Col. W. T. Cox, the editor in chief of the Salvation Army publications, and a member of the council in which important army business is discussed.

The rumor started, it was said, several weeks ago when Miss Booth's assistants here heard unofficially that the council in London was considering her transfer. A letter was immediately written to the London authorities urging them, if the rumor was true, not to order Commander Booth from the United States. A reply came giving assurance that no such move would be made. To satisfy every one, Col. Cox yesterday issued this statement:

> There is no foundation for a statement that Miss Eva Booth, who is in charge of the Salvation Army work throughout the United States, is on the point of leaving her command. Miss Booth's command has been characterized by phenomenal success, both in the evangelistic work of the organization, in the acquisition of new buildings, the valuation of which amounts to millions of dollars, and in the building up of a great army of social and religious workers for the propagation of army principles.

John Wanamaker visited the Salvation Army Headquarters yesterday morning while Gen. Booth

LOTS OF SUSPENSE IN MAUDE'S NEW PLAY

And as an Octogenarian Sleuth He Provides a Most Delightful Figure.

REAL ART IN A THRILLER

"Grumpy," a Story-Book Play, Provides Entertainment That Should Prove Popular at Wallack's.

GRUMPY, a play in four acts, by Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percyval. At Wallack's Theatre.

Mr. Andrew Bullivant.....Cyril Maude
Mr. Ernest Heron.....Edward Combermere
Ruddock.....John Harwood
Mr. Jarvis.....Montagu Love
Mr. Isaac Wolfe.....Lennox Pawle
Dr. Maclaren.....Hunter Nesbitt
Keble.....Arthur Curtis
Merridew.....James Dale
Dawson.....Percival Young
Virginia Bullivant.....Margery Maude
Mrs. Maclaren.....Lena Halliday
Susan.....Maud Andrew

At the present rate of progress it would seem that in another week or so nothing will remain for Mr. Cyril Maude to do unless he should desire to appear in the disembodied state of the late Peter Grimm.

Certainly the transition from sunshiny middle life to vigorous old age was made most happily last night, when as Grumpy in an interesting melodrama of the same name name, he discovered the fact recently lost sight of in most of our plays that the older generation may be of some use in the world besides being the target for the wit and the ridicule of the youngsters. This, by the way, seems quite out of fashion on the modern stage.

But the play itself belongs to that school which is always sure of a welcome if the authors have sufficient ingenuity and skill. Happily in this case, the Messrs. Hodges and Wignal, while not necessarily producing a classic, have turned out a piece in which the suspense is capitally maintained, and the surprises follow one another often enough to keep the average audience highly entertained.

To say that "Grumpy" would seem as good without Mr. Maude as its delightful central figure would be to praise it excessively. But at that the piece is constructed with considerable melodramatic skill.

With Mr. Maude to play Grumpy, the same being a dear, delightful, irascible old gentleman, who, though an octogenarian, isn't in the least sense senile, one gets the double enjoyment of exciting play and exceptional characterization. And to the thrills, of which there are enough to serve, there is added a succession of hearty laughs.

The story has to do with a deep-laid plan to secure a valuable diamond brought from South Africa to England by Grumpy's nephew, who doesn't mind flirting a bit with a serving maid, though he is in love with Grumpy's granddaughter. And the latter on her part, innocently enough, manages to be the means to no end of trouble through an unfortunate attachment to a skillful rascal, who has arranged to steal the diamond and isn't averse to taking the granddaughter along with the other spoils. How a slender hair taken from the serving maid's head and about a camelia is the ultimate means to the discovery of the "crook" need not be told in detail. Enough to say that the first act ends with one of those struggles in the dark which leaves the spectator in some doubt as to who has been worsted in the fight until the curtain rises to discover Grumpy on the hunt for clews to the identity of his nephew's assailant. It is not until the third act, however, that suspicion as to who is the real thief becomes conviction in the mind of the spectator. And this is testimony to the ingenuity of the playwrights in the construction and working out of their plot.

Mr. Maude's personal performance is most satisfying both on its pictorial side and in the many details of choice and charm with which he alternately surrounds the figure. "Grumpy," or, to be exact, Mr. Andrew Bullivant, has been a noted criminal lawyer, and even in his retirement and old age one senses his shrewdness. In moments of stress he hums "Won't you walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly," and though the fly in this case doesn't literally follow the suggestion, the result is inevitable once "Grumpy" gets his bearings.

A real story-book play of the kind that must therefore command love, it will be surprising if Wallack's is not packed as long as Mr. Maude elects to act "Grumpy." Last night's audience was most enthusiastic.

The company appears to good advantage, Miss Maude providing a dainty and appealing figure as "Grumpy's" adoring grandchild. Mr. Lennox Pawle is doing a bit colorfully, and Mr. Montagu Love and Mr. Edward Combermere handling juvenile roles excellently. The others, too, are entirely competent for the matter in hand.

MME. JAKESCH ARRIVES.

Wife of Physician to Austrian Emperor Here with Debutante Daughter

Mme. Jakesch, wife of Dr. Wilhelm Jakesch, private physician to the Austrian Emperor Frances Joseph, arrived yesterday on the George Washington and is the guest of her niece, Mrs. William Duff Shivers, at 244 Riverside Drive. Mme. Jakesch brought her daughter, Miss Hildegarde Jakesch, a débutante, with her, and they are going West to spend some time before returning to Austria.

Mme. Jakesch is an American, who, with her sister, went several years ago to live in Vienna. The sister married Josef von Schildenfel, a Field Marshal of the Austrian Army.

Dr. Jakesch is better known outside of Austria by his pen name of Dr. Otto Horning, under which name he has written much on Socialism.

MISS KENDALL A DEBUTANTE.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Beals Kendall Introduced at a Tea.

Miss Elinor Kendall, third and youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Beals Kendall, made her début yesterday afternoon at a tea given for her by her elder sister, Mrs. Archibald M. Denny of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Kendall being in mourning. The tea was given at 41 West Eleventh Street, the house recently leased by Mr. and Mrs. Kendall.

Mrs. Denny, in white lace and satin with touches of silver and brown fur, and Miss Kendall, in white charmeuse veiled with spangled lace and tulle, received together. Those who assisted in looking after the guests were the Misses Dorothy Chisolm, Margaret Dixon, Helen Griffin, Marion Hall, Frances Judson, Dorothy Taylor, Katie Schermerhorn, and Rhoda Tanner.

JAMES H. HYDE WEDS TO-DAY

Will Marry Comtesse Louis de Gontaut-Biron In Paris.

The marriage of James Hazen Hyde, formerly of this city, and the Comtesse Louis de Gontaut-Biron, eldest daughter of John G. A. Leishman, former American Ambassador to Germany, and Mrs. Leishman, is to be celebrated to-day in Paris. Ambassador Herrick and Henry Clews, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews of this city, will act as Mr. Hyde's groomsmen.

Mr. Leishman, the father of the bride, arrived here last Saturday on the France, having been called to this side by business. His youngest daughter, Miss Nancy Leishman, was married to the Duke of Croy at Geneva, Switzerland, on Oct. 28.

The Comtesse's engagement to Mr. Hyde was announced early in November. Her former husband died in Paris in 1907. Mr. Hyde was a familiar figure in social and business circles of New York until 1905, when he went to Paris to reside. He is the son of the late Henry Baldwin Hyde, founder of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, of which he was at one time Vice President.

MRS. LAWRENCE WEDS HERE

Wealthy Chicago Widow Marries Dr. Wm. L. Baum of Chicago.

Mrs. Dwight Lawrence of Chicago, widow of a young millionaire of that city who died there early in 1912, was married yesterday in the Chapel of St. Thomas's Church by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, to Dr. William Ludwig Baum, a well-known physician who has a residence on the Lake Shore Drive in Chicago.

Mrs. Lawrence's wedding will come as a surprise to her many friends in Chicago, few of whom had been admitted to her confidence in the matter.

Her bridegroom, another Mrs. Frederick H. Winston, who arrived in New York a few days ago from Europe, and her brother, Garrard B. Winston, and a few other relatives and intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom, witnessed the ceremony. The Rev. Dr. Stires is an old friend of the Winston family. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the St. Regis.

MISS LAWRENCE TO WED.

Bishop's Daughter Engaged to Lewis H. Mills, Harvard Athlete.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—As a sequel to Harvard's football victory over Yale on Saturday came the announcement of the engagement to-day of Elinore, daughter of Bishop William Lawrence of the Massachusetts Diocese to Lewis Hunt Mills, a prominent football player and oarsman.

Mr. Mills, whose home is in Portland, Ore., was a substitute tackle in the game with Yale. He rowed in the 'Varsity eight at New London in 1912 and 1913.

To-day's Weddings.

The wedding of Miss Gladys Roosevelt, a daughter of John Ellis Roosevelt, and Fairman Dick, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Evans R. Dick, will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in St. Bartholomew's Church. A small reception will follow at 818 Madison Avenue.

Miss Edith Logan, younger daughter of Mrs. John A. Logan, Jr., and Jewetes D. Dilworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dilworth, will be married at 4 o'clock in St. Thomas's Church. The reception will be held at Mrs. Logan's residence, 17 West Fifty-sixth Street.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Hinton, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Post Hinton, and Delavan M. Baldwin, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Delavan Baldwin, is to take place in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, at 4 o'clock. A small reception for relatives and intimate friends will be held at the home of the bride's parents, 45 West Fifty-fifth Street.

Miss Margharita Hungerford, daughter of Mrs. William A. Hungerford, and Birney Blackwell, son of Mrs. Frank E. Blackwell, will be married at the home of the bride, 125 West Sixty-ninth Street. A small reception will follow.

The marriage of Miss Effie C. Zabriskie, daughter of Mrs. Cornelius I. Zabriskie, and Raymond Williams Stephenson of New York, are to be married in the Second Reformed Church in Hackensack, N. J., this afternoon. The reception will be held at Mrs. Zabriskie's Hackensack home.

Miss Lees to Wed Archer McCall.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Lees of Shelton, Conn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Lees, to Archer McCall, a member of the firm of McCall & Clarke Company of 2 West Forty-fifth Street, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. McCall of 267 East Sixty-second Street. The wedding will probably take place early next Autumn.

White-Martin Engagement.

Miss Amy White of Boston announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Sarah Barriett White, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Howard White, to Varick Dey Martin of this city. Mr. Martin is a son of Mrs. John Laurie Martin of 115 East Thirty-first Street. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Katharine Neilson Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Bayard Neilson of Perth Amboy, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katharine B. Neilson, to John Halsey Bonsall of Morristown, N. J. No date has been set for the wedding.

HOUGHTON—MESSITER.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buckley Houghton of Bronxville, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Houghton, to Harold Monroe Messiter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Messiter of Bronxville.

BERLINGER—COHEN.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berlinger of this city have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gladys R. Berlinger, to Emanuel B. Cohen. A reception is to be held at the Berlinger home, 224 West 138th Street, on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 30.

Sigma Phi Dance Postponed.

Owing to the death of Robert Merrill, President of the Sigma Phi Fraternity, its annual dance, which was to have taken place at the Hotel Gotham on Dec. 15, has been postponed.

Reception to Forbes-Robertson.

A reception was given yesterday afternoon to Sir Johnston and Lady Forbes-Robertson at the British Imperial Club, 108 East Thirtieth Street, by Miss Adeline Bourne, a member of the club. Cyril Maude, Miss Margery Maude, and many prominent British visitors in town were present. A dance followed the reception.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY.

Unless you order at once the Christmas Number of The New York Times, to be issued on Sunday, Dec. 7, you will be unable to get the rotogravure section containing pictures of typical American girls selected in The Times contest.—Adv.

'GIRLS OF TO-DAY' WEAR FEW JEWELS

Times Photographs of Twenty-nine Show Six with Necklaces and Three with Earrings.

BRUNETTES HAVE MAJORITY

Though There Are a Number of Pronounced Blondes — Head and Shoulders Favorite Form of Pose.

In a study of an advance copy of the special rotogravure section of the Christmas number of THE NEW YORK TIMES, which will be published on Sunday, Dec. 7, one discovers some interesting points about the typical American girl, as pictured therein. One thing is that, as a rule, she does not seem to be given to wearing a great deal of jewelry.

While six of the typical American girls out of the twenty-nine to be published in the Christmas number wear pearl necklaces, the majority wear no ornaments. It was remarked yesterday that most wear their hair low, but it can be discerned that three are wearing earrings.

Some of the experts on feminine beauty who were interviewed after THE TIMES had extended the invitation to its readers to assist in the search for The Girl of To-day by sending in photographs, said that she was a brunette. It is interesting to note that of the twenty-nine pictures in the special rotogravure section, dark-haired girls are in great predominance. However, this does not necessarily mean that the picture selected as The Girl of To-day shows a girl with dark hair, for there are several pronounced blondes.

It develops from the poses of the pictures that the American girl to-day generally prefers a photograph of her head and shoulders only, for twenty of the pictures are of that description. Only three show a full-length pose, standing. Five are of three-quarter length, sitting, and one shows a full-length pose, sitting.

Naturally, there is much speculation as to what The Girl of To-day is like.

"Of course, every man has his own ideas as to what The Girl of To-day actually looks like," said one of the artists who acted as judges. "I would venture to say that each of us has painted what he thought was The Girl of To-day. Seven artists may differ in that one point as much as seven lawyers, or seven men of different professions or trades.

"I should say that one reason that influenced the choice we made was that the picture selected best represents the elusiveness of the subject, for it is an elusive subject, when you come to consider it. For one thing, the picture shows The Girl to be of To-day. When you look at her your thought is 'How many I know like her!' Then she is unmistakably American, yet at the same time she is, in a way, suggestive of other nationalities, and other races. If you try to fathom her eyes, you find that mystery looks upon them, and as for her expression, it is neither gay nor sad. There is a quality in the picture that makes for mystery. After all, The Girl of To-day is as much of a question as have been her sisters in the past, for what man could lay his hand upon his heart and tell you solemnly that he really knows her, and not be subject to contradiction?"

The Girl of To-day section is one of three pictorial supplements that will be contained in the Christmas number of THE TIMES. Besides the usual pictorial section which follows closely the news of the day, there will be a supplement devoted to the reproduction, in the three original colors, of John S. Sargent's famous frieze in the Boston Public Library, "The Prophets." The reproduction will be in three parts, the whole being fifty-five inches long by ten inches wide, and will be suitable for framing.

AID FOR WIDOWED MOTHERS.

Dancing Contest for Prizes at Entertainment at Hotel Astor.

The first of the two entertainments arranged for the benefit of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association was held yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor. Besides the programme there was a dancing contest and general dancing. The first prizes of the dancing contest were won by Miss Dorothy Stein and William Bachrach for the one-step; by Miss Susan Posner and Alfred Kahn for the waltz, and Miss Stein and Mr. Bachrach also won the tango.

The second performance will take place on Monday afternoon, Dec. 8, when the principal feature will be the photo play of "Queen Elizabeth," by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. There will also be a short musical programme and dancing.

Mrs. William Einstein is President of the association. The other officers include Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. Henry Ollesheimer, Mrs. Jefferson Seligman, Mrs. Randolph Guggenheimer, Mrs. Samuel Koenig, Mrs. Isidor Lewis, Mrs. Henry Zuckerman, Mrs. Samuel Floersheimer, Mrs. Henry Bodenheimer, Mrs. Julian Nathan, and Mrs. Max L. Villard, and Mrs. James S. Whitman.

Crane in Revival of "The Henrietta"

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 24.—William H. Crane, Douglas Fairbanks, Amelia Bingham and Patricia Collinge appeared here to-night in Joseph Brooks's revival of "The Henrietta." Bronson Howard's famous old play, which has been brought up to date by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes. The play is now called "The New Henrietta." Mr. Crane appeared in his old part of Nicholas Van Alstyne, while Douglas Fairbanks was Bertie, the Lamb, the part originally acted by the late Stuart Robson. Others in the cast were Lyster Chambers, Eileen Errol, H. W. Brown, Malcolm Bradley, Arthur S. Hull, Edward Poland and Zeffie Tilbury. The play will be sent to New York in a few weeks.

MISS TEYTE'S RECITAL.

A Programme of Modern Songs by Composers of Various Nations.

A good deal of the bloom has in one way or another been rubbed off the delicate art of Miss Maggie Teyte since her first appearance in New York two seasons ago. She gave a recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon which was filled to the last seat with an enthusiastic audience; but her singing caused disquiet to some of her admirers through the change that has come over its character. Her voice never had great range of color and was generally pale; and when used with power was apt to take on a hard, even a acidulous quality. But there was an artistic delicacy and refinement of style, a fine taste, a clearness of diction, that atoned for much that did not please in the purely tonal and sensuous quality of her singing.

She forced her tone yesterday so that its essential beauty was often lost and the accuracy of her intonation was impaired. There was less delicacy and polish of style than has been among the admirable qualities of her art and the finish of her diction, the intelligibility of the texts of her songs, were less prominent than they have been. Miss Teyte in this recital appeared as the advocate and champion of the newest in vocal composition. Her programme numbered songs by modern French composers, Charpentier, Hué, Debussy, Chabrier, Roussel; the Americans Carpenter and Schindler; the Italian Zandonai, (who is responsible for the opera of "Conchita," given at the Metropolitan last season); the Russians Moussorgsky, (composer of "Boris Godounow"), Stravinsky and Bleichmann; the German Hugo Wolf, and Szymanowsky, presumably a Pole.

It would scarcely be possible, nor is it necessary, to consider these songs in detail, of which eight were confidently set down as performed for the first time in America. Perhaps they were; but there was much that was insignificant in them, much that owed its interest to trivial details of phrase or accompaniment or some trick of declamation or descriptive effect. There was not much that was the outcome of a deep and sincere musical feeling. Hugo Wolf's "Und willst du deinem Liebsten sterben sehn" towered high as a musical inspiration in this company. And it may be said that Miss Teyte sang it with more beauty of effect than she did most else on her programme—perhaps, among other reasons, because it offered more opportunity to the singer to express beauty.

The audience was enthusiastic and zealous in applause, and had very little difficulty in inducing Miss Teyte to repeat several of these songs. Mr. Kurt Schindler played her accompaniments with much skill and delicacy.

"TOSCA" AT CHICAGO OPERA.

Mary Garden and Vanni Marcoux Arouse Great Enthusiasm.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 24.—Puccini's "La Tosca," with Mary Garden in the name part, inaugurated Chicago's fourth season of opera at the Auditorium this evening.

Tickets have been at a premium for a fortnight, and the house from the social point of view was a brilliant assembly. Enthusiasm for the performance and for the singers reached the high mark of applause set last year, even though there was no feature as spectacular as Titta Ruffo's début of last season.

Cleofonte Campanini, the new general artistic director, successor of Andreas Dippel, chose his strongest card in the selection of "Tosca" with Mary Garden, Amadeo Bassi, the tenor, who has been absent one season, and Vanni Marcoux, the baritone.

After the curtains, there were the usual "calls" in which the cast, Mr. Campanini and one or two other functionaries bowed repeatedly to the cheering audience. Every principal of the performance might have made a speech had he been so minded.

Mr. Campanini opened the season with the Puccini melodrama as Miss Garden and Vanni Marcoux understand and interpret its passionate situations. Miss Garden was the popular idol of three seasons in all her glory. Rarely has she surpassed her peculiar vocal effectiveness or her expertness of acting.

Mr. Marcoux made an instant success. His impersonations overshadowed his important colleague, Amadeo Bassi is a known quantity to this public. His dependable work of the first two seasons made him a host of friends and even among the most exacting created an admiration for experienced, sure, vital interpretation agreeably lacking in trickery.

Bulletin No. 3

Reducing the Human Scrap Heap

Charities "Firing Line"

¶ Pauperism and preventable poverty are as much a community disgrace as an epidemic of typhoid fever.

¶ It requires more than individual effort to stamp out preventable disease in a city.

¶ No single social worker can wipe out destitution in a community after it gets a foothold.

¶ Organized effort is necessary in both instances.

¶ That is why the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor employs a staff of forty visitors, seventeen visiting nurses and teachers of cooking, homemaking and sewing.

¶ They make up the Association's "firing line."

¶ Every day these men and women go into the homes of the poor, where they fight a hand-to-hand battle with poverty.

¶ They are ministering agents—the friends and the advisers of those dragged into misery, usually by misfortune, sometimes by improvidence.

¶ The Health Department represents the organized preventive force of physicians and sanitarians practicing in the community.

¶ Upon its efficiency the health of the community is largely dependent.

¶ Systematic charity is combined individual social and economic effort.

¶ Its effectiveness and activity have an important bearing upon the community's well-being.

¶ A social service agency, like the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, is therefore a community asset.

¶ The city's social welfare depends upon the service of the social worker, who cares for families socially abnormal, as the health of the whole community depends upon the skill of the physician in the treatment of patients physically abnormal.

¶ Misfortune and disease keep both busy.

¶ An inexperienced visitor may do just as much harm to the social well-being of his patient as an incompetent doctor or nurse may do to the physical well-being of the sufferers in his or her care.

¶ This Association wants to extend and strengthen its "firing line."

¶ Will you help?

E. M. HOLLAND DIES AFTER CALLING AID

Veteran Character Actor Found Unconscious Under Telephone in Room in Cleveland Hotel.

OF NOTED STAGE FAMILY

Prominent in Companies of Wallack and Palmer, and Once a Star—Funeral in "Little Church."

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 24.—E. M. Holland, the actor, a member of the "Years of Discretion" company, which arrived here yesterday, died suddenly of heart disease in a room at his hotel early this morning.

At 3 o'clock this morning the telephone switchboard operator heard a call which said: "Send up a boy quick to Holland's room." A bellboy was sent to the room and found the actor lying on the floor under the telephone unconscious. Physicians were hurriedly summoned and vainly worked over Mr. Holland several hours. It was apparent that he had gone from his bed to the telephone to summon help and then collapsed.

E. M. Holland was born in New York Sept. 7, 1848. When he was old enough to go to school he began his education in the public schools of New York, but at 15 he became call boy at Mrs. John Wood's Olympic Theatre, and also played a child's part in the play "A Day After the Fair." He remained with Mrs. Wood at a salary of $6 a week until he was 18, and then he went to Barnum's Museum. Later he joined Joseph Jefferson and appeared in the first New York production of "Rip Van Winkle," playing under the stage name of E. Milton.

Soon after the civil war Mr. Holland joined Lester Wallack's company and remained with that organization for thirteen years, getting a chance to play many parts and scoring his first personal success as Silky in "The Road to Ruin." In 1880 Mr. Holland was with A. M. Palmer's company playing Riffiandini in "French Flats." A year later he went to London with Mr. and Mrs. McKee Rankin, playing the Judge in "The Danites."

On Sept. 2, 1895, Mr. Holland made his first appearance as a star with his brother, Joseph Holland, in "A Man with a Past," at Garrick Theatre. The next two years the brothers starred in "A Social Highwayman," and later E. M. Holland appeared as Eben Holden in the play of the same name under the direction of Charles Frohman. In 1902-3 he played Pope Pius X. in "The Eternal City," and 1903 Telford in "Raffles" with Kyrle Bellew from 1903 to 1906. Late in the latter year he was seen in Two years ago, while appearing with Hackett in Chicago, Mr. Holland fell in the street and broke his arm, and it was feared that on account of his age he would not recover from the shock, but within a few weeks he was back at his post with the Hackett company.

The funeral services for Mr. Holland will be held in the Church of the Transfiguration, which got its better-known name of the Little Church Around the Corner at the time of the death of Mr. Holland's father, George Holland, in 1870. Joseph Jefferson went to the pastor of a church at Madison Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street to see if he could make arrangements for the reading of the burial service over the body of his friend, but Holland, The Player, replied that he could not read the service for an actor, "but," he added, "there is a little church around the corner where they may do it."

"God bless the little church around the corner," said Jefferson, and from that day the church became the place of worship of the actors of this country, and almost every prominent actor and actress who has died since then has been buried from there. Dr. George Clarke Houghton, the rector, who will read the funeral services over the body of E. M. Holland, is a nephew of Dr. George H. Houghton, the first minister of the church, who was the minister when Jefferson was sent to "the little church around the corner."

Mr. Holland was married, his wife being Emily Seward, an actress, who retired many years ago. There are two children, Miss Edna Milton Holland, a girl of twenty, who is an actress, and a son, Joseph Holland, who is not on the stage.

E. M. Holland's older brother, George, died several years ago. His other brother, Joseph Holland, suffered from a stroke of paralysis, which left him a cripple, about six years ago, and he is now living in an actors' home, where he paid for his comfort for the rest of his life with $10,000, which was raised at a benefit given for him in New York.

E. M. Holland was a member of the Lambs and the Players, and a committee from both clubs will meet to-day to arrange with the family about the funeral services.

LOUIS SCHMIDT FOUND DEAD

Proprietor of Kaiser Keller Stricken In Street, but Reaches His Home.

Louis Schmidt, a well-known restaurateur, died suddenly on Sunday. He was returning to his home, 51 Bay Twenty-second Street, Bath Beach, early in the morning when he was stricken. Mr. Schmidt managed to reach his porch and sat down in a rocking chair. A policeman passing the house about 6 o'clock found him dead.

Mr. Schmidt was 58 years old and a native of Germany. He came to this country when 18 years old and settled in New York. He had been in business for himself since 1888, when he opened a restaurant at 51 Beaver Street. Ten years later he moved to 84 Broadway. He became the proprietor of the Eastern Hotel at South Ferry, and had charge of that hostelry until 1903. Mr. Schmidt was for five years the proprietor of the Trainor Hotel. Seven years ago he established the Kaiser Keller in Forty-second Street, just east of Times Square.

Mr. Schmidt was a member of the Arion Society, the Elks, and Hempstead Yacht Club. He left a widow, who was formerly Miss Susan Schnell, and two sons.

Henry McAleenan.

Henry McAleenan, one of the pioneers in the pawnbroking business in this city, died in St. Vincent's Hospital late last night following an operation. Mr. McAleenan's home was at 2,345 Broadway. He was taken to the hospital two weeks ago. Mr. McAleenan was born in Ireland eighty-four years ago. When he came to this country he was a poor boy. He started his first pawnshop and loan office in 1845, and since then had amassed a large fortune. About a year ago Mr. McAleenan turned over his business, consisting of three large pawnshops, to his three sons, Henry A., Joseph A., and Arthur. Mr. McAleenan was the godfather of Hugh J. Grant, ex-Mayor of New York.

John O'Connell.

John O'Connell, a lawyer with offices at 291 Broadway, and who lived at 241 East 198th Street, the Bronx, died yesterday morning in St. Vincent's Hospital. He was graduated from Columbia College, and was admitted to the bar in 1882. He was a candidate for City Court Judge on the Republican ticket, running against the late James M. Fitzsimons, who was elected. Mr. O'Connell was associated in practice with his brother, Nicholas J. O'Connell. His practice was in the civil courts, with special attention to corporation and real estate law.

John E. Schmidt Dies Suddenly.

John E. Schmidt, 57 years old, the Vice President of the Henry Romeike Press Clipping Bureau, fell dead of apoplexy in the hall near the door of his office on the twelfth floor of 108 Seventh Avenue at 6 o'clock last evening. Mr. Schmidt had been associated with the Romeike Bureau for twenty-five years.

Yakuside.....Francesco Cerri
Il Commissario Imperiale.....Giulio Romolo
Conductor—Arturo Toscanini.

The second week of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House was begun with Puccini's opera, "Madama Butterfly," which has taken its place as one of the most popular of the composer's works in New York, at least in the performance that is given of it at the Metropolitan Opera House. Miss Geraldine Farrar, whose illness prevented her from appearing at the opening performance of the season, as had been planned, was restored to health and voice sufficiently to sing the part of Cio-Cio-San, which she has made her own here, and in which she has produced some of her most charming effects.

Miss Farrar appeared to be in excellent voice, and there were not many traces of her illness to disturb the enjoyment of her singing. What there were she endeavored to minimize by unusual care in her delivery of the music. She acts the part with much sinuous grace and seductiveness—perhaps with a grace that has become a little too sinuous for the ingenuous and youthful maiden she is representing. Instead of Riccardo Martin, who has so frequently been the representative of Lieut. Pinkerton in recent seasons, the new tenor, Giovanni Martinelli, sang that part. His singing was better than it was on his first appearance last week. He sang with less nervousness, with more freedom of utterance, with less forcing of his voice, and hence with more beauty of tone. In fact, his real voice may be said to have been made known for the first time in this performance; the impression was considerably better than in "La Bohème." Mr. Martinelli represented the character with a skill that was acceptable.

The rest of the characters were in the hands of the artists to whom they have been intrusted in recent years. Mr. Scotti as Sharpless—a sincere and dignified impersonation; Mme. Rita Fornia as Suzuki, Angelo Bada as Goro. And in and through all was the puissant influence of Mr. Toscanini, to whom the performance owes so much in the finish and delicacy with which Puccini's orchestration is made effective, and the warmth and expression of the dramatic movement are

DISTINGUISHED MEN TO SEE FOOTBALL

There will be a distinguished gathering on the Army's side at the Polo Grounds at the big game Saturday when West Point plays the Navy in the annual football struggle. President Woodrow Wilson has a box on the Army side, and it is understood that a reservation of twenty-seven box seats has been made for the Presidential party, which will probably include Francis Sayre and the White House bride, Miss Jessie Wilson. Reservations on the Army side have also been made for Gen. Leonard Wood, Gen. Thomas H. Barry, Col. C. P. Townsley, Superintendent of the United States Military Academy, Vice President Thomas Marshall, Secretary of War Garrison, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, Attorney General McReynolds, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, and the other Cabinet officers.

Gov. Glynn of New York will have a box on the Army side, and also Senator Elihu Root, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator James O'Gorman, Mayor Kline of New York City, Edwin Gould, and Mrs. John T. Brush, widow of the former owner of the Giants.

Another boxholder on the Army side will be Gen. Gibson, who is one of the oldest living graduates of the Military Academy, having graduated from West Point in the Class of 1847. Thomas J. Lynch, President of the National League, also has a box on the Army side and is rooting for the soldiers to win. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Senator Brandagee of Connecticut, Senator Ollie James of Kentucky, Champ Clarke, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Hon. Horace Porter, and Hon. Henry L. Stimson will also be on the Army side.

There is much speculation about the outcome of the game. Having defeated the Army for the last three years in succession, the Midshipmen will probably go into the game a favorite. They have not been defeated this season, while the Army was decisively outcrossed by Notre Dame.

There is also much speculation among the late enthusiasts about tickets for the game. The allotment of the New York Club has been exhausted, and there will be no public sale of tickets. There has been a great disappointment to many applicants because their requests were rejected. This was because both the Army and Navy people have used their options for extra seats.

The game promises to be one of the greatest gridiron spectacles ever seen in this country, and every one of the 41,000 seats has been taken. The ticket, as usual, that is, some of them, have fallen into the hands of the ticket agencies, and yesterday football enthusiasts who have been disappointed on their application for tickets are willing to pay as high as $30 a pair for seats at the two ends of the stands.

ARMY'S STARS ON FIELD.

Great Joy Over Return of Huston, Benedict, and Hodgson to Team.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Signal drill made up to-day's programme in the Army's football camp, Coach Charley Daly holding off scrimmage for the regulars until to-morrow, when the scrubs, with a batch of Navy plays, will oppose the first string men in a real clash. The Army team will get considerable rough work this week in an endeavor to groom the defense to a higher standard of effectiveness.

Joy swept the camp to-night when the big headliners, Huston, Benedict, and Hodgson, returned to the squad. Huston and Benedict got in the signal drill to-day and Hodgson was given a long punting drill with Daly watching him carefully. The return of the trio to light work with the squad is a source of congratulation for Army adherents and indicates that, barring injuries to the men, the team will go into action against the Middies Saturday with much stronger chances.

Meacham, who was hurt in Saturday's game, was not out to-day, but the coaches expect to have him in condition within a day or so.

The signal drill ran smoothly for a while, but when the men began work with the new code of signals they were the targets for much criticism from the coaches for the manner in which they "fumbled" things. Some of the new "thrillers" designed for the Navy encounter went to smash to-day through misconception of the signals.

A special feature of the week's preparation will be the drill of the second string men for Coach Daly is anxious to have a strong bunch of substitutes ready for Saturday's battle

NAVY BACK FIELD HEAVY.

Coaches Plan to Batter Down Army's Line—New Signals.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 24.—The final days of preparation for the Army game began this afternoon with a short signal drill and considerable work in kicking, passing and handling the ball. The cool weather has tended to help the Midshipmen out of a partial slowness which has marked their work for a few days.

The coaches have given the Midshipmen a new set of signals, and these were used to-day for the first time. Herman Olcott, the old Yale lineman, who has assisted in the coaching here for several seasons, will spend the week in putting finishing touches on the forwards. Lieut. H. C. Mustin, formerly a great Navy player, is also here. The high wind which prevailed made the practice in handling the ball and kicks of special value to the Navy backs.

It was announced to-day that, barring accident, Nicholls will start the game at quarter back instead of Mitchell. While Failing will be at right half back in-stead of Leonard, Harrison at full back and McReavey at left half back making up the rest of the back field. This means that the Navy coaches have selected as strong and heavy a back field as possible, and expect to batter the Army line from the very start. The men named are all fast for their weight, and the back field has in Nicholls one of the most brilliant runners that has ever played for the Navy.

The brigade of Midshipmen after song practice this afternoon marched through the reservation, stopping at the residences of Supt. Gibbons and other officers, to request responses. The officers spoke encouragingly of the outlook, but warned against overconfidence.

CORNELL GOES TO SEASHORE

Football Team to Rest at Atlantic City Until Thursday.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The Cornell football team left to-night for Atlantic City en route to Philadelphia to play Pennsylvania on Thursday amid one of the most enthusiastic send-offs ever given to a Cornell team.

Four thousand students gathered at an open-air mass meeting on the library steps early this evening and for an hour listened to stirring addresses and sang and cheered. Then they formed a parade and escorted the football team to the station. The cadet band led the parade, followed by the team in automobiles. Red fire and torchlights were freely used, and on the whole the demonstration was a great spectacle. At the station the students cheered every member of the squad. Head Coach Sharpe and Capt. Munns made short addresses, pledging that the team would do its very best. At least two thousand students will follow the team to Philadelphia to-morrow and Wednesday night.

Coach Sharpe said that the men would engage in only light practice at Atlantic City, as the object of this trip was to give the team rest and relaxation. Asked to make a prediction as to the outcome he refused, but he did say that he hoped Cornell would break better than even in the coming game.

A much stronger Cornell team than has appeared on the gridiron so far this Fall left Ithaca to-night. It averages over 180 pounds and is the heaviest combination that the Ithacans have sent against Pennsylvania in many years. The back field, composed of Barrett, Philippi, Collyer, and Lahr, is one of the heaviest ever developed at Ithaca, and the line weighs more than an average of 180 pounds. Coach Sharpe said that the team would line up on Franklin Field as follows:

Minds May Play for Penn.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—There was joy in the University of Pennsylvania football camp to-day when it was learned that Chester Minds, the Red and Blue full back, probably will be able to play in the game against Cornell here on Thanksgiving Day. Minds, who has been on the side lines for two weeks with an injured shoulder, donned a suit to-day and took part in the practice of the team at the Whitemarsh Country Club. His shoulder is still weak, but it is believed he will be in shape for the final contest of the Pennsylvania schedule.

Signal drill featured the workout to-day. Bell-fill was at quarter back again, while Marshall and Capt. Young were used as half backs. Avery pleased the coaches with his punting, some of his kicks being good for sixty-five yards, while they seldom fell short of fifty.

Fordham's Last Week on Gridiron.

Fordham started the final week of football practice yesterday with a drill in the fundamentals, followed by an hour's hard scrimmage. The High School of Commerce and the Fordham Prep. elevens were selected by Head Coach Tom Thorpe to give the 'Varsity a thorough test before the Mount St. Mary's game at Fordham on Thanksgiving Day. The success of the Southern collegians on the gridiron this season insures a good showing by them in their first appearance in New York. Fordham Field is being arranged to accommodate a large crowd, as the Fordham-Mount St. Mary's game will be the only intercollegiate contest in this city on Thanksgiving Day.

The 'Varsity is now playing up to its full strength, Vic Carey, the clever right end, being the only regular out of the game, but Conklin, who was alternated with Carey at end throughout the season, fills Carey's place very well, and is fast developing into a great player on the squad. George Walsh of the 1909 eleven has been showing "Bud" Wynard the fine points in the kicking game. Wynard gave indications of benefiting from Walsh's teaching by drop kicking two field goals and one goal from placement. Quarter Ray O'Connell holding the ball, against the schoolboys yesterday.

Notre Dame Team in Texas.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 24.—The Notre Dame college football team arrived here late to-day for their game in Austin Thursday with Texas University. The entire squad is reported in fine shape. A banquet was given in the players' honor to-night.

Class C Billiards Start.

The national amateur Class C billiard tournament opened yesterday afternoon at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, with a game between L. F. Moon and Dr. T. W. Tuggle, both of New York. Moon won in 50 innings, with a score of 200 to 173. The winner made high runs of 27 and 14, while Tuggle's best were 16, 15, and 15.

In the evening C. H. Terry of Palisade Park, N. J., the national Class C champion, defeated Jas. J. Doyle of New York in 49 innings by the score of 200 to 134. Terry's best runs were 27, 16, and 13, and Doyle's high figures were 16, 14, and 13. The fourteen contestants for championship honors are divided into three divisions, a round robin series being played in each. The winners will come together in another round robin series to determine the championship.

COPLAND TO TRAIN AUSTRIAN ATHLETES

Former Notable Runner to Prepare Team for Berlin Olympic Games.

VIENNA, Nov. 24.—The Austrian Olympic Games Committee has engaged "Al" Copland as trainer in track and field events for the next Olympic games in Berlin in 1916.

The foregoing cable is in response to a cable sent from New York last Saturday by Dr. Herschman, the Austrian athletic envoy, who is in the United States endeavoring to become acquainted with American training methods and the reason for American success in world's championship and other sports. It is stated that he had been advised while abroad of the qualifications of Mr. Copland, who has just been appointed, and that he engaged him before going to Boston yesterday.

Mr. Copland is a former American and Canadian champion at sprinting, hurdling and broad jumping, which titles were held over a number of years. In 1890 he held the world's running broad jump record with a leap of 23 feet 3⅞ inches, which stood for some time. It is stated that his forte was all-round work, and his competitive efforts proved him in the top-notch division at that, and field work in every game except the weights.

Mr. Copland's earliest athletic experience was gained while a member of one of the leading clubs of the time, the American Athletic Club, which had its headquarters on the old Polo Grounds, at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue. His first year in competition netted him the all-round handicap championship of that club, which during the latter part of the year he won nine of the ten events contested, which embraced runs from a quarter mile to three miles, walking and jumping events.

In 1887, 1888, 1889, Mr. Copland won the sprinting championships of Canada, and in the American status of events was the victor at various times from 1887 to 1891, inclusive, at hurdling and broad-jumping. In 1899 he trained the Yale track team, and is the only trainer of any of the colleges in the United States to send three winning teams to the Pennsylvania relay meet in a day.

From 1906 to 1909, inclusive, Mr. Copland was coach of the Princeton track with which his work was uniformly successful. During his stay at Princeton he also trained the New York A. C. teams since which time he scored notable successes with Cornell, St. Yves, the French Marathon champion, and Hans Holmer, who is now abroad beating all comers over distances from one mile to the Marathon distance.

Mr. Copland will enter upon his duties the latter part of March, at which time Spring begins in Austria.

Lehigh Celebrates Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 24.—The Lehigh football victory over Lafayette was celebrated by a big torchlight parade to-night, followed by a bonfire on the highest point of old South Mountain which could be seen at Easton, twelve miles away. After this demonstration the 650 students attended a banquet in the college hall.

Another Indian for Athletics.

BRAINERD, Minn., Nov. 24.—Joe Graves, a Chippewa Indian of Walker, Minn., has signed as a pitcher for the Philadelphia American baseball team for the season of 1914. It was announced here to-day. Graves during the last two or three seasons has pitched for Walker and Brainerd, and has been regarded as a local wonder.

BARGAINS IN OLD GLORY HORSE SALE

Prices for Trotters, Pacers, and Saddlers Range from $25 to $1,425 at the Garden.

Bargain hunters in light harness horses met with unusual success at the Old Glory sale yesterday at Madison Square Garden. The prices ranged from $25 to $1,425, but nearly thirty horses were disposed of for less than $100, which establishes a record for low prices at the Old Glory sale. Spotless Chimes, a ten-year-old brood mare, was knocked down for the minimum figure, and many trotters and pacers with good records went for a song. The champion Speedway pacer, Clover Patch, (2:09¼,) was sold to W. A. Ainsley of Port Washington, L. I., for $550. Many of the out-of-town buyers will not reach the city until to-day, when the important consignments will be put under the hammer.

What would otherwise have been a dull afternoon was enlivened by the sale of three prize-winning saddle horses, the property of Miss Houpton D. Atterbury. The trio, which are credited with a number of champ onships, were disposed of for $3,150. The best price was paid by James Houchin of Jefferson City, Mo., for Nickel Plate, a gray gelding, eight years old, standing 15.3 hands. Nickel Plate was a notable winner at the Summer shows, and was knocked down for $1,425, which is a big price, even for so good a horse. Kildare, a brown gelding, found a new owner in W. T. Hyde of New York City, who paid $550 for the second of the Atterbury consignment, while Mr. Houchin also purchased Patricia, a six-year-old chestnut mare, for $875, as a stable companion for Nickel Plate. The other two saddle horses did not bring about lively bidding. Little Miss from J. Cooley was sold for $300 to Charles Hicks of Oyster Bay, and Golden went to G. R. Cook of Trenton for $220.

Many men prominent in the trotting world were seen in the Garden. Among those noticed were W. E. D. Stokes, A. B. Gwathmey, Charles J. Pettingill, Henry K. Devereaux, Cleveland; John Charles Tanner, Cleveland; E. W. Swisher and H. D. Shepherd, Columbus; Andrew J. Welsh, Hartford, Conn.; James A. Murphy, Edward J. La Place, Joseph F. Gibbons, Dr. J. H. Fersher, and George D. Connor, Detroit; N. S. Noaly, Buffalo; Frederick Vanderbilt, Dr. Nott, David Bonner, Horatio N. Bain, J. H. Ford, John H. Townsend, Dr. J. C. McCoy, S. A. Pickering, and H. P. Hose, Pittsburgh; Roy Miller, Patrick Ryan, and John Splan, Chicago; W. McGibbon, Montreal, Canada, and the following delegation from Kentucky: John Miller, D. Wilson, Jerry Tarleton, Hunter Moody, Jesse Shuff, John Engleman, George Starr, H. Stinson, Raymond Macey, John T. Madden, Robert Nash, Rhodes Estel, James Snell, and Harry Burgoine.

Word was received at the Garden yesterday of the death of Washington McKinney, which was expected to be one of the stars of the sale. Washington McKinney was a seven-year-old black stallion consigned by the King Hill Stock Farm of St. Joseph, Mo. A peculiar feature of this consignment is the fact that the owner of the farm, John Donovan, dropped dead last Friday. The best prices of the sale follow:

Columbia Grammar Team Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Columbia Grammar School basket ball team of New York defeated the Leal School quintet in a well-played game on the Young Men's Christian Association court here this afternoon by the score of 29 to 16.

Princeton Sophs Win Cane Spree.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Sophomores defeated their Freshman rivals in the annual cane spree this evening by taking two of the three bouts.

McLEAN HORSES SOLD.

Celebrated Stallion Nala Presented to Remount Service.

One of the notable affairs in connection with the dispersal sale of the stable of Edward B. McLean of Briar Cliff Farm, Bar Harbor, Me., at Durland's last night was the announcement that Nala, a trotting bred bay stallion, which had been expected to bring well up into the thousands, had been presented to the United States Government, in an endeavor to aid in the remount situation.

Immediately upon this statement by Frank M. Ware, the man on the block, the big throng broke into cheers as if to give thanks to the owner of the horse, which was slated as the champion of his class in 1912, during which period he was shown eighteen times, which resulted in his capture of a like number of blues and five championships.

It is anticipated that Nala will prove a valuable addition to the scant lot of thoroughbreds which have been deeded to the Government in an effort to help the officers of the army in the matter of remounts.

Another feature of the sale was the withdrawal of what are generally regarded as the most sensational hackneys in the world, Lady Dilham and Elegant Dilham. These small horses, which stand 14½ hands, have been shown single and as a pair, and at all of the large shows last year won over forty blue ribbons and championships. When the bidding slowed down at $7,000 as the last figure which Mr. Ware could get, the announcement was made that there was a reserve price on the pair which did not warrant his letting them go at the figure bid.

Dilham O. K., a black pony mare of 13 hands, was the first horse put under the hammer, and the desire for possession of this little beauty soon became evident, as spirited bidding followed. The ultimate purchaser was J. H. Collins of Boston, who got her for $900. The next carded over which there was some real contention was Missbutty Bellef, a registered hackney mare, which has a fine record of wins and championships. George A. Cluett of Troy finally secured her for $750.

Pride o' Prides, said to be one of the finest harness horses in America, and Oakwood, the pair being beautifully matched hackneys, warranted the bidding getting well up into four figures, with John R. Thompson of Chicago the fortunate one at $2,700. William Zeigler, Jr., got into the bidding bee with the sending into the ring of Ringing Bells, a chestnut mare, which he obtained for $1,000. The summary:

Dilham O. K., blk. m., 15; J. H. Collins, Boston	900

FOREIGN MOTOR BOATS FAST

Count Mankowski Talks of International Race in England.

Count Casimir S. Mankowski, the owner of Ankle Deep, the American motor boat which made an effort last September to win the British International Motor Boat Trophy, known also as the Harmsworth Cup, arrived from Europe yesterday on the steamship George Washington of the North German Lloyd Line. The Lake George yachtsman was accompanied by his wife, and both expressed themselves as delighted with their trip abroad.

"It will take a $60,000 craft forty feet long and with the most powerful engines to bring that cup back to America," said Count Mankowski. "I am going to work all Winter on Ankle Deep, and experiment on a new propeller of my own invention in an endeavor to have my boat in readiness for the races next year.

"If necessary, after I install the new propeller, and I find that Ankle Deep will stand more powerful engines, I will equip her with them, and make another try to bring the cup back here. The English and French boats are all fine craft and it will need a smarter boat than Ankle Deep to beat them, particularly Maple Leaf IV., E. Maudsley Ellis's speed marvel, which was the only boat in the race which beat me in reliability.

"I took to England $2,000 worth of accessories, expecting that something might come up demanding the use of at least some of the parts I had with me, but in the end it was not necessary to put a hand to the boat, as her engines went through the three races without a mishap. The only thing she lacked was the speed, being outclassed only in that department."

ATHLETICS LEAD IN FIELDING RECORDS

The official fielding averages of the American League, which have just been made public, furnish another strong reason for the Athletics walking away with the pennant. Besides outdistancing all rivals in batting, according to the recently announced figures, the Mackmen showed the way to all rivals in fielding as well. The margin of superiority was not so pronounced as in batting, but wide enough to dispel any doubt about the best fielding combination in the circuit. In 153 games the Mackmen made only 212 errors, finishing with a fielding average of .966. Cleveland, the closest contenders of the champions, made 240 errors during the campaign, and Boston was the only other club to go through the year with less than 250 misplays.

The Yankees finished seventh in fielding, the same as in games won and lost. The league records show Chance's men on even terms with Detroit, each having a percentage of .954, but the Yanks made only 294 errors to an even 300 for the Tigers, so Chance's men are given the upper section of the tie. The error-making figures of the various clubs are as follows: Philadelphia, 212; Cleveland, 240; Boston, 242; Chicago, 250; Washington, 262; New York, 294; Detroit, 300; St. Louis, 305.

In individual fielding the prize performance of the season is found in that one position where high-class fielding is sought the least—among the pitchers. Walter Johnson, acknowledged the greatest pitcher of the day, showed more during the season just passed than is contained in his record of thirty-seven victories. He went through the season without a misplay, and the performance is all the more remarkable because the Washington wizard took part in more games than any other pitcher of his league. In fifty-one contests Johnson is credited with twenty-one put-outs and eighty-two assists, a total of 103 chances, and not a misplay to mar the record. It is as great a fielding record as recorded in baseball has ever been. Ray Caldwell of the Yankees is the only other pitcher with a clean slate, his record being seven put-outs and forty-one assists for twenty-three games.

"Stuffy" McInnis of the champion Athletics was the leading first baseman with a mark of .992 for 148 games. McInnis accepted 1,583 chances and made twelve errors. Tex Covington of St. Louis is the nominal leader, but he played in only sixteen games at first base. Gandil of Washington and Johnston of Cleveland rank close behind McInnis with marks of .990. Hal Chase, once known as the peerless first baseman, ranks near the bottom of the list among the regulars and near-regulars with thirty-three errors in 131 games and a mark of .977.

At the top among the second basemen is Melnie Berger of the White Sox, the player for whom Frank Chance was angling early last season, his mark being .988 for 70 games. Lajoie was the leader of those playing more than 100 games with .970 for 126 games. Eddie Collins of the Athletics, generally regarded as the king of second sackers, is down near the end of the list with a mark of .949. Collins is tied with Del Pratt for the greatest number of errors among the second basemen, but he easily led in assists and was second in put-outs. Hartzell, who played most of the season at second for the Yanks, has a mark of .942.

Hartzell is the nominal leader of the third basemen with .964 in 24 games, and Midkiff is next with .957 for 76 games. Maisel has a mark of .950 for 51 games. Jimmy Austin has the best figure among the regulars, .944 for 142 games.

Heinie Wagner of Boston led the shortstops, although he played in only 105 games. George McBride led the regulars with .961 for 150 games. Barry of the Athletics had .955 for 135 games.

Hartzell is the nominal leader among the outfielders with a perfect record for 28 games, and Birdie Cree is one next leader with .986 for 147 games, only three misplays marring his record. Cobb, Speaker, Milan, and Jackson, the great quartet, are down the list, all ranking between .925 and .950.

Only four catchers took part in more than 100 games, and Schalk of Chicago is the leader with .981 for 125 games. Ed Sweeney has a mark of .964 for 113 games and Agnew of St. Louis .952 for 104 games.

Willard to Settle Boxing Muddle.

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, will arrive in Buffalo this morning to adjust matters with Promoter Charles Murray of that city relative to the lifting of Willard's indefinite suspension by the State Athletic Commission. Willard failed to box One Round Davis at Murray's club last January. After Jones has reached an agreement with Murray he will appear before the commission here to-morrow and ask for Willard's reinstatement. These things are necessary before Willard can sign articles to box ten rounds with Carl Morris in Madison Square Garden on Dec. 2. Willard already has accepted the terms offered by Manager Billy Gibson.

AMERICAN JOCKEYS RETURN.

Taral, O'Neil, and Miles Have Had Successful Season Abroad.

Fred Taral, one of America's foremost jockeys of a generation ago, and now trainer for the Weinberg Stable in Germany, which totaled $127,000 in winnings during the past season, arrived in this city yesterday aboard the North German Lloyd liner George Washington. Taral stated that the last season was the most profitable he had enjoyed abroad.

With him was Frank O'Neil, who rode 800 races for W. K. Vanderbilt during the past season, and led the list of winning riders. It is said that O'Neil's great number of mounts is a world's record. He won 162 races. Taral believes that O'Neil is the greatest jockey on the turf, and recently offered him a retaining fee of $25,000 a year and 10 per cent. of his winnings to ride for the Weinberg firm, which O'Neil could not accept, as he is under contract to Mr. Vanderbilt.

Taral said that the last race ridden by Tommy Burns, the jockey who was killed here recently, was for him, at Berlin on Oct. 20. Another of the riding contingent to come home for the Winter was Michael Miles, who rode in Austria and won 52 out of 230 mounts.

RIVERS PICKED TO WIN.

Mexican Favorite Over Leach Cross for Their Bout Thursday.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 24.—After looking over both Joe Rivers and Leach Cross in their workouts for their bout on Thanksgiving Day, the betting fans to-day made Rivers a 10 to 9 favorite over the dentist. Backers of Cross are disappointed at the odds and want at least 10 to 8 for their money, and it is likely they will get it. Plenty of money is in sight to back both boys.

Training will come to an end to-morrow afternoon, so far as boxing and the strenuous work is concerned. They will do light work Wednesday to polish off the rough edges and then rest for the battle the following day. Rivers and Cross are emphatic in their declarations that they are pleased with their condition, and will have no excuses on this score in the event of defeat.

Levinsky Stops Yank Gilbert.

Yank Gilbert, formerly of Philadelphia, who recently returned from Europe, offered little or no resistance for Battling Levinsky last night in the main event scheduled for ten rounds at the Olympic A. C., and after three rounds of mediocre boxing Referee Dan Tone stopped the affair in the fourth round. Levinsky showed the effects of overwork, due to his enjoying in too many contests of late, and, although he was a little over the mark, he did not perform up to his standard. The bout failed to arouse a cheer from the packed house, which turned out in anticipation of seeing a contest, only when it took occasion to boot Gilbert. Levinsky toyed with his man, but in the third began to rock Gilbert's head with a straight left, which soon brought the blood from his nose. He landed all the blows scored, none of which carried the sting he has shown recently.

In the semi-final of ten rounds Joe Malone outpointed Gene Gilvoy. This was also a one-sided affair, with Malone forcing the work from the start, but lacking in hitting power, while Gilvoy persistently bored in and took whatever was forthcoming without ever letting up.

Maupome Defeats Gallagher.

The first night's play in the three-cushion billiard match between Pierre Maupome of St. Louis and Thomas Gallagher of this city at Doyle's Forty-second Street room last night resulted in a victory for the former by the score of 40 to 39 in fifty-three innings. Both players showed splendid form, Gallagher having a high run of five, while the Mexican's best effort was four. The second block will be played to-night. Alfredo de Oro was referee.

Charity Expert Says Average Laborer Can't Keep His Children So Fit.

$1,100 A YEAR FOR FIVE

Much Opposition at Hearing to State Relief for Widowed Mothers.

The first hearings of the State Commission on Relief for Widowed Mothers, held yesterday at the City Hall, developed emphatic opposition on the part of representatives of existing organized charities to the proposition that the State should establish a publicly administered fund for the assistance of such mothers.

In the opinion of the charity officials, who occupied most of the time of the commission at both morning and afternoon sessions, outdoor public relief has been a failure. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, phrased the viewpoint of the opposition when he said that public agencies had proved themselves most efficient in the carrying on of relief in institutions while private societies had done best work in administering relief to the unfortunate in their homes. This line of separation, he said, should be maintained.

All the speakers expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the basic idea of the proposition on which the commission has been designated to report. They took the position without exception that where no question of improper guardianship was raised against a mother, it was infinitely better that she be aided to keep her family together, than that the children should be supported by being placed in an institution.

Otto T. Bannard, a Vice President of the Charity Organization Society, took the most pronounced stand in opposition to the proposal. Mr. Bannard not only asserted that the relief of widowed mothers in their homes should be left to private charity organizations, but insisted that it would be a mistake for the State to subsidize such organizations to carry on the work. He said that State assistance would result in many societies springing up just to get part of the disbursement of the State monies and would prevent many philanthropically minded people from giving.

Alonzo J. Levy, Chairman of the commission, was not present at the morning session, at which John D. Lindsay of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and Sophie Irene Loeb presided in turn. Mr. Levy appeared at the afternoon session. Andrew Wilcox of the Buffalo Charity Organization Society, ex-Charities Commissioner Robert W. Hebberd, Richard M. Neustadt, secretary of the commission; Frederick S. Burr, Mrs. Hannah B. Einstein, Anthony J. Griffin, William Hard, Martin G. McCue, James W. Rozan, Dr. William L. Stroud and Frank Brewster Morgan Kent Smith, and Ralph W. Thomas of the commission were present.

John A. Kingsbury, chief agent of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, asserted that the work of relieving widowed mothers in their homes could best be carried on through the present agencies, provided that adequate funds could be obtained. He said he believed these could be raised.

Mr. Kingsbury heartily indorsed the view that children are better off with their widowed mothers than in institutions. He said that from his own observations the Chapin standard, fixed $900 a year as the standard of comfortable living for a family of five was inadequate in New York City. He said $1,000 or $1,100 would be nearer the figure needed to provide proper food, clothing, and shelter for five persons. When asked what measure of health and comfort this sum should furnish he answered:

"So they'll be in as good condition as the average work horse."

He explained that this was a bald way of stating that his estimate included no luxuries. He said in reply to a question by Commissioner Wilcox that the average annual income of the workingman's family of five was from $500 to $900. Then Mr. Lindsay asked:

"Then the average workingman's family is not so fit physically as the average work horse?"

"Of course not," replied Mr. Kingsbury.

Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, suffragist, lawyer, and Socialist, vehemently attacked the point of view of those who had pronounced outdoor public relief a failure. She said that the main thing to be considered with relation to the problem of widowed mothers was how best to keep the families together and give them the necessities of life. She said that all other questions were subordinate to that, and she considered it debatable whether other conditions should be considered as a condition of granting relief. She spoke slurringly of "the evident intention of some of the speakers that the poor mothers should earn their relief as a reward for cultivating such employ alities as industry, economy, and obedience."

Dr. Edward T. Devine opposed the proposal to pension widowed mothers on the ground that no machinery existed for carrying out the scheme and because it would reduce charitable contributions.

Frank Tucker, Vice President of the Provident Loan Society, said that Government aid to widowed mothers would result in much imposition and pauperism. He insisted that private agencies were adequate to carry on such work as was necessary.

The hearings will continue to-day.

SUE FISH FOR $30,000.

Lawyers' Claim for Services in Suit Against Illinois Central.

Maxwell Edgar and Ossian Cameron, attorneys of Chicago, have begun suit in the Supreme Court against Stuyvesant Fish for $30,000, alleged to be due them for legal services rendered to Mr. Fish at the time he started a campaign against the Directors of the Illinois Central Railroad after he had been deposed as President of the road.

Edgar and Cameron say that Mr. Fish stated a stockholder's suit for $10,000,000 against the Directors of the road, alleging that they had been guilty of graft. Edgar, Mr. Fish's acting secretary, was called in. According to Edgar, Mr. Fish said he did not wish to appear in the matter and proposed that Edgar's wife buy two shares of Illinois Central stock and begin suit. Edgar said that Mr. Fish furnished the money and two shares of stock were bought in Mrs. Edgar's name. Later Cameron was called into the case.

According to Edgar, the suit against the Directors of the road is now pending in the Cook County Circuit Court.

FOREIGN TRADE A RECORD.

Exports for 10 Months $2,005,010,884, or $544,822,853 Over Imports.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Preliminary figures issued by the Department of Commerce show record-breaking values of our foreign trade in October and for the period of the year ended with that month. For the ten months closed with October exports amounted to $2,005,010,884, as compared with $1,870,657,995 in the corresponding period of last year and $1,665,866,850 in 1911. The excess of exports over imports was $544,822,853, in contrast with $350,775,282 last year and $490,343,914 in 1911.

The exports for October aggregated $271,588,726, with $254,622,504 recorded in the preceding October and $210,365,516 in the same month of 1911. The excess of exports over imports was $138,694,706, as compared with $76,645,518 in the corresponding month of 1912 and $77,759,765 in that month of 1911.

TAYLOR LIBRARY SALE.

900 Lots of Dramatic Books and Autographs Dispersed on First Day.

The sale of the important dramatic library of the late Douglas Taylor, President of the Dunlap Society of this city, was begun by the Anderson Auction Company yesterday. Three sessions were held, morning, afternoon, and evening, and 900 lots of autographs, prints, play bills, and books, many of the last-named extra illustrated, were dispersed.

"Acters and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States from the Days of David Garrick to the Present Time," (1886), edited by Brander Matthews and Laurence Hutton, extra illustrated by the insertion of nearly 300 portraits and views, including more than eighty portraits of Mrs. Siddons herself, among which was the scarce colored plate of Thomas Rowlandson entitled "Rehearsing in the Green Room."

Robert Shaw of Boston, a well-known private collector of dramatic material, gave $80 for the complete and only account of Thomas A. Cooper's performances, collected and written by Joseph N. Ireland, author of "Records of the New York Stage." Cooper made his first appearance on the New York stage at the John Street Theatre on Jan. 5, 1798.

Benno Loewy obtained for $45 an extra-illustrated copy of Peter Cunningham's "Story of Nell Gwyn and the Sayings of Charles II.," London, privately printed, 1861, and paid $55 for an extra-illustrated copy of the first edition of the same work, London, 1852. He also paid $95 for an extra-illustrated large paper copy of Dr. John Doran's "Annals of the English Stage from Thomas Betterton to Edmund Kean," and $55 for an extra-illustrated copy of the first edition of Thomas Davies's "Memoirs of the Life of David Garrick."

Among the autograph letters sold were those of Mary Anderson, Mlle. Augusta, famous dancer; Benjamin Baker, John Bannister, P. T. Barnum, George H. Barrett, Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Arden, Harry Beckett, Ada Cavendish, Edwin Booth, Junius Brutus Booth, the elder; Dion Boucicault, John Brougham, Joseph Burke, William E. Burton, Mme. Celeste, Charlotte Cushman, E. L. Davenport, Clara Fisher, Edwin Forrest, Thomas Hamblin, "Yankee Hill," Joseph Jefferson, Charles Macklin, and Edmund Kean.

There will be three more sessions to-day.

HEARING ON SEIZED GEM.

R. T. Heitmeyer Examined with Mrs. Alexander, Who Brought It In.

Mrs. Edna Maer Alexander, who said she lived at the Hotel Vanderbilt, was asked to explain before Gen. Nelson H. Henry, the Surveyor of the Port, yesterday why she had failed to declare a diamond and sapphire pendant, when she arrived on the France on Saturday night.

Mrs. Alexander registered before she went abroad jewels worth about $7,000, and the investigation now on is to determine whether the pendant, estimated to be worth $700, was included. Mrs. Alexander was about to leave the pier on Saturday night when she was stopped and questioned about the pendant. She is said to have admitted to the Deputy Surveyors that a man who was a passenger on the France gave her the jewel. It was seized.

Mrs. Alexander, accompanied by a lawyer, was at the hearing yesterday. Robert T. Heitmeyer, head of the leather manufacturing firm of R. Neumann, in Willow Avenue, Hoboken, was sent for. He was a passenger on the France. He was taken off the office of Special Deputy Surveyor George Smyth, where Gen. Henry and others questioned him in regard to the pendant and as to the place where other jewelry brought in by Mrs. Alexander had been purchased. After the hearing, which lasted an hour, Mr. Heitmeyer and Mrs. Alexander departed together in an automobile. Gen. Henry said the investigation would be continued to-day.

Mrs. T. J. Fleming of Los Angeles, Cal., and her two young daughters, the Misses Margaret and Louise Fleming, were before Gen. Henry yesterday. They had arrived in the first cabin of the George Washington of the North German Lloyd Line earlier in the day. The customs inspector who examined their trunks was not convinced that their declaration covered all of the articles that he found. Their baggage was sent to the Public Stores for further examination.

MANY DEMAND CUT IN TELEPHONE RATES

Nearly 100 Organizations Represented at Public Service Board's Hearing.

LAWYER OFFERS SCHEDULE

Says the Company Is Earning Nearly 25 Per Cent.—Time Granted to Present Figures.

Nearly 100 representatives of civic organizations in all parts of New York were present at the hearing of the Public Service Commission of the Second District yesterday on the application of M. H. Winkler, a lawyer, of 90 Wall Street, for reduction in the telephone rates in Greater New York.

Mr. Winkler's petition asked for the same telephone rates for New York that prevailed in Chicago, where an area of 194 4-10 square miles is on a 5-cent basis and free from tolls. There are in this city at present two free-service zones which are on the basis of an 8-cent rate. One includes Bronx and Manhattan, a total of 60 4-5 square miles. The other includes Brooklyn and a part of Queens, a total of 104 square miles. Calls from one zone to the other are subject to tolls of 5 cents, and calls to the Borough of Richmond are subject to tolls of 10 and 15 cents.

A large number of the men who came to the hearing as representatives of civic organizations made talks, all in favor of reducing the telephone rates. Most of the speakers indorsed Mr. Winkler's proposed schedule.

The most important rate changes asked by Mr. Winkler are the abolition of the tolls, the reduction of the maximum rate from 8 cents to 5 cents, and the reduction of the minimum rate from 3 cents to 2 cents a call.

These schedules of rates were asked for by Mr. Winkler:

For a single direct line for business purposes, $60 a year for the first 1,200 calls; 3 cents a call for the next 1,200 calls; 2½ cents a call for the next 1,200 calls, and 2 cents apiece for all calls after the first 3,600.

Another contract for a single direct line for business uses, $48 a year for the first 960 calls; 5 cents apiece for the next 240 calls; 3 cents apiece for the next 1,200 calls; 2½ cents apiece for the next 1,200 calls, and 2 cents apiece for all calls after the first 3,600.

For telephones in residences, $40 a year for not more than 800 calls; 4 cents apiece for the next 800 calls; 3 cents apiece for the next 1,200 calls; 2½ cents apiece for the next 1,200 calls, and 2 cents apiece for all calls after the first 1,200.

The existing rate is $48 a year for not more than 600 calls. The owner of the $48 telephone pays 5 cents apiece for all calls after the first 600, in addition to the interborough tolls which Mr. Winkler would abolish.

Other contracts which a subscriber may, under the existing schedule, make with the New York Telephone Company are as follows: $57 a year for the first 800 calls; $66 a year for the first 1,000 calls; $75 for the first 1,200; $87 for the first 1,500; $99 for the first 1,800; $111 for the first 2,100; $123 for the first 2,400; $135 for the first 2,700. Under the above contracts the subscriber pays 5 cents extra for each call above the number paid for by the flat rate.

The present rate for not more than 3,300 calls a year is $156 and 4 cents for each call. The flat charge a year for not more than 5,700 calls is $228. For calls in addition to the first 5,700 the rate is 3 cents. Three cents is the minimum rate existing. On this schedule Mr. Winkler said the company earned nearly 25 per cent. on its investment.

In the course of his opening statement Mr. Winkler said that the Merchants' Association had been led into a "dishonorable and improper" effort to obstruct the present application for a reduction of rates. Mr. Winkler intimated that the Merchants' Association had been influenced by the telephone interests and he pointed out that John T. Gregg, counsel for the telephone company, was a Director of the Merchants' Association.

Mr. Winkler said that he had taken this statement up with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington and had found that no such investigation was intended.

Commissioner Decker adjourned the hearing until Dec. 22 to give the New York Telephone Company time to prepare figures showing its invested capital, the value of its property and its income.

BOY KILLS IN QUARREL.

Squallanti Shot Fellow-Employe and Confessed When Caught.

While polishing pianos on the fifth floor of the factory of the Standard Pneumatic Action Company in West Fifty-second Street, between Eleventh and Twelfth Avenues, yesterday afternoon, Albert Squillanti of 400 East 106th Street, 16 years old, employed in the factory as a varnisher, needed an empty bottle and went down to the fourth floor. William Bartes, 19 years old, of 501 East Seventy-fourth Street, was assembling piano parts here. When Squillanti asked him for a bottle he answered him roughly. Squillanti retorted in kind, and a quarrel followed. Then one of Bartes's friends, a youth known only as "John," struck Squillanti, the varnisher said, with a blackjack.

When work was over Bartes renewed the quarrel outside, and struck Squillanti on the chest. Squillanti stepped back a foot or two, drew a small revolver from his coat pocket, and fired once. The bullet went straight to Bartes's heart and he dropped dead on the sidewalk.

Squillanti ran, but was caught by Louis Volmut. He was taken to Krauss's drug store at Fifty-second Street and Eleventh Avenue, where the body of Bartes had been carried by friends and the dead boys' father, who works in the piano factory, pitiparatick, and Flaherty of the West Forty-seventh Street Station. Squillanti led the detectives to where he had hidden his revolver under a pile of railroad rails at Fifty-fourth Street and Tenth Avenue, near where he was caught.

MILLIONS IN P. O. BANKS.

New York Has 33,839 Depositors Averaging $91 in Savings Each.

Postmaster Edward M. Morgan gave out yesterday interesting statistics of the Postal Savings bank system in Manhattan and the Bronx. The branch of the savings bank was opened here on Aug. 1, 1911. On Oct. 31 last there were 33,839 depositors, with $3,092,099, or $91 each on deposit.

Deposits in other offices are: Brooklyn, $1,165,487; Buffalo, $164,055; Dunkirk, $68,515; Rochester, $58,500; Binghamton, $51,731; Long Island City, $42,187; Deposit, $38,092; Elmira, $37,412, and Schenectady, $37,007.

Postmaster Morgan found that on June 30 last, 86 per cent. of the depositors were native born whites, and that they had 17.6 per cent. of the total deposits; 61.7 per cent. were foreign-born whites, with 80.8 per cent. of the total deposits; 2.2 per cent. were negroes, and 0.1 per cent. were other non-whites.

Of 30,138 depositors on June 30 last, 68.5 per cent. were men or boys, and 31.5 per cent. women or girls.

Year in Prison for Strike Agitator.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Nov. 24.—Joseph M. Coldwell of Worcester, convicted recently of inciting to riot during the strike at the Draper Company's plant at Hopedale, was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction in the Superior Court here to-day. Coldwell, at the beginning of the strike, appeared as an organizer for the Industrial Workers of the World, but later was repudiated by that organization.

TYSON & CO. OBTAIN DELAY.

Magistrate Deuel Refuses to Dismiss Opera Ticket Complaint.

The hearing on the complaint against the theatre ticket agency of Tyson & Co., charged with grand larceny in the second degree for the hypothecation of its allotment of Metropolitan Opera season tickets with the Metropolitan Trust Company, came up yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Deuel, sitting in the Criminal Court Building. William L. Marshall of Griggs, Baldwin & Baldwin, 27 Pine Street, counsel for the ticket agency, maintained that the evidence had failed to show the commission of a crime. The complaint was made by Adolph E. Dick of 244 West Seventieth Street, who charged that his season tickets and $151.80 that he paid for them had been misappropriated by Tyson & Co.

So far as the check of Mr. Dick was concerned, Mr. Marshall said that the money had not been misappropriated. He argued that Tyson & Co. was not the agent of any party whatsoever, and that the concern was merely a dealer, retail, as was shown by the fact that the ticket agency paid the 10 per cent. less for the tickets of Mr. Dick than his purchase price. Mr. Marshall further asserted that the tickets were to have been delivered to Mr. Dick by Oct. 27, and that the failure to do so was not the fault of the ticket agency. He asserted that Mr. Dick now had his tickets.

The tickets themselves, Mr. Marshall said, could not be regarded as property but as a license, a non-transferable license. He was interrupted by Magistrate Deuel, who wished to know, in that event, what right Tyson & Co. had to dispose of them if they were marked "not transferable." Mr. Marshall explained that such had been the custom for many years by "tacit agreement" with the Metropolitan Opera Company. He proceeded with an argument that there was no provision to his knowledge in the criminal code making a license the subject of an action on a charge of larceny.

Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train, who had conducted the prosecution, made a brief answer to Mr. Marshall. He held that whether the ticket agency was the agent of any party or not, the evidence brought out showed that there actually had been a criminal violation in the disposal of the subscribers' tickets.

Magistrate Deuel denied the motion to dismiss the case, but at the request of Mr. Marshall agreed to suspend his ruling on the motion until the counsel for the defendant might have time to submit a brief. A week was the time set for Mr. Marshall to file his brief, and three days were given to the District Attorney's office within which to answer it. Two days more will be allowed to Mr. Marshall in which to reply to the answer of the District Attorney, so that Dec. 8 was set as the day for a final ruling by Magistrate Deuel.

CITY BREVITIES.

Judge Coxe in the Federal District Court yesterday appointed James T. Crane of Rector Street receiver for the Hotel Rector Company. This action was taken in a judgment creditor's suit brought by the Wilson Distilling Company. The receiver's bond was fixed at $100.

Fanny Paperman 20 years old, was acquitted yesterday by a Coroner's Jury of the murder of Salvatore Cassetta, 22 years old, in a quarrel on the night of Oct. 26. The jury decided that it was justifiable homicide, done in self-defense, and as a climax to wrongs committed by the young Italian.

A meeting of the After Care Circle of the Jewish Maternity Hospital was held yesterday at Temple Emanu-El, Mrs. Leo Sulzberger presiding. Dr. Herman Schwartz of Mount Sinai Hospital, read a paper on infant hygiene. During the past year the institution has cared for 624 babies.

The art galleries on the steamship France of the French Line, lying at the foot of West Fifteenth Street, will be thrown open to the public from 1 to 5 o'clock this afternoon, to permit of inspection of porcelain and French china art objects sent here under the auspices of the French Government. No tickets are necessary.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination at the New York custom house for laboratory aid and engineer, for men only, on Dec. 10, at a salary of $800 a year in the forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., and vacancies as they may occur in positions requiring similar qualifications. The duties of laboratory aid and engineer consist, in general, of the operation and care of the mechanical appliances used in the laboratories. Applicants for examination should be of good physique, as they may be required to handle heavy timbers and to do general work in pipe fitting and setting up and modification of machinery. Competitors will be examined in arithmetic, operation and care of boilers, motors, shafting, &c.; training, and experience. Practical experience and familiarity with the use and care of machinery and tools, such as steam boilers, pumps, saws, electric motors, is prerequisite for consideration for this position. A high degree of general intelligence and aptitude is required. No special educational training is required, but preference will be given to men who show that they have educational qualifications. Age, 18 years or over on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stock Trading Dullest in 25 Years — Remarkable Foreign Trade Showing.

Wall Street talked of little else yesterday besides its own trouble. It was the dullest day on the Stock Exchange in twenty-five years, which attests sufficiently strongly the sad pass to which those who depend upon commissions on stock transactions or upon speculation in stocks have come. Considerably more than a grain of comfort might have been extracted even by these from past experience, which has so often shown that periods as dull as that which is troubling the stock market at present frequently yield place to periods of considerable expansion in security trading. But even in Wall Street the stock market is far from being the sole object of interest. Rightfully viewed it is indeed nothing more than an incident of the financial situation, and the matters of broader import which had clear claim to the chief place in the day's discussion, though this was denied to them by many, carried no such doleful import as was attributed in Stock Exchange circles to the prostration of the stock market.

The Street scarcely remembered that the formal argument in behalf of increased freight rates was begun yesterday, or that the proposed currency legislation was entering upon a new and important stage. Yet from both of these matters much is expected elsewhere in the country at least, even if Wall Street from laying too great emphasis on the smallness of the stock market has almost ceased to expect much good of anything. The fact is that with the beginning of the formal presentation of the railroads' case in favor of higher rates confidence in their ability to justify the proposed increases is greater than it has heretofore been, partly because of the belief that shippers themselves are much less opposed to this proposed increase than they were to that which was suggested two years ago. There is reason, too, to expect that before the debate on the Currency bill in the Senate which has now begun has come to an end, the currency proposals will have been further improved and the country will be promised a new currency and banking system which, discreetly handled, will do much to further its material interests.

And there was presented yesterday the record of the country's foreign trade for the month of October. It is almost impossible to survey the record credit trade balance of $138,600,000 reported for October and the $544,000,000 credit trade balance for the elapsed ten months of the calendar year without drawing inferences which are quite opposed to those which so large a part of the financial community has lately been disposed to draw from what it has seen going on about it, or it would be truer to say, from its narrow observation of its own situation. This foreign trade showing helps at once to explain why it is we are in a position to draw gold largely from Europe, and why at the same time we are under no necessity to do so. The very strength of the position which fortunately we now occupy in the international money markets makes unnecessary a struggle on our part for a share in the new gold supplies, the loss of which would hurt the markets of Europe much more than it would help us. And this notwithstanding the fact that we ourselves are being called upon to supply a substantial amount of gold for shipment to Canada.

But even Europe's monetary position is improving. Discount rates receded on the Continent yesterday, and while at London rates remain relatively high compared with those elsewhere, even though not unusually high for the season it is necessary to bear in mind that that centre is becoming more and more free of the fear of unusual pressure from other markets. At Berlin, for example, discount rates fell off yesterday to 4½ per cent., or over three-quarters of a point under the London discount level. We ourselves entered the week which will see the preparations for the Dec. 1 interest and dividend disbursements, with call money going no higher than 3 per cent.

It is true that trade is receding, but there is a vast difference between quiet trade and business depression, and there is no present reason for fearing the latter. It would not be contrary to past experience if Wall Street, and more particularly the Stock Exchange, soon came to wonder why it attached so much importance to the mere dullness of these days on the Stock Exchange. Apart from the few exceptions to the general rule the price changes yesterday were very small, as is not strange in view of the state of trading. In the general level of quotations such net change as did show was a small rise.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 2¾@3 per cent., with the last loan at 2¾ per cent. The renewal rate was 2¾ per cent.

Time money rates were 4¾@5 per cent. for sixty and ninety days and 4½@5 per cent. for four to six months.

Clearing House exchanges, $225,626,212; balances, $9,427,981; Sub-Treasury credit balances, $2,042,350.

The local banks have lost $2,923,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 5½ per cent. for short and 5 per cent. for three months' bills; Berlin, 4½ per cent.; Paris, 3½ per cent. Money was 4½@4¾ per cent. in London, and 2 per cent. in Berlin.

The Berlin check rate on London was 20 mks.5.50½ pfennigs. The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 31 centimes.

Foreign exchange was quoted as follows:

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

Bar silver was ¼d higher in London, at 26⅞d, and ½c higher in New York, at 58½c per ounce.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Senator Owen's Flattery

More than one member of the Stock Exchange gaped with surprise yesterday when he read on the news tickers this extract from the report on the currency bill by Senator Owen:

"We are advised by representative bankers in New York that the great banks there would be glad to improve the system by the establishment of Federal reserve banks strong enough to furnish money quickly on demand against good commercial bills, and thus enable the banks to withdraw their funds from the Stock Exchange, which has become the most gigantic gambling establishment in the world."

Even the Senator probably would admit that the Stock Exchange has a legitimate function in supplying a market place for the actual sale of investment issues. Granting that, what proportion of a day's trading, yesterday's for example, would he characterize as gambling and what proportion as bona fide dealings? As stock brokers view it, it the speculation which is going on at this time makes the Stock Exchange the greatest gambling institution in the world, then gambling has at last been effectually exterminated the world over. It has been a full quarter of a century since the Exchange has done so little business, legitimate or gambling, as it did yesterday.

An Omen of Hope.

If brokers were a superstitious lot they might have been cheered by an odd trick of the weather yesterday. Shortly after the close of the market, and while many of them were starting homeward, the sky, which had been steadily blackening until it seemed that a great storm was imminent, suddenly lightened and the late sun gilded the tops of the skyscrapers for a few moments. At the same time a rainbow appeared just over the uptown boundary of the financial district, which is Maiden Lane. Before the exact position of the rainbow could be determined it vanished, and the sky became darker than ever.

⁂

More September Compilations.

The Bureau of Railway Economics at Washington reports that in September the railways of the United States, the returns from unimportant companies omitted, had an increase over the corresponding month of last year of $9,143,000 in gross revenues. This increase was accompanied by an addition to operating expenses of $14,139,000. The net earnings decreased $4,995,000. Net earnings per mile of road fell off 6 per cent. in September. This, however, is a smaller decrease than has been averaged so far this year; for the first three months of the fiscal period net earnings per mile decreased 7.2 per cent.

The Street's Eyes Only on Itself.

That portion of the Wall Street community which makes its living by buying and selling stocks was so much concerned yesterday with the evidence of poor business displayed by the ticker that it neglected outside factors which are likely to exert influence on the market. Chief of these were the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on freight rates, and the debate in the Senate on the Currency bill. The possible effect of developments as these important problems are day by day carried further toward solution, appeared to be submerged in the gloom of commission houses over current lack of profits. A little application of cheer to a casual survey of the situation might have evolved an argument something like this:

Assuming, first, that the speculative fabric of the stock market has not been entirely destroyed, activity in one direction or the other is likely to appear if an incentive is given. Action on freight rates, or a wide split in the Senate on the currency question, or even favorable action on the Currency bill measure, might put life in stocks. It would make no difference to the brokers whether stocks went up or down. They would have their commissions, and past records show that profitable business has frequently followed close on the heels of excessive dullness.

Harking Back to Other Days.

It is doubtful if those Stock Exchange members who express the most doleful views about the future of stock trading really believe what they say. The Street has gone through other periods of great stagnation, and always come through into an era of activity. Among the groups of brokers who gathered to commiserate one another on the floor yesterday this item of history was brought out, and afterward reiterated hopefully as others came up to pass the dull minutes in conversation. It was plain to the older members early in the afternoon that the day was going to establish a record for some years, at least in the way of quiet trading, and numerous reminiscences of the sluggish markets after the panic of 1893 were being told as the session drew to a close.

Rumely's Fall in a Year.

The setting of a new low record for Rumely common stock yesterday at 14 gave opportunity for a review of its fortunes in the market during one year. Last November the shares sold up to 101, more than seven times their present market value, and in 1912 they did not fall below 87½. Early in 1913 they were quoted at prices considerably above 90, but when the decline began it progressed rapidly. In July the low figure quoted yesterday was approached closely, with a subsequent recovery of fair size. In quarters close to the management of the company it is said that preparations are being made to do a good business in the coming year, but the common stock has given no reflection as yet of an improvement in sentiment toward it.

7% vs. 5% and why.

At present prices investments are recognized as "cheap." Their safety remains unimpaired. Good bonds can therefore be purchased to yield 5% or slightly over.

Consider then the exceptional advantages of a short-term note, secured by first and refunding mortgage bonds exceeding the par amount of the notes, and yielding 7%

Earnings increasing year by year, convertible at any time during the next three years into long-term bonds, and at a price equal to or better than the bargains of to-day.

These features, among others, are embodied in the Three-Year Bond Secured Notes of a prominent Public Utility Company, which we offer (strictly subject to prior sale and advance in price) to yield 7%.

The notes are in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000.

FRISCO FIGURES NOT ALTERED BY SPEYER

C. W. Hillard Explains His Letter to President Winchell of September, 1910.

BANKERS NOTED ERRORS

Made Company Correct Its First Draft of a Prospectus for German Boerse.

C. W. Hillard, associated with B. F. Yoakum for many years in the management of the St. Louis & San Francisco, and now financial representative here for the receivers of that property, has returned from St. Louis, where he was a witness before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Hillard explained that injustice had been done to Speyer & Co. through the reading into the record of a portion of a letter referring to changes which should be made in a prospectus under preparation for the Berlin Boerse. This was erroneously spoken of at the hearing as an annual report.

"Instead of being a subject for criticism, the action of Speyer & Co. in this matter was entirely creditable," said Mr. Hillard. "So far as Blair & Co. and the Old Colony Trust Company are concerned, their names should never have been mentioned, but to have declined to mention them under the circumstances would have created a suspicion that there was something to conceal.

"The Gulf Construction Company was not a Frisco proposition in any way. The only ground for referring to it as such was the fact that Mr. Yoakum and I were subscribers."

A copy of the letter, part of which was read into the record at St. Louis, and which intimated that the Frisco's bankers had suggested changes in the road's statistics to make them appear more favorable, was delivered to Speyer & Co. The letter was written in 1910 by Mr. Hillard to B. L. Winchell, then President of the Frisco. Speyer & Co. said yesterday:

"The company had furnished us at that time with a draft of a prospectus which was to be submitted to the Berlin Stock Exchange and German Government authorities, and on examination we found that this draft did not give a correct and intelligible statement of the company's financial affairs. We found:

"First—That the company had in this draft overstated its liabilities by mentioning on the liability side $8,000,000 notes which they had outstanding, and also $10,000,000 of its New Orleans division bonds, which were deposited as security for these same notes.

"Second—The next item to which we objected was the inclusion in the item 'Notes Payable' of $3,063,636.77 due to Brownsville Syndicate, account balance purchase price of Brownsville Road.' We had repeatedly been informed by the company that there was nothing due by the Frisco in this connection because the debt of the Frisco for the purchase of the Brownsville Line had been discharged by payment in bonds. We insisted that this transaction should be carried out as promised, and the note or floating debt was liquidated by an actual sale of bonds.

"Third—We also found that the company stated that the cash on hand on June 30, 1909, was $5,100,354.00, while in the annual report for 1908-09 the same amount was shown to be $4,520,-981.73. We asked for an explanation of the apparent discrepancy, and insisted that the explanation should also be given in the company's regular report or parallel columns be printed to enable proper comparisons.

"Fourth—We also claimed that in reporting earnings monthly to the public the company should include the mileage and earnings of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Division, which at that time were unfavorable, and that excluding them would be misleading.

"The company admitted the justice of our criticisms and of our demands, and made the changes accordingly. These changes were in effect a good deal more than a mere 'rearrangement of statistics' 'to make a better appearance.' The propriety of our position in this matter, and our purpose in asking for these changes surely cannot be questioned by any fair-minded person."

Maturity Extended Three Years.

The M. Rumely Company has decided to arrange with holders of $10,000,000 of its notes, due on March 1, 1915, for an extension of maturity for three years from date. The reason for preparing so long ahead for this extension is said, in quarters close to the company, to be for the purpose of making easier the flotation of bank loans if extra funds are necessary for working capital. The fact that the note issue need not be retired for some time is expected to strengthen the company's credit for temporary needs.

RECEIVER FOR REALTY CO.

Owners of Large Apartments Could Not Obtain Loans.

The West Eighty-second Street Realty Company, of which Harry Schiff is President, was thrown yesterday into a receiver's hands by the order of Judge Hough in the Federal District Court. J. Clarence Davies was appointed receiver, with a bond of $75,000, and it was explained that this action had been taken as a consequence of the inability of the company to obtain the loans which it had expected and in order to safeguard valuable properties.

The court acted as the result of an equity suit brought by the Otis Elevator Company, which is a creditor for $8,000, the balance due for the installation of elevators in the structures belonging to the company at a cost of $20,300.

The West Eighty-second Street Realty Company owns or controls the building at Broadway and 105th Street, which is worth more than $1,500,000 and is mortgaged for $1,000,000; the building at Broadway and Ninety-fourth Street, which is worth $370,000 and is mortgaged for $135,000; the building at West End Avenue and Ninety-sixth Street, which is worth $285,000 and is mortgaged for $185,000; a building in West End Avenue, between 105th and 106th Streets, which is worth $210,000 and is mortgaged for $165,000, and 570 lots and fourteen dwelling houses at Roselle Park, S. I., which are worth $150,000 and are mortgaged for $75,000.

In addition to these mortgages the Otis Elevator Company says that the realty concern owes other creditors $140,000, of which $90,000 is due banks for loans and the rest is unpaid on notes.

It is asserted that there is no doubt that the true value of the assets of the corporation are far in excess of its entire indebtedness.

Beekman, Menken & Griscom, who represent the West Eighty-second Street Realty Company, had this to say:

"This bill has been filed with Mr. Schiff's cognizance with a desire to provide for the protection of the very valuable properties held by Mr. Schiff's company, which finds itself embarrassed owing to inability to obtain loans which would normally be easily had. The assets of the company are undoubtedly greatly in excess of the liabilities, and we are confident that a readjustment will be effected to the satisfaction of the creditors and stockholders at an early date."

TO MAKE DIESEL ENGINES.

F. A. Vanderlip and T. M. Brown in New $2,200,000 Company.

A company has just been incorporated under the laws of New York State to engage in the manufacture of Diesel oil engines on an extensive scale. The initial capitalization will be $2,200,000, half common and half 6 per cent. cumulative and participating preferred stock. Important New York financial interests are represented in the Board of Directors by Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, and Thatcher M. Brown of Brown Brothers & Co. Both stationary and marine engines will be built.

The new corporation, which is backed by strong American and Swedish financial interests, will take over the plant and organization of the McIntosh & Seymour Company of Auburn, N. Y. The latter company is widely known as builders of steam engines. This business will be continued as heretofore. The Swedish interests in the new company are those which now control the Swedish Diesel Motor Company, one of the largest concerns in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture of Diesel engines, which it builds on the Hesselman system.

The McIntosh & Seymour Corporation is the name under which the American company will operate. Other Directors besides Messrs. Vanderlip and Brown are: Marcus Wallenberg, President Stockholm's Enskilda Bank, Stockholm, Sweden; Edwin S. Church and J. A. Seymour, Auburn, N. Y.; Franklin B. Kirkbride, New York; Oscar Lamm, Stockholm, Sweden, and Philip W. Henry of New York. W. M. Coleman of this city is the general counsel.

Mr. Church, who was formerly Superintendent of the Akron plant of the International Harvester Company, will be the executive head of the new corporation. Mr. Seymour, who is President of the McIntosh & Seymour Company, will be Vice President, and will have charge of the engineering.

Dr. Rudolf Diesel, the inventor of the engine which bears his name, was drowned late in September from the steamer Dresden while en route from Antwerp to London to attend a meeting of the Consolidated Diesel Engine Manufacturers. While many of Dr. Diesel's friends contended that he fell overboard, there were strong rumors at the time that he had committed suicide.

Pope & Co. Liabilities $344,600.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—Liabilities of $344,600 are shown in the schedules filed today by Arthur W. Pope & Co., dealers in shoe findings, who were petitioned into bankruptcy last June. The assets, which were assigned for the benefit of creditors, are appraised at $75,000, although having an apparent book value of $184,000.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While the volume of business transacted on the Consolidated Stock Exchange was not heavy, the market on the floor was quite a broad one considering the prevailing Wall Street conditions. Thirty different stocks were represented in the dealings. These included Rock Island common and Interborough common, the only sales of these two stocks on Wall Street during the day. Changes from Saturday's closings, as reflected on the opening call, were irregular, but there were more declines in prices than advances. So far as the general list was concerned in the trading after the call, the same nervous and waiting conditions were displayed that were in evidence at the close of last week.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Can't Get Machinery.

Considerable delay is being encountered by Appraiser Higgins in putting into operation the proposed conditioning room at the Public Stores for standardizing the duties on cotton fabrics, yarns and woolens. A room for that purpose has been set apart there, but, although a requisition was made more than a month ago for the machinery, nothing has been heard from the Treasury Department to indicate whether it intends to act favorably on the request.

Velvet and Broadtail Cloth.

"Velvet and broadtail cloth are the two dress fabrics most seen at fashionable gatherings in Paris during the day," said a well-known importer yesterday. He had just returned from an extended trip abroad. "Black and tête de negre are the most favored colors. Ten days ago I was in an ultra-smart Paris tea room, and there I counted more than 300 women who wore velvet hats. Small hats seemed to be the latest thing—much smaller than American women are now wearing."

Boom in English Laces Expected.

The Nottingham lace market is not particularly active at the moment, and the demand is limited practically to fancy laces. According to recent reports, however, the manufacturers there are shortly expecting a return to vogue of wider skirts, and, with them, a general increase in business. Nets are also active, the English manufacturers say. The prices received for them are good, and the supply is not great. The American import trade is taking English merchandise well, and at a good profit to the producers, but the latter are said to be in mortal fear of the wholesale cancellations that have heretofore spoiled booms in the English lace trade.

Give Up Mail Order Trade.

Smith, Gray & Co. has sent out a trade announcement that its mail-order tailor to the trade business has been transferred to the Premier Tailoring Company of Syracuse. The letter says, in part: "Although we have attempted to carry on our tailor to the trade business, we find that, on account of certain developments that have taken place, it will be to the mutual advantage of our customers and ourselves to transfer this business. We have arranged with the right concern to handle this, and have turned over our entire tailor to the trade department to the Premier Tailoring Company of Syracuse, N. Y., which is owned and controlled by W. S. Peck & Co. Orders from the samples which you now have will be filled immediately by them."

Business Conditions Are O. K.

While there is uncertainty in some localities, there is nothing in the general condition of the country's business to warrant pessimism. This was the theme of a brief recital of conditions that was made here yesterday to a TIMES reporter by an official of a well-known Western hardware company. "Where crops have been good," he said, "and that means in a good part of the country, the people are confident and trade is normally active. Everywhere I have gone I have found the tone of business conservative, but healthy. There is little buying of merchandise on a chance of higher prices, as stocks all over the country are lower than at the lowest levels commensurate with good business. One of the most serious conditions generally is the limited amount of building that is going on in the small towns."

BUSINESS NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the New York Trade Press Association the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, M. C. Robbins of Iron Age; Vice President, W. H. Ukers of The Tea and Coffee Trade Journal; Treasurer, A. E. Clifford of The Engineering Record. The following were elected to the Board of Directors: Hugh M. Wilson of the McGraw Publishing Company, Mason Britton of The American Machinist, A. C. Pearson of The Dry Goods Economist, and E. T. Frazer of The Haberdasher.

Imports of silk fabrics at New York in the week ended Nov. 15 were valued at $920,972, a drop of $30,986 from the figures of the week previous. Withdrawals from bonded warehouses aggregated $115,202, or a gain of $12,718 over the week before.

INQUIRY FOR EGG CORNER.

McReynolds Orders One Into Causes of Dear Food Kept in Storage.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Attorney General McReynolds ordered to-day a Federal investigation into the causes for the high prices of eggs and other articles of food kept in cold storage. Agents of the Department of Justice will conduct the inquiry with a view to possible criminal prosecutions.

Because of the general complaint of consumers in New York and other Eastern cities, the Attorney General two weeks ago directed that inquiries be made in New York City, the outcome of which indicates, according to officials, that the price of eggs is being forced upward by agencies acting in restraint of trade.

The Attorney General would not discuss the subject. All he would say was that he wanted to get at the truth of the matter, but a high official of the department said to-night:

"The Attorney General stands right where the average consumer stands in this matter. He knows that the prices of products that are kep in cold storage are high, but he does not know why this is so, and he wants to know. There is, of course, ample remedy for the condition if the facts can be had. If the products in question enter into interstate commerce, if they are controlled by a monopoly, or if there is a combination in different territories of the coldstorage firms in the nature of a conspiracy, the matter can be dealt with speedily."

Thus far the department and the Attorney General are acting almost entirely on the general complaint of the people voiced in the newspapers and at public meetings. There are no specific charges or complaints before the department.

The Attorney General has only the preliminary and incomplete reports of the investigations made in New York City. The investigation will be pursued in every large city where there are cold-storage plants.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The Committee of Public Works of the Argentine Senate has reported favorably on a law authorizing a native company to construct and exploit a railway from Mal Abrigo, Province of Santa Fe, to Anatuya, Province of Santiago del Estero.

Leaf tobacco imported into France in the first eight months of the present year weighed 10,000 pounds, an increase of 18,000 pounds over similar imports in the corresponding months of last year.

The 1912 hemp crop of Naples proved satisfactory both in quality and color. The production totaled 30,500 tons, which nearly equaled the record crop of 1907.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Hats Called Silk Wearing Apparel—Decisions on Braids and Tape.

The Board of United States General Appraisers declined yesterday to reverse an assessment made by the Collector on trimmed and untrimmed hats imported by the Simpson-Crawford Company. The goods were returned by the Appraiser as composed wholly or in chief value of silk. Duty was accordingly taken at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 402, act of 1909, as silk wearing apparel. Claims for lower rates were overruled.

Kohn & Baer, New York, failed in a contention for lower duty on laces, braids, beltings, trimmings and webbings. They were assessed for duty according to the component material of chief value at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 401, or at 60 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 349 of the old tariff. The protests were submitted on tape intended for binding the edges of sailors' shirt collars. The Collector classified the goods as tapes under Paragraph 349 of the old law, and exacted duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem. The importers said the importation was dutiable at 45 per cent. under Paragraph 358, as manufactures of flax. The board held that cheaply made brooches, pins, clasps, and other articles are not jewelry within the meaning of the act of 1909, dutiable at 60 per cent., but were entitled to enter at 35 per cent. as toys. The importers included B. Illfelder & Co., B. L. Kraemer & Co., and the American Bead Company.

COTTIER GLASS PANELS SOLD

Beautiful Work Almost Given Away —"Bishop and Acolyte" Brings $59.

Beautiful stained glass panels were practically given away at the American Art Galleries of the Cottier sale yesterday afternoon. The glass on exhibition made one of the most attractive galleries ever seen in the American Art Association rooms. One entire gallery was walled with the glass, with electric lights at the back.

A panel of old German glass 19¾ by 15¼, "Bishop and Acolyte," brought the highest price of the sale, going to Crowley for $59. The panels brought from $2 up. Among the buyers were Mrs. Garrett Pier, Mrs. James Harden, Mrs. H. A. Dewey, Mrs. S. B. Brownell, R. Williams, G. W. Briggs of Tarrytown, and a number of dealers. The returns for the afternoon were $1,685.

Tapestries, lace draperies, fine hand work linen and cut work silk, satin damask, and other fine stuffs will be sold to-day.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

Wheat was in light demand yesterday, but showed gains at the close extending from ½c. to ⅝c. Corn declined a half cent and oats eased off to the extent of ½c. to ¼c. a bushel. The cotton market was irregular throughout the day, leaving off with a 5-point loss in November and gains of from 2 to 9 points in the other options. Provisions were easy and cotton oil showed steadiness.

WHEAT.

Prices in the wheat market were steady, and the volume of business was light, prices closing near the lowest, but with net gains of ⅛@⅝c. The European markets were firm as a result of covering, which was prompted by reports of unsettled weather in Argentina and firmness in the Argentine markets. An estimate by the International Institute placed the Russian crop at 875,000,000 bushels, which is considerably in excess of previous estimates, and an estimate by the same source which placed the world's crop at 100.2 per cent. of last year's yield.

Receipts at Northwestern points were again quite liberal, and, while there was said to be a fair milling demand, the cash market as a whole was not active, and export sales yesterday amounted to only about 10 loads. The visible supply in the United States showed an unexpected decrease of 193,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 3,333,000 last year, while Canada lost 787,000 and bonded stocks decreased 240,000.

In the local cash market No 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 97⅝c. cost, insurance, and freight, New York export basis, and 90c free on board; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 97¼c. free on board.

CORN.

The corn market felt the influence of more favorable weather conditions in the West and closed ½c net lower. The Liverpool market was excited and higher early owing to small offerings from Argentina and the Danube, but lost part of the gain under profit taking. The visible supply decreased 1,184,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 228,000 last year. World's exports were 2,280,000, compared with 3,197,000 last week and 5,534,000 a year ago.

In the local cash market old No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 82½c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

The oats market was quiet and without particular feature, but prices were slightly easier, in sympathy with corn, closing ½@¾c net lower. The visible supply decreased 510,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 582,000 last year. The Russian crop was placed at 1,036,656,000 bushels, compared with 884,762,000 last year.

The local cash market was steady, standard white being quoted at 46@47c; No. 2, 47@47½c; No. 3, 45½@46c; No. 4, 44½@45c; ordinary clipped white, 44¼@46½c; fancy clipped white, 47@48c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed a steadier tone during the first part of the day, owing to buying by commission houses and influenced by an early advance in hog prices. Late in the day the market sagged off under selling by stock yard interests. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 35,000; estimated for Tuesday, 22,000. Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 5,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Covering by November shorts gave the cotton oil market a slightly steadier tone, but the volume of business was small. Offerings of crude oil were not heavy, and it was said that the crude situation is being influenced by firm holdings of seed in the South.

COTTON.

Conflicting estimates of the crop was responsible for considerable irregularity in the cotton market yesterday. An early break followed reports that a former Government statistician estimated the yield at 15,205,000 bales, and that the Shreveport correspondent of prominent London statisticians had increased his estimate from 13,850,000 to 14,300,000 bales. Offerings were pretty well taken on the early decline, however, and the market more than recovered its losses in the later trading, with the close steady, net 5 points lower on November and December, but generally 2 to 9 points higher.

The opening was steady at a decline of 4 to 6 points, and the early break carried prices about 10 to 12 points net lower. There was a good deal of scattering liquidation on the decline, which carried January contracts off to 12.75, or the lowest price reached since they sold at 13.35 toward the end of October. The market then steadied on covering and moderate trade buying and closed within a point or two of the best.

Eighty-six members of the Savannah Cotton Exchange estimate the crop at 14,200,000 bales, individual estimates ranging from 13,500,000 to 14,850,000 bales. Fifty-one members of the Augusta Cotton Exchange estimate the crop at 14,285,000 bales on the average, with individual guesses ranging from 13,500,000 to 15,300,000 bales. Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged to ¼c lower. Atlantic State markets being generally 1-16c to ⅛c lower.

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged at 13.50 for middling upland; sales nil.

COFFEE.

Trading in the coffee market was quiet, total sales for the day aggregating 69,000 bags. The undertone was steadier, and after opening at an advance of 4 to 6 points, values continued to work upward, closing near the top, with net gains of 11 to 13 points. Havre was 1-16 of 1c to ⅛ of a franc, while Hamburg was ⅛ to 1 pfennig higher. In the cost and freight market a steadier feeling prevailed. Receipts in Brazil were again quite liberal, but stocks there are decreasing, which confirms recent reports of large sales, both to America and Europe. Prices in the Brazilian market were unchanged for spots, both in Rio and Santos, while Santos futures were 25 to 75 reis higher.

The local spot market was quiet but steady, with Rio 7s quoted at 9⅝c.

The total warehouse deliveries in the United States last week were 146,374 bags, against 127,918 last week, and 118,615 last year. Of the former amount, New York had 87,225 bags.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

The materials favored for women's suits and skirts for Spring are cotton crepes in plain, printed, and novelty weaves and cotton sponge and matine in plain, plaid, and novelty effects. The silks will embrace a number of plain and printed taffetas in chiffon finish. Printed and plain Canton crepes, crepe de chins, satins, and charmeuse will continua in favor.

Muslin underwear manufacturers are using large quantities of Valenciennes and shadow laces in trimming their Spring lines. Deep flouncings and edgings are favored.

The holiday demand for women's neckwear is assuming unusually large proportions this year. Collars and turnover sets are proving strong items in the medium and high-priced lines.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Old American News Company Building Leased to the Martin B. Brown Company—Builder Buys Site for Upper West Side Apartment House—Bronx and Suburban Deals.

An important lease in the City Hall section was made yesterday, when the Martin B. Brown Printing and Binding Company leased for a term of years the old American News Company Building at 39 and 41 Chambers Street, running through to 21 to 25 Read Street. The building has a frontage of 75 feet on each street by 151 deep, and is opposite the Hall of Records and also adjoins the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank on the west.

The Brown firm, which prints the City Record, is one of the largest printing houses in the city, and has been located at 53 Park Place, on the southwest corner of West Broadway, for nearly half a century. The cause of the removal is due to the construction of the Subway down West Broadway, which, it was believed, would make the building untenable for the printing and publishing business. The American News Building in Chambers Street was vacated by that firm a few years ago, when it secured the property at 9 to 15 Park Place and is to 12 Murray Street for its new home.

Buys to Insure Apartment Light.

Arthur S. Luria purchased at auction yesterday the vacant lot, 25 by 100.11, on 116th Street, adjoining the seven-story Hillcrest apartment house at 430 West 116th Street. The lot was sold by Henry Brady in foreclosure proceedings, and Mr. Luria paid $12,625. He is the owner of the Hillcrest, west of the vacant plot.

Sale on St. Nicholas Place.

A plot, 75 by 100, on the east side of St. Nicholas Place, opposite 153d Street, has been purchased by the Dayton Realty Company, of which Harris Mavan is President, from Oscar Willgerodt. It will probably be improved with an apartment house.

Investor Buys on the Heights.

The Louis E. Bates Company has sold 611 West 176th Street, one of two five-story apartment houses recently completed, occupying a plot 46.6 by 87.8 by 100 feet. William Fischer, the buyer, paid all cash above the first mortgage on the property.

Buyers For Tenements.

Adelia J. Sparks has sold to a client of the Herman Arns Company for investment, 602 Eleventh Avenue, a five-story tenement with store on a lot 19.5 by 70.

William Hotter has sold to Lewine and Kempner 2,440 Eighth Avenue, a five-story four-family tenement, with stores, on lot 25 by 100, between 130th and 131st streets. Negotiations are said to be well advanced for a resale of the property.

New Harlem Flats Planned.

Plans are being prepared by the architects, Gronenberg and Leuchtag, for four five-story apartment houses on the south side of 111th Street, 100 feet east of Lenox Avenue, on plot 350 by 71.10 for the 111th Street Construction Company, Samuel Williams President. The cost will be $100,000.

Bronx Borough.

Eugene J. Busher has sold for George Schaefer, 353 East 138th Street, a five-story building with two stores, on lot 25 by 100; near the new subway station at Alexander Avenue, to an investor. This was an all cash transaction. Alfred J. Madden, John Jervis and Charles F. Desilver sold for James T. Barry the five-story apartment house at 1,429 Bryant Avenue on lot 50 by 100.

Charles Lopard has sold 846-848 East 167th Street, a five-story modern flat, 50 by 161, for the Angel Construction Company, to the Hudson Realty Company.

S. H. Frankenheim sold for Getrude Evelyn Mahoney to Louis A. Britt the three-story brick dwelling, 413 East 139th Street on plot 16.8 by 100.

Brooklyn.

At Brightwaters the J. B. Ackerson Company sold a plot 70 by 200 on Windsor Avenue, adjoining Moore plot to G. C. Perkinson of New York, also a plot 120 by 150 on South End Avenue, to H. L. Snodgrass of New York. Plot on West Lake Drive, 105 by 400, to R. W. Inee, whose architects are preparing plans of a colonial residence to be ready next Spring.

Wood, Harmon & Co. have sold at Hyde Park: one lot on East Fifty-first Street, near Avenue D, to G. E. Weiss; one lot on East Fifty-fourth Street, near Clarendon Road, to J. W. Jelks; one lot on East Fifty-first Street near Clarendon Road, to Miss A. K. Bannon; one lot on East Fifty-fourth Street, near Avenue D, to J. M. Frampton; one lot on East Fifty-first Street, near Clarendon Road, to A. F. Doyle, and one lot on East Fifty-fourth Street, near Avenue D, to E. P. Porcher.

New Jersey.

A plot of two acres on the southwest corner of Prospect and Springdale Avenues, East Orange, has been sold by Edward P. Hamilton & Co. to Harrison Hathaway.

Westchester County.

W. P. Smull has sold to Walter Gleb for occupancy, a frame dwelling occupying a plot 100 by 200 feet in Eleventh Court, Rochelle Park. The consideration was $10,500. The English stone dwelling at 33 Hamilton Avenue, Rochelle Heights, occupying a plot 100 by 125 feet, has been sold by A. Sundberg to Claire Phillips for $20,000.

Nichols & Hobbie have sold the estate of the late Leva A. Costello at Tarrytown, consisting of eight acres with a residence and other buildings, to Julian F. Detmer. The consideration was $46,100.

The residence at 109 Overlook Street, Mt. Vernon, has been purchased by Alma Gluch, the grand opera singer, from Louise E. Packer.

Leases Golf Links at Mt. Vernon.

The newly organized Sunnydale Country Club has obtained a three years' lease of the grounds and clubhouse formerly used by the Siwanoy Club, near Mt. Vernon. The Directors of the Sunnydale Club are: Isaac Kimball, President; B. J. Greenhut, E. J. Bloomingdale, William Cardoza, Monroe Rothschild, B. F. Gimbel, and Richard Walach. The Siwanoy Club has acquired land for a large golf course in the Pelham locality.

Suburban.

Kenneth Ives & Co. have sold for Frederick Weaverson his residence at Shippan Point, Stamford, Conn., corner of Fairview Avenue and Ocean Drive West, to William T. Evans, Treasurer of Mills & Gibb of New York, for occupancy.

Receiver for Harry Schiff's Co.

J. Clarence Davies was appointed as receiver for the West Eighty-second Street Realty Company, a corporation of which Harry Schiff, the builder, is the head, by Judge Hough of the Federal District Court yesterday. Real estate in Manhattan and Richmond valued at $2,535,000, and mortgaged for $1,560,000, is controlled by the company.

The receiver, whose bond was fixed at $75,000, was appointed in a creditors' suit brought by the Otis Elevator Company on a claim of $8,000 for balance due on a contract amounting to $20,300 for installing elevators in the company's structures.

In addition to the balance alleged to be due and the mortgages, the Otis Elevator Company says that the West Eighty-second Street Realty Company owes other creditors $140,000, of which $90,000 is due to banks for money loaned and the remainder is unpaid on notes.

Recent Buyers.

Maurice Bowers is the buyer of the Misquelan, a six-story apartment, at 206 to 210 West Ninety-ninth Street, reported sold in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sunday, Nov. 22.

In part payment the buyer gave Isaac Polstein 163 West Forty-third Street, an old three-story dwelling, which had previously been sold for about $82,500.

East Side Moving Picture Theatre.

Plans are being prepared for a new six-hundred seat moving picture theatre at 238 and 240 East Third Street, on a plot 50 by 100. The structure will cost $10,000.

Mortgage Loan Placed.

Eugene J. Busher has placed a first mortgage loan of $11,000 at 5½ per cent. for three years, on the vacant plot 100 by 200 by 100, running through from Valentine to Ryer Avenue, 210 feet north of 183d Street, to Hugh D. Smith.

St. Nicholas Avenue Apartment.

The only building plan filed yesterday in Manhattan was for a six-story flat with stores, on the southwest corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 186th Street. The plot is 100 by 90, and the cost, as estimated by the architect, S. Soshensky, will be $100,000. The owners and builders are the Aldus Construction Company. No plans were filed in the Bronx.

Private Dwellings Leased.

The Clark Estates have leased for a term of years and sublet 32 West Seventy-fourth Street to John W. Masury.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Frances C. Ryder to J. N. Rosenberg the four-story and basement house, 20.2 by 100 feet, at 449 West End Avenue, between Eighty-first and Eighty-second Streets.

A Varied Auction Offering.

Joseph P. Day will offer at public auction in the Vesey Street Salesroom at noon to-day a miscellaneous collection of private dwellings, tenements, business buildings and unimproved property in almost every section of the city, and one parcel in Portchester. The principal offering is one involving 25 West Thirtieth Street, between Broadway and Fifth Avenue, a four-story brownstone front building, with stores, on a lot 20 by 98.9 feet.

Commercial Leases.

The McVickar-Gaillard Realty Company has leased the southerly store at 543 Fifth Avenue to the Keep Shirt Company for a term of years.

Sidney L. Warsawer has leased for a term of twenty-one years the four-story and basement building on a lot 25 by 110 feet at 218 West Thirty-seventh Street to Columbia Transfer Company, who will occupy same after extensive alterations.

The Lewis H. May Company has leased for the S. & L. Construction Company, the hotel and casino under construction, adjoining the railroad station on Easton Avenue, Arverne, L. I., to E. Spierman for a term of years.

Joseph F. Feist has leased the store and basement at 565 Ninth Avenue, for a term of years.

The Cross & Brown Company has leased for the American Locomotive Company to Peter J. Fischer the entire building 243-245 West Sixty-fourth Street; and for Klein & Jackson to the R. I. V. Company the store at the southwest corner of Broadway and Fifty-seventh Street.

TIMES SQ. STATION NOW BEFORE BOARD

Plans to Care for Dual Subway Traffic Offered by Broadway Association's Engineer.

ANSWERS TO OBJECTIONS

Commission's Engineers Working on Plans Which Would Divide Two Express Stations.

The Times Square problem was taken up yesterday by the Public Service Commission for final study and determination. It had before it the suggestions of its own engineers, which have met with great opposition from a number of the residents, business men and property owners of the neighborhood, and also the proposals of the Broadway Association and the Forty-second Street Subway Association, as reduced to the form of a plan by Henry G. Opdycke, consulting engineer of the former body.

The point of issue is one of great importance to the city at large, as well as to those who have their places of business in Times Square, as the traffic returns of the present Subway show that there is no point now served by a local station which has anything like as many passengers starting from it as Times Square. Moreover, at Broadway and Forty-second Street the two great new rapid transit systems come closest to each other, and a natural point of transfer is formed. On the decision now taken by the commission as to the arrangement of stations at this point depends the convenience of travel of a large section of the population of the city for as long as the subway system lasts.

The view put forward by Mr. Opdycke was that the commission should recognize frankly that there would be daily a great stream of traffic to and from the southern end of Times Square, and that in order to avoid the congestion on the streets above the subway lines and in order to facilitate in the highest degree the operation of trains, the express stations on both the Interborough and the B. R. T. should be located as near as possible to Forty-second Street and should be connected by sub-grade passages. Moreover, he suggested to the commission that in order to provide the traveling public with the most convenient means of reaching their destinations a great underground concourse should be provided under Times Square.

This plan differs materially from that on which the engineering force of the commission has been working, although no final decision has yet been reached by the Commissioners. The tentative list of stations for the B. R. T. Broadway line it was proposed that the B. R. T. should have only a local station at Forty-second Street, and that even this should not serve Times Square directly. It would run down Broadway from the southern line of Forty-second Street as far as Fortieth Street, and all those who came from Brooklyn by this line, in order to reach all the hotels, theatres, and office buildings at the southern end of Times Square would be forced to come to the street level, and would thereby add to the already congested traffic.

The express station suggested by the tentative B. R. T. plan would be at the northern end of Times Square centring at Forty-eighth Street and stretching from Forty-seventh to Forty-ninth Street.

Mr. Opdycke explained yesterday fully to the Commissioners his alternative, laying stress on the great advantage it possessed in practically duplicating Broadway and Seventh Avenue below grade at the point where today it is most difficult to get along the streets. Since the Interborough express station in Seventh Avenue will reach as far south as Fortieth Street, and the B. R. T. would have, according to his ideas, an express station under Broadway from Forty-second to Forty-fourth Street, with a connection between the two stations through the Times building, it would be impossible, Mr. Opdyck pointed out, for a passenger to go from the Metropolitan Opera House to the Criterion Theatre without ascending to the street level.

Moreover, as the mezzanine over the Brooklyn Rapid Transit station would be extended to the west until it met the wall of the Interborough's new subway in Seventh Avenue, one of the most dangerous crossings of the city would be escaped by thousands of persons every day. The subway passengers as they left their trains would be distributed easily in the underground concourse as they are now at the terminus of the Hudson Tube in Greeley Square, and an abundance of entrances to the subway could be provided to the concourse so that it would be possible to reach either the Brooklyn Rapid Transit or the Interborough express trains from any part of the lower end of Times Square without crossing the streets.

Objection was raised by the engineers of the commission to Mr. Opdycke's plan on the ground that it would necessitate the construction of the B. R. T. express station on a curve, and that experience at the present Times Square Station had shown how awkward that was. Mr. Opdycke replied that there was all the difference in the world between the curve of the present station and the curve of that which he had designed. The radius of the curve of the present station is 400 feet; the radius of the station he had suggested would be 2,000 feet. That, he told the Commissioners, meant that, even if the B. R. T. ran cars with centre doors, like the present Interborough ones, the distance of those centre doors from the platform would be only one inch, a quite negligible matter.

Then it was objected that such a concentration of stations as Mr. Opdycke suggested would lead to great difficulty in handling the sewers, gas, and water pipes, and other subterranean structures. To this Mr. Opdycke answered that whatever station plan was followed, some very complicated problems would have to be solved. Moreover, recent experience had shown that the sewers, as they are to-day, are totally inadequate in the case of heavy storms, and that, whether the city wished it or not, it was forced to undertake a radical remodeling of its sewer system in this particular locality. So, while it was tackling such a difficult piece of work as lies ahead of it in Times Square, it might just as well consider the necessities of the traffic problem and fit the sewers and the other underground pipes to those.

Mr. Opdycke was able to tell the Commissioners that he had in support of his idea of a great central traffic exchange under the southern end of Times Square many of the principal property owners and business men of the neighborhood. One of those who has urged this idea on the commission is F. A. Muschenheim of the Hotel Astor.

"As far as my personal interests are concerned," he said last night, "it makes no difference to me whether the B. R. T. express station is to the north or the south end of Times Square, but as a citizen it appears there can be no possible question as to which is the right arrangement. To handle the great traffic, which must come to this centre, it seems to me, can only be done by providing some such concourse as Mr. Opdycke has proposed. It will take people off the streets at the point where now the congestion is greatest, and will enable them to move quickly, safely, and with comfort in the direction they wish."

SHOPPERS SEE A SHOOTING.

Grocer Wounds a Bystander In Attacking Man He Finds with His Wife.

Late yesterday afternoon, when the street was thronged with shoppers, a small man with a revolver in his hand ran across Fifth Avenue at Fourteenth Street. He was pursuing another man and a woman, who, twenty feet ahead of him, were pushing those who barred their path to right and left in a frantic effort to escape. Then the man with the revolver fired twice at intervals of a few seconds. The shots threw the crowd into a panic, and traffic on the avenue was blocked by the stampede of those on the sidewalk to get out of range of the bullets. Mrs. Agnes Woodburn of 254 West Fifteenth Street, who with a friend had just come out of a store, sank to the ground with a bullet in her left leg.

Traffic Policeman Delehanty, on duty at Fifth Avenue and Fourteenth Street, sprang to the man's side as he took aim for a third shot, and, throwing him to the ground, took the revolver away from him. Detective Finn of the Mercer Street Police Station, who was near by when the shots were fired, ran after the man and woman for whom the shots were intended. The detective caught the man after a chase of three blocks, down Fifth Avenue, across Thirteenth Street, and along University Place. A man who had seen the shooting, and who had followed the detective, handed him a revolver, which he said the prisoner had thrown away in his flight.

The police obtained the names of several persons who had seen the shots fired, among them James Leopold, a banker, of 357 West Eighty-fourth Street, and Mrs. Leopold. Their automobile was blocked in the crush at the crossing. After the excitement was over Mrs. Leopold shook hands with Policeman Delehanty.

"They can't criticise the bravery of the New York police now," she told him.

Mr. Leopold said that he would go to Police Headquarters to-day to tell Commissioner Waldo of the bravery shown by Delehanty and Detective Flynn.

The police said it was surprising that only one person was wounded by the shots. Mrs. Woodburn was attended by a surgeon from the New York Hospital and was then taken to her home in an ambulance. Her wound was not serious, but she was suffering from shock.

The accounts given by the prisoners to the police of the circumstances that led up to the shooting did not agree. Joseph Mazza, 29 years old, a grocer, of 130 Beach Street, Red Bank, N. J., was the man who fired the shots. He said that his wife had been enticed from her home by Joseph Romeo, the other prisoner, who lived at 422 West Fourteenth Street, Manhattan. Romeo, he said, was a laborer. He had $187 in his pocket.

Mazza said he had filed a complaint against Romeo with the chief of Police Wines of Red Bank. He had followed Romeo and his wife to this city, he said, and after a search of several days, met them in Fifth Avenue at Fourteenth Street at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He said he denounced Romeo for stealing his wife, and that Romeo drew a revolver. Mazza said that he shot in self-defense.

Romeo said that he was running away from Mazza when the shots were fired, and that he did not threaten the grocer. He said that he had known Mrs. Mazza for several years. Mrs. Mazza defended Romeo, and said that she had been forced by her husband's cruelty to run away from him. Mazza was held for carrying a revolver and for attempted felonious assault, and Romeo for carrying a revolver. Assistant District Attorney Reynolds will investigate the charge by Mazza that Romeo has violated the Mann white slave law.

ACTORS TO MAKE TAX TEST.

Shuberts' Right to Hold Out 1 Per Cent. Disputed by Henry Mortimer.

The newly formed Actors' Equity Association, an organization of which Francis Wilson is President, is to test the right of theatrical managers to hold out any part of an actor's salary to meet the requirements of the income tax. The matter was called to the attention of the association by Henry Mortimer, a member.

Mr. Mortimer, who has been in several plays produced by the Shuberts this season, was in the cast of a one-act play, "Fancy Free," at the Forty-fourth Street Music Hall last week under the direction of the same firm. When his salary was offered on Sunday night he was informed that 1 per cent. of his week's pay of $150 had been taken out to hold for the income tax. Mr. Mortimer refused to accept the money offered him, and yesterday made a demand upon Lee Shubert for his full salary. He was informed that the Shuberts' attorney had advised the firm that it should hold out 1 per cent. of every actor's salary where that actor was likely to earn more than $3,000 a year under the provisions of the income tax law. Mr. Mortimer and Mr. Shubert had some hot words over the matter, and the actor laid the matter before his attorney and also before the Actors' Equity Association, which will take action at once.

At the Shubert offices last night it was said that in all cases where a Shubert employe seemed likely to earn more than $3,000 in a year the 1 per cent was being taken out and that where it was necessary the money would be returned to the employe if it should not be due to the Government.

FIND MOTHERS MAKE THE BEST TEACHERS

Dr. Wile Says Twelve States Prefer Them to Spinsters Because of Their Experience.

PROTEST MEETING HELD

Noted Speakers Denounce Attitude of the Board of Education—Barnard Students Serve as Ushers.

Eight hundred men and women attended at Cooper Union last night a meeting held under the auspices of the League for the Civic Service of Women to protest against the action of the Board of Education in dismissing from the public schools married women teachers who have become mothers. Magistrate Freschi presided and a delegation of students from Barnard College, under the leadership of Miss Freda Kirchwey, daughter of Dean Kirchwey of the Columbia University Law School, were ushers. Among the speakers were Dr. Ira S. Wile of the Board of Education, who has championed the married teachers; Mrs. James Lee Laidlaw, Norman Hapgood, Dr. James P. Warbasse, the Rev. Waldo Adams Amos, Edwin Slosson, and Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, President of the League for the Civic Service of Women.

Dr. Wile asserted that the sole test for teachers in the public schools should be efficiency. He decried the attitude of those members of the Board of Education who insisted that a married teacher should resign.

"The schools," said Dr. Wile, "do not constitute an employment agency. It is unfair to the pupils to insist that a competent teacher with a splendid record who has become a mother should make way for an inexperienced girl with no knowledge of the great problems of life and with no experience of its fundamental obligations."

Dr. Wile said that a canvass of the Boards of Education in those States where married teachers were allowed to retain their places had resulted in replies showing that eighteen out of twenty were in favor of the married teachers. In only twelve States, he said, were mother teachers employed in the schools, and in such States it had been found that the great experience of maternity, with its broadening influence upon a woman's natural sympathies, made her an even more desirable teacher for children than a spinster.

Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw told the audience that the fight for the mother teachers had not been won with the decision of Justice Seabury against the action taken by the Board of Education. She read newspaper editorials in which the writers deplored the fact that under the existing law Justice Seabury's decision was sound and advocating a change in the laws affecting the teachers. She warned her hearers that Justice Seabury's opinion might be reversed by the higher courts, which, she asserted, "are not so progressive in their views as Justice Seabury."

Norman Hapgood said that the feminist movement was a revolt against the mediaeval estimate of womanhood which regarded woman as an inferior being and condemned her to household labor, mental tastes, and child-bearing. Dr. Warbasse condemned what he called the social hypocrisy which regarded child-bearing as something to be ashamed of and avoided.

Edwin Slosson said that the New York teachers were not fighting for a strange principle. He explained that in Sweden the married teacher was regarded highly, and obtained a leave of absence with pay while bearing a child. The same rule applied, he said, in France and Great Britain.

Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale said that the League for the Civic Service of Women was the most radical organization in the feminist movement today. The cause of woman suffrage, she said, was almost a conservative one compared to it.

MRS. BISHOP HESITATES.

Divorce Decree Will Be Vacated Unless She Decides.

Mrs. Abigail Hancock Bishop will have to decide within the next ten days whether she wants her interlocutory decree of divorce made final or whether she wants it vacated. She procured the interlocutory decree last May from her husband, James Cunningham Bishop, of the banking firm of Redmond & Co., and got with it alimony at the rate of $20,000 a year.

There the matter rested until Mr. Bishop applied through his attorney, Henry W. Taft, to the courts to find out whether he was to consider himself a single or a married man. The alimony was cut down to $10,000, with $2,500 for each of the two children who remained with the wife.

Yesterday Justice Giegerich declared that the decree would be vacated in ten days unless an application is made to make it permanent. If this is not done the couple may decide to live together again.

BROOKS AS POLICE HEAD.

Friends of ex-Inspector Petition Mitchel to Appoint Him.

Petitions are being circulated for the signatures of those who wish to urge Mayor-elect Mitchel to name as Police Commissioner ex-Inspector Nicholas Brooks, who was retired from the force six years ago by Commissioner Bingham. Brooks served thirty-five years on the force, and is now head of the criminal investigating department of Dunn & Jewsson at 150 Nassau Street.

Mr. Brooks lives at 341 West 121st Street. During all his service in the Police Department no charge was ever made against him, it is said by his friends.

University Club, Born in September.

Drooped brim Derbies found their birthplace at Truly Warner Stores.

We told Mr. Goodresser back in September that the University Club, our new drooped brim Derby, was the smartest Derby style of the season.

The $5.00 hatters are now beginning to show drooped brim Derbies. Of course that does not make them any better nor any worse, but it simply goes to prove that whenever Mr. Goodresser wants the smartest Hat at least three months in advance, he will find it at Truly Warner Stores, and the price will only be $2.00.

4 KILLED, 5 HURT, AS AUTOS COLLIDE

Assemblyman T. F. Denney, L. Kohn and Two Women Dead in the Wreckage of One Car.

RUN INTO BY W. L. MORRIS

All in His Party Seriously Injured as Gray Racer Smashed Head-On Into Limousine.

HIT ON PELHAM PARKWAY

Merrymakers in Inn Startled by the Crash—One of Dead Women May Be a Relative of Denney.

A head-on collision between two high-powered automobiles running at full speed on Pelham Parkway shortly before midnight last night killed four persons in one car and seriously injured five others, four of whom may die.

Leonard Kohn, President of the Rex Novelty Company of 2 West Thirty-fifth Street and living at 116 Madison Avenue, was killed in his own car, a heavy limousine, which was running north on the parkway between Eastchester and Williamsbridge Roads.

Assemblyman Thomas F. Denney of the Nineteenth Assembly District, a Democratic member of the last Legislature, who was defeated for re-election, was also killed in the Kohn car. Two handsomely gowned and unidentified women, one of whom wore a signet ring marked "F. A. D.," and who is supposed to be a relative of Denney's, were in the Kohn car and were killed.

In the low gray touring car which collided with Kohn's limousine was a woman later identified as Stella Nelson of 145 West Sixty-sixth Street. The collision occurred almost directly before the Knickerbocker Inn.

The dead:

KOHN, LEONARD, head of the Rex Specialty Company of 2 West Thirty-fifth Street.
DENNEY, THOMAS F., Assemblyman from the Nineteenth District.
TWO FASHIONABLY GOWNED WOMEN, neither apparently more than 28 years old; one wearing a signet ring bearing the letters F. A. D.

The injured are:

MORRIS, W. L., lawyer, 2 Rector Street.
MAHONEY, JEREMIAH, 135 East Thirty-first Street, chauffeur for Mr. Morris.
RICH, BERTRAND, 216 West 100th Street.
ROGERS, RICHARD, colored chauffeur to Mr. Kohn.
NELSON, STELLA, 25 years old, of 145 West Sixty-sixth Street; skull fractured and injured internally.

As nearly as could be learned from persons whose attention was attracted by the heavy crash of the two motor cars, the machine in which the four people were killed, a high-powered limousine car, was proceeding north on Pelham Parkway toward Hunters Island, when a high-power low gray car shot out from the southbound traffic in an effort to pass the automobile ahead.

All in Kohn Party Killed.

When the two cars hit, the limousine body of the northbound car, which was owned by Leonard Kohn, was reduced to splinters. Its top was torn off and the occupants, according to some witnesses, were thrown twenty to thirty feet away.

Employes of the Knickerbocker Inn sent in a hurry call for ambulances, and three from the Fordham Hospital with Drs. McSweeney, Ahern, and Delevan responded. They found the four members of the Kohn party dead. Richard Rogers, the Kohn chauffeur, was badly cut and appeared to have broken ribs and internal injuries. Before he lapsed into unconsciousness he said that Kohn's male companion was Assemblyman Denney, but could give no other information than that he was an old friend. He lost consciousness while trying to tell who the women were. They wore expensive clothing and valuable jewelry.

The low gray car was owned by W. L. Morris and was driven by Jeremiah Mahoney who lived with Morris at 135 East Thirty-first Street. Mahoney was unconscious when picked up. The young woman who was riding in the Morris car was rushed to the hospital in a private touring car before the ambulance arrived.

Shock Startled Merrymakers.

Fragments of the wrecked cars were scattered all over the roadway before the Knickerbocker Inn. The upper parts of both cars were masses of useless junk. The bodies of the four dead victims in the Kohn car—Kohn, Denney, and the two unidentified women—were picked up in the roadway some little distance back of the car with pieces of wreckage all about them.

Among the first on the scene was Mounted Patrolman Dennis McCarthy of the Westchester Police Station, who heard the crash while two blocks away and galloped up to the scene. The accident attracted a large crowd. The Knickerbocker Inn was crowded with merrymakers when the collision occurred.

At the hospital the woman who was injured in the Morris car recovered consciousness long enough to say that she was Stella Nelson of 145 West Sixty-sixth Street. She relapsed into unconsciousness crying "Bert! Bert! Where is my Bert?" Another of the occupants of the Morris car who was taken to the hospital unconscious was identified as Bertrand Rich.

By order of Coroner Shongut, given over the telephone, the bodies of the dead were kept at the scene of the accident until he should arrive, when he said he would order their removal to the Fordham Morgue. The police could find no clue to the identification of the women killed in the Kohn car.

The hospital received a telephone message that Dr. McSweeney had been compelled to go to the Westchester Police Station because of some complaint by an automobilist. What the complaint was could not be learned at the hospital.

The hospital staff was kept so busy

SCHWAB AFRAID OF TARIFF.

Says Country Faces Worst Depression—But He Hopes for the Best.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 25.—The new Democratic tariff has brought the country face to face with the worst depression it has ever known, according to Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company, who eulogized Andrew Carnegie this afternoon when the Carnegie Institute of Technology celebrated the Ironmaster's seventy-eighth birthday. In an interview, he said:

"This country faces the most serious depression it has ever known—a condition effected by the new tariff. Under the new tariff cost of transportation of steel, for instance, is affected in this manner—that the rate between Bethlehem, Penn., and New York is as great as that between Rotterdam and New York.

"It was true, when Andrew Carnegie said it, that the cost of steel production in this country was so much cheaper here that we could compete with the world and win, but conditions have changed. Patents which were held in this country have run out and are in operation abroad. Methods of production have so advanced in other countries that the cost of making steel has become just about standardized all over the world. And with cheaper transportation under the new tariff other countries can more than successfully compete with us in many lines.

"It is proposed to reduce the cost of living. But what is the use of reducing the cost of living when a laboring man has no job and can earn no money with which to buy the necessities?

"I am not pessimistic. I believe that we will come out all right in the end. This depression comes at a time when the steel business is almost at the height of prosperity, and imposes a condition with which steel men do not agree, but everybody will make the best of it."

DEMAND ANTIQUE EGGS.

Flatbush Wives to Punish Husbands for Spoiling Boycott Plans.

Because their husbands are giving support and encouragement to the enemy, the housewives of Flatbush have been forced to abandon, for a time at least, their planned egg boycott. The women had thought to bring the dealers to terms by refusing to buy eggs until the prices were lowered. They naturally supposed that their husbands would be with them in the fight.

But yesterday is was revealed at a meeting of the Flatbush branch of the Women's Municipal League, held at 785 Flatbush Avenue, that the men were selfishly standing in with the foe by insisting upon having eggs as usual, and at any price, for breakfast.

"Oh, there is more than one way to kill a cat," remarked one woman grimly, at the close of the meeting.

Flatbush grocers were astonished last night at the demand from housewives for eggs of guaranteed antiquity.

WIRELESS NEWS TO TRAIN.

Passengers on Lackawanna Flier Get Bulletins Sent from Scranton.

Special to The New York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., Nov. 25.—For the first time on record, news bulletins taken by wireless were displayed on a moving train to-day. Passengers on No. 3 on the Lackawanna Railroad were astonished to see the latest foreign and home dispatches spread before their eyes as they were being whirled along at sixty miles an hour between this city and Binghamton.

The Scranton Times sent 250 words from the Lackawanna wireless station to the moving train. One was on the battle in Mexico, another regarding the strike in Schenectady, another relating to the dilemma in Washington with respect to landing marines in Mexico.

When the train left Hoboken the wireless apparatus was somewhat disabled, as a generator had burned out. The operator, however, was able to take dispatches and give the passengers a news service unique in history.

"To think we didn't have it for the world's series," mourned an excited Chicago man.

GERMAN HITS JOHNSON.

Riotous Scenes in Paris at Wrestling Match Which Negro Wins.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—There were riotous scenes at the Nouveau Cirque to-night, when Jack Johnson met the German. Urbach, in a wrestling match in the catch-as-catch-can style, throwing the German twice.

Urbach objected to a hostile demonstration from the crowd owing to his unfair methods. After the second bout he struck Johnson in the face. Johnson laughed and did not retaliate.

The police cleared the theatre and made several arrests.

BEACHEY LOOPS THE LOOP.

Biplane Fitted with Upright Motor, Too, Upsetting Expert Theories.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 25.—Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, looped the loop twice in the air above North Island late to-day. Starting at a height of 2,500 feet, he dropped straight downward into the first loop and immediately turned over again into the second, landing afterward. At no time, seemingly, was there any loss of control. Beachey said he would repeat the performance Thursday.

Beachey's feat of looping the loop with a biplane fitted with an upright motor upset the theory of experts, who had asserted that nothing but a revolving motor, such as the Frenchman Pegoud used, could carry an aeroplane over the top of the loop. Beachey said the loop was much easier of achievement than flying upside down. He made several upside-down flights at North Island.

SEIZE CLERK FOR $500,000 THEFT

Farmers' Loan and Trust Co.'s Former Employe Arrested—Had $102,000 in Loot.

SOLD BOOTY WHOLESALE

Union Pacific and General Electric Bonds and Stocks Carried to Philadelphia.

LONG NIGHT CONFERENCE

Bankers and Lawyers Discuss the Robbery — Prisoner Had Waldorf Room.

That from the vaults of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of 22 William Street there had been stolen $500,000 in bonds and stocks became known last evening when James E. Foye, until recently a clerk in the banking firm's employ, was arrested as he stepped from a train arriving from Philadelphia at the Pennsylvania Terminal. It is said that the robbery includes many stock certificates of the General Electric Company, of which the Trust Company is transfer agent.

Early reports had it that the thefts amounted to $200,000, but early this morning detectives who were working on the case said that at least $500,000 in bonds and stocks had been stolen.

Few details of the thefts were made public by those interested. According to well authenticated reports, huge blocks of Union Pacific Railroad Company and General Electric Company stocks and bonds were abstracted from the trust company's vaults. It is also said that stock certificates were forged.

A conference of bankers and detectives was held last night at the office of Graham & L'Amoreaux, lawyers at 42 Broadway. The conference remained in session until an early hour this morning. It was attended by lawyers, bankers, and detectives, and the case was discussed from every angle. It was apparent that the magnitude of the robbery had not been exaggerated.

At an early hour this morning the detectives announced that in all loot to the value of $208,000 had been recovered. This included the amount found on the clerk when he was arrested. The detectives said they were on tracy of $40,000 more

At the time of his arrest Foye was accused of being a fugitive from justice. He was locked up in the Greenwich Street Station. Foye said that he was 35 years old, and lived at 17 East Thirty-third Street.

In Foye's pocket at the time of his arrest was a certified check for $97,000 and more than $5,000 in cash, which, it is alleged by the police, he received from the sale of the stolen stocks and bonds to the firm of Charles T. Brown Company, bond brokers, of Philadelphia. The sum of $100,000 in cash, which, it is alleged by the police, he also received during the last week from the Charles T. Brown Company, was not found.

Foye, it is said, was on his way to Europe at the time of his arrest. He formerly was employed by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company as a $75 a month clerk, and it was after he left the employ of the bank three months ago, according to the police, that it became known that the stocks and bonds were stolen. The exact value of the stolen stocks and bonds could not be learned definitely last night, but it is said to be very large. It is understood that Philadelphia and New York bankers affected by the theft met last night to discuss the best way of handling the matter.

The theft had been kept secret, but Pinkerton detectives have for some time been watching for the stolen bonds to appear on the market. Banks were notified secretly to watch for the bonds, and yesterday when a repersentative of Charles T. Brown Company, brokers, deposited some of the bonds and stock with a Philadelphia bank, they received the first clue. The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company was notified. Its officers communicated with the Charles T. Brown Company and learned that the bonds had been sold by Foye, who formerly had been employed by them. It was said that Foye was on his way to New York, and every train arriving at the Pennsylvania Terminal was watched. He arrived at 6:30 o'clock, and as he stepped from the train, carrying a suit case and smoking a cigar, he was placed under arrest by Detectives Slevin and Reynolds of the Central Office and several Pinkerton detectives.

Had Check for $97,000.

"All right," he said, as he was placed under arrest, "I'll go along."

At the Greenwich Station he was searched and in his waistcoat pocket was found a certified check made out in his favor and signed by the Charles T. Brown Company for $97,000. He also had $5,220 in cash. Steamship circulars for Atlantic lines were found in his pocket. The police believe that he was about to sail for Europe. After being arraigned before the Lieutenant in the station, he was taken in hand by the Pinkerton detectives and questioned.

According to the police, Foye started to negotiate the sale of the bonds to the Charles T. Brown Company about two weeks ago. He sold through them several hundred shares of Union Pacific and General Electric stock, the police say. In all, it is said, he has received $100,000 for the stocks and bonds which he sold in the last two weeks.

He went yesterday, it was said, to the office of the Charles T. Brown Company, and told them he wanted to sell a large amount of General Electric stock. He gave the brokers 100 shares of General Electric stock and some other stocks, and they gave him a check for $97,000, which closed their account with him. He had the check certified. Soon after this the

MISS WILSON BRIDE OF FRANCIS B. SAYRE

Promise to Obey Her Husband Made Part of the Marriage Service at Her Request.

THRONGS AT WHITE HOUSE

Ceremony in East Room Witnessed by a Brilliant Gathering—Place of Honeymoon Secret.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—For the fifth time in White House history a daughter of a President of the United States became to-day a bride in that historic mansion, the ceremony taking place in the East Room with all the pomp and circumstance inseparable from such an occasion in the family of the Chief Executive. As Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, second daughter of the President and Mrs. Wilson, and the bridegroom, Francis Bowes Sayre, stood at the improvised altar the scene was both beautiful and impressive. Near them were the President and his wife, while grouped around were dignitaries of this and other nations, many of them attired in the gorgeous uniforms of their respective ranks. The ceremony was performed at 4:35 o'clock.

All Nations Represented.

Ambassadors and Ministers, some having titles of nobility and knighthood, representing all the nations of Europe and of the Orient, stood with their confrères of the diplomatic body from the republics of both hemispheres. The envoys were in court dress of striking colors, decorated with much gold or silver lace. There also were the Chief Justice of the United States and his associates of the supreme tribunal. Members of the President's Cabinet, other high officials of the legislative and executive branches of the Government, and officers of the army and navy were in the distinguished company. Nearly all those well-known men were accompanied by their wives or daughters.

Conspicuous by their absence, so to speak, were Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, who have been visiting Mrs. Marshall's relatives in Arizona. Close friends of the Vice President confidently expected him to arrive here several days ago, and when the news came last night that he would not get here until Friday or Saturday surprise was expressed, and it was re-echoed to-day.

For Miss Jessie Wilson and Mr. Sayre, the most important part of the company consisted of the comparatively small group of relatives and intimates standing nearest the improvised chancel, and the members of their bridal party. The latter consisted of five maids, four ushers and a best man, all friends of the bride or bridegroom. So far as these two young people were concerned their marriage might have taken place at Cornish, N. H., or Princeton, N. J., without subtracting in the least from the sum total of their happiness.

An Ideal Wedding Day.

It was an ideal wedding day. There was no suggestion of bleak November in the bright sunshine and crisp air. Rather, it was like a day in early October, the most beautiful month of the year in the capital of the nation. When the sun rose this morning there were only fleecy clouds in the sky, and it was not until late in the afternoon as the time set for the ceremony approached that the heavens became lowering. But even in the period just preceding the November twilight Old Sol's rays beamed joyously and brilliantly.

Outside the White House seventy policemen had little to do in keeping at a distance the amiable and curious crowd that gathered in the hope of catching a glimpse of the bride. Within the mansion, from 4 o'clock until the moment of the ceremony half an hour later, the brand-new body of White House aids, young officers from the army, the navy, and the Marine Corps, acted as ushers to the arriving guests from the foot of the grand stairway to each guest's specially appointed place in the East Room.

These peaceful warriors, all in full dress uniform with side arms, were Col. W. W. Harts, U. S. A.; Lieut. Comdr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N.; Lieut. Richard S. Galloway, U. S. N.; Lieut. F. A. Todd, U. S. N.; Lieut. John J. London, U. S. N.; Lieut. Harold F. Wirgman, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. H. H. Clagett, U. S. A.; Lieut. Charles K. Bockwell, U. S. A.; Lieut. Beverley C. Dunn, U. S. A.; Lieut. Joseph C. Mehaffey, U. S. A.; Lieut. Joseph P. Aleshire, Jr., U. S. A., and Lieut. James A. Dorst, U. S. A.

All the guests arrived in good season, some of them a half hour prior to the ceremony. Ten minutes before the nuptials were solemnized nearly the entire company of five hundred had gathered in the east room. A raised platform erected for the occasion, extending across the great east window, served as the chancel.

It was flanked on either side by huge clusters of white lilies placed in blue vases, presented to the United States Government years ago by the Republic of France. The only other floral decoration was a grouping of palms across the window recess with clusters of lilies tied to the double priedieu of white satin, where the bride and bridegroom knelt for the final blessing. Each of the large windows at the north and south ends of the room was filled with ferns and small foliage plants, while on each of the four mirror-rests were vases of bride roses.

Aisle Formed by Satin Rope.

A satin rope marked off the central portion of the room for a broad aisle through which the bridal party passed. It also divided the south section of the apartment to distinguish the places reserved for the official guests and members of the Sayre and Wilson families not included in the house party. The north end of the room was reserved for the non-official guests from out of town and the girl friends of the bride.

All three entrances were used. The friends and relatives of the non-official world came through the long corridor of the ground floor, which, for this occasion, was lined with dwarf palms and delicate ferns. The members of the diplomatic corps, who were provided with tickets for the southwest gate, entered at once into the large dressing

MORE THAN $500,000 PAID FOR A RAPHAEL

The Duveens Give Record Price for Cowper "Madonna"—Is Coming to United States.

LAST THAT CAN BE BOUGHT

The Other Works by Raphael Still in Private Hands Are Destined for Public Collections.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Duveens have purchased from Lord Desborough the celebrated Cowper "Madonna and Child," by Raphael. The picture was the chief treasure of the late Earl Cowper's collection at Panshanger, Hertfordshire.

The picture will be shipped to America in the next few days for sale. No purchaser is especially in sight.

One of the conditions under which the picture was sold was that it should first be offered to the British Nation. It was offered to the National Gallery a month ago at the purchase price; but, with its small annual grant, the gallery was unable to buy it.

The national art authorities made a strenuous effort to raise the purchase money for the "Madonna," working silently, so that the negotiations should not become publicly known. When the time limit expired the Duveens extended the period, but it was still impossible to collect the money.

There was for long a tacit understanding, amounting almost to a family tradition, in the Cowper family that if the picture were ever disposed of the first refusal should be given to the nation.

Dealers have long desired to buy this famous picture. The Cowper family were approached for years, but the late Countess Cowper declared that while she was alive she would not sell the panel.

The picture, which is on a panel two inches thick and measures 23 inches by 17, is, according to the opinion of experts, the last Raphael painted by the master's own hand that remains in private possession with the exception of Lady Mond's picture, which has already been bequeathed to the National Gallery, and Mrs. John L. Gardner's portrait of the Vatican Librarian Inghirami and her predella piece, which, it is believed, are to go to an American public museum.

That the "Small Cowper Madonna," painted in 1505 by Raphael and since 1835 the most prized painting in the famous Panshanger collection of the late Earl Cowper, has been sold to Duveen Brothers of New York, London, and Paris was announced yesterday in London. The report was verified in New York.

Lord Desborough, the nephew of the last Earl Cowper, who inherited the picture upon the death of the Earl's wife, Countess Cowper, last year, made the sale, and, according to authoritative information, received something over $500,000 for the picture.

The picture has been described as one of the most valuable in the world. Many collectors who tried to buy it before it fell into the hands of Lord Desborough found it literally "priceless."

Louis Duveen, a member of the firm, had been in London for some time negotiating for the purchase of the picture. The correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES in London was the first to learn of the sale, and, while the purchasers would not discuss it, the fact was verified. It was further learned that Duveen Brothers have made the purchase for themselves, and not as agents for any one in England or America.

Although the price actually paid for the picture could not be learned yesterday, it was said on good authority that the largest sum ever paid for a painting had been given to Lord Desborough for his "Madonna." This would make the price something over half a million dollars if the report that P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia paid that amount for Rembrandt's "Mill" in 1911 is correct, and it has never been denied and is generally believed.

The Cowper "Madonna" is said to be the most valuable and important painting in private hands in England, and, if it comes to America it will, of course, hold that distinction here. That it will come to America seems certain, since the National Gallery, in London, has been unable to exercise the option of purchase granted to it at the price paid by the Duveens. It is possible, however, that an attempt may be made to raise the purchase price in England by subscription. If this subscription is not raised in two weeks, however, the "Madonna" will be seen shortly afterward in Fifth Avenue.

The "Small Cowper Madonna" is classed as of the same period with three other famous Raphaels, including the "St. Catherine" in the National Gallery, London, and the "Belle Jardinière" in the Louvre, Paris.

Little is known of the history of the painting until the great-grandfather of the last Earl Cowper made his famous Panshanger collection in 1835 while British Envoy at Florence. The "Madonna" was purchased by Lord Cowper with many other paintings by Italian masters and taken to his estate of Panshanger, Hertfordshire. The collection soon became known as one of the most valuable in existence.

When the last Earl Cowper died in 1905 the collection became the property of Countess Cowper, his widow. Throughout her life she valued it as the most priceless of her possessions and vowed that none of the paintings in it should be sold while she lived. She died about a year ago, and the "Madonna," with many other pictures of the collection, was bequeathed to Earl Cowper's nephew, Lord Desborough.

The last time the picture was exhibited publicly was in 1910, when it formed part of the National Loan Exhibition at the Grafton Galleries, London. The catalogue description of it at that time was:

Trains of Wounded Pouring Into Juarez — Hotels Turned Into Hospitals.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 25.—Gen. Francisco Villa, the commander of the rebel forces, to-night sent the following telegram to Col. Juan N. Medina, his chief of staff in Juarez:

"I communicate with satisfaction that we have completely routed the enemy. We took all his artillery and three trains. The Federals are in full and disgraceful retreat."

After twenty-four hours of the fiercest fighting of the insurrection on the open plain along the Mexican National Railway, fourteen miles south of the border, Pancho Villa's Constitutionalist forces have successfully maintained their positions, effectually blocking the Federal advance on Juarez. Whether the Federals have retreated beyond Samalayuca is unknown here. No news comes from their commanders. That Villa stands firm at Mesa is indicated by an order he sent at nightfall to rush another train to the battlefield to transport the wounded. Wounded men who arrived on a train which came into Juarez at the same hour said that the Federals had drawn off to the south.

Other reports which cheered the Constitutionalists in Juarez, emanating from Gen. Villa's headquarters in that city, were that the Federal forces were about to be caught between two forces of rebels; that 2,000 Sonora rebels were making for the rear of the Federals, and should be able to begin a flank attack by to-morrow, and that Gen. Manuel Chao's rebel command, moving from the region to the south of Chihuahua, had skirted Chihuahua City, advancing upon the rear of the Federals, and had already taken possession of the Federal lines of communication and transportation to Chihuahua City.

Battle Begins at Daybreak.

The battle south of Juarez was marked by an almost incessant artillery fire from daybreak until night. All the Federal attempts at flanking were repulsed. Cannon of all sizes were used with terrible effect by both armies. Dead and wonded men and horses are strewn over an area of several miles. Hospitals and hotels in Juarez are filled with wounded awaiting permission from the Washington Government to come to El Paso for treatment. A reply to the request of Juan N. Medina, Villa's chief of staff in Juarez, for aid from the local Red Cross, forwarded to Charles L. Magee, Secretary of the American Red Cross Society, is awaited by local physicians and nurses, who are ready to go to Juarez and bring the wounded to El Paso hospitals and to Fort Bliss.

A wounded rebel officer, brought to Juarez for medical treatment on a Red Cross train this afternoon, is authority for the statement that a number of Salazar's Federal volunteers, captured in the fighting before Zarabosa this morning, were brought before Gen. Villa, who ordered them executed in the field. The order was carried out at once.

The officer telling the story did not know how many men were executed under the order, but said he thought there were thirty or forty of them.

The men had been cut off from the main body, and were taken after a desperate fight. So far as known only two Federal officers captured since the fighting began have been spared. The father of one of these was a Major in the rebel army, and on the appeal of the latter to Villa to spare the boy's life the rebel commander ordered his execution to be stayed.

Another pleaded that he had been impressed into the Federal service, which statement was corroborated by a number of Villa's officers, and he, too, received a new lease of life.

Many rebel soldiers are to-day wearing Federal uniforms and overcoats taken from prisoners who have been executed on the field. Prisoners are forced to strip before being shot in order that the clothing may not be perforated by the bullets.

El Paso people have listened all day to the heavy firing, fearful that the tide of battle might approach dangerously near, should the rebels fail to beat the enemy off. All the United States troops in this district are massed along the river front, as a precautionary measure. Major R. E. L. Michie, the commander, says. Medina has transmitted the assurances of his chief that there will be no fighting in the border town that will endager American lives or interests.

The exact result of the action about Zaragosa, where Gen. Ynez Salazar was reported to be surrounded by rebels and fighting an artillery duel, was still in doubt to-night.

The fighting, which began at 4:30 this morning, by 3 o'clock this afternoon had been waged over nearly twenty miles of desert, according to the reports. At 3 o'clock Federal shells were falling around a rebel hospital train moving toward Juarez, and Gen. Villa's forces seemed to be falling back upon Juarez.

In the morning news from the front Gen. Villa was credited with driving the Federals south to Samalayuca, thirty-two miles from Juarez, while a battle for the possession of the water supply at Rancho Flores was being waged twelve miles from Juarez.

More Federal Officers Executed.

There is likelihood of a renewal of fighting early to-morrow. The Federals are said to have numbered 7,000 when the engagement opened yesterday and may have been reinforced from Chihuahua City during the day. Rebel hospital and supply trains have run regularly between Juarez and the firing line in the midst of a rain of shells. Fresh cavalry, held at the border all day, is marching to reinforce Villa to-night at the front centre. Federal officers captured and promptly executed on the field by the rebels are said to have admitted that their forces were badly broken.

Reports are afloat that Villa is short of ammunition, but the utmost optimism prevails among his troopers.

Among the officers killed is Col. Porfirio Talamantes, who brought recruits to the Constitutionalists from Sonora several months ago. Col. José Rodriguez, a rebel, was injured, but rode around Juarez in a motor car this afternoon to show his people that he was not seriously hurt. The total number of rebel dead is estimated at 100. The Constitutionalists said 500 Federals were lying on the field.

Smuggling of ammunition for the rebels is reported to have been in progress for the last two nights at points down the Rio Grande.

Passports were demanded to-day from all Americans who appeared on the streets of Juarez. Street car traffic across the International Bridge was not stopped, but persons having no business in Juarez were hustled back to El Paso by rebel guards.

All the hotels in Juarez were cleared during the night by the rebels for use as hospitals.

A machine gun platoon and Troop C of the Thirteenth United States Cavalry, under Capt. John H. Lewis, were to-day reported en route from Columbus, N. M., to reinforce the border patrol. The machine gun platoon was to reinforce Troop D, Thirteenth Cavalry, at the International Bridge. Troop C being intended for the protection of the El Paso Foundry. Troop L, Thirteenth Cavalry, Capt. W. H. Clopton, en route from Nogria, N. M., is to be stationed at the El Paso Smelter.

Fierce Fighting Near Las Vacas.

DEL RIO, Tex., Nov. 25.—An indecisive battle marked by heavy losses on both sides was fought by Mexican Government troops from Piedras Negras and the Constitutionalist garrison at Las Vacas, Coahuila, five miles south of the latter town, to-day. A dozen or more of the Constitutionalist wounded were brought across to Del Rio to-night, leading to the belief that the rebels expect to evacuate Las Vacas.

Before the fighting began the Constitutionalists put the torch to all property in Las Vacas supposed to belong to Federal sympathizers.

The opposing forces numbered about 400 men each. Col. Alberto Guajuardo commanded the Federals, and Col. Rivas the Constitutionalists.

It was reported to-night that another Federal column from Piedras Negras was advancing up the Rio Grande.

FIFTY FEDERALS BLOWN UP.

Rebels Reported to Have Dynamited Another Troop Train.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 25.—Rebels have succeeded in dynamiting another troop train on the National Railway at Carneros, north of Vanegas, between San Luis Potosi and Saltillo.

About fifty Federals are said to have been killed.

REBELS TO SEIZE JALISCO.

Blanco Going South with 1,000 Men to be Military Governor.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Nov. 25.—Active preparation to extend the Constitutionalist campaign into South Central Mexico was indicated in an official announcement from rebel headquarters at Matamoras to-day.

According to this announcement, the command and staff of Gen. Lucio Blanco will leave Matamoras to-morrow to occupy the State of Jalisco More than 1,000 men, all mounted, will make the overland trip. Gen. Blanco, now with Gen. Carranza in Sonora for a conference, will join his men later to become military Governor of Jalisco.

Gen. Jesus Carranza, in Matamoras, and Gen. Pablo Gonzales, in Victoria, will remain in command of the State of Tamaulipas.

FINAL RUPTURE WITH HALE.

Carranza's Foreign Minister Leaves Nogales to Join His Chief.

MAGDALENA, Sonora, Nov. 25.—News that Francisco Escudero, Foreign Secretary in Gen. Carranza's Cabinet, had left Nogales to-day to join other members of the Cabinet here was taken as evidence of the ending of negotiations with President Wilson through Dr. William Bayard Hale. It was admitted that Escudero had remained at the international boundary to receive any further proposals the Washington Government might make.

Gen. Carranza has made no explanation of what caused the rupture at Nogales, but has promised to issue a formal explanation after he has conferred with Escudero.

Preparations for the Constitutionalists campaign along the west coast were begun to-day. Gen. Pablo Gonzalez reported that his troops had defeated a column of 2,000 Federals marching against Victoria, the capital of Tamaulipas, which was captured last week by the Constitutionalists. He said that in a fight at La Cruz yesterday quantities of artillery and supplies had been captured, and several Federal officers had been killed.

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 25.—Information reached here to-day through Americans coming from the neighborhood of La Dura and Las Colorado, Sonora, that Yaqui Indians had resumed their depredations in that region. Independent reports from various quarters say that Mexicans have been robbed and killed, among them workmen employed by American mining interests at San Xavier, south of Hermosillo.

Gen. Aguilar Gave Federal Garrison at Oil Port Until Midnight.

GERMAN CRUISER CALLED

Admiral Fletcher Summons the Bremen to Join Him at Threatened Point.

LIND SAILS WITH ADMIRAL

President's Representative Is to Decide Whether or Not to Land Marines.

HUERTA SENDING TROOPS

Also Disposing Forces About Capital for Fear of Possible American Attack.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 25.—The rebels under Gen. Aguilar have given the Federal garrison at Tuxpam until midnight to-night to surrender the town, failing which the place will probably be attacked.

The officials of the oil companies here have received no notice of this, but the news comes from semi-official sources.

Col. Garcia Lugo is expected to leave here to-morrow for the Huasteca district, around Tuxpam, to give protection to foreign interests there.

The rebels are reported to have given an ultimatum to the managers of the oil interests, which would practically mean the closing of their plants and the paralysis of the railways throughout Mexico for lack of fuel.

The rebels demand that the companies refuse to pay taxes to the Huerta Government and abstain from asking protection of the Federal authorities. They ask that the taxes be paid to them, as they are now the constituted Government, and also that the companies look to them for protection. Drastic action on the part of the rebels to enforce compliance with these demands is expected.

Rebels Not Welcoming Warships.

While the oil men here refuse to discuss the question, it is stated authoritatively that rebels have intimated that they looked unfavorably upon the presence of American warships at Tuxpam, which might give rise to complications.

It was asserted here to-day that the sending of American warships was due to the pressure brought to bear by Great Britain. This report caused much comment among Americans having properties which have been menaced and even destroyed by the rebels recently.

Much anxiety is felt here over the fighting near Juarez, as it is believed that much depends upon a Federal success there, and that there are great possibilities of international complications.

President Huerta is making preparations to concentrate troops at strategic points around the capital and throughout the country. This is being done quietly, and under various pretenses. Many believe that he is preparing for something more serious than a possible rebel attack.

GERMANS TO JOIN FLETCHER.

Cruiser Bremen Sails for Tuxpam—Lind to Decide on Landing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 25.—The German cruiser Bremen sailed for Tuxpam this afternoon in response to a wireless request from Admiral Fletcher. It is reported here that the message was sent in view of the probable necessity of taking drastic measures to preserve order in the oil district.

President Wilson sent specific orders to Rear Admiral Fletcher last night to take John Lind with him to Tampico and Tuxpam. Mr. Lind is, by these orders, empowered to decide whether marines shall be landed or not.

Gen. Maass, the Federal Commander of the district, says that the Government now controls all the territory surrounding Tuxpam, and that he cannot even imagine American marines landing. If they should do so, he says, it would be a decidedly unfriendly and even warlike act.

FLETCHER TO GUARD BRITISH.

His Visit to Tuxpam Emphasizes Anglo-American Harmony.

to Tuxpam, in the centre of the threatened oil fields, serves to emphasize pointedly the earnestness with which the United States is defending British rights in Mexico. It becomes now equally apparent that the British Government, though it has ordered two high-powered cruisers to the Mexican coast, places its chief reliance in the good offices of President Wilson's Administration.

It became definitely known to-day that Admiral Fletcher's hurried trip to Tuxpam was the result of at least an indirect appeal from Great Britain. Whether Sir William Tyrrell of the British Foreign Office, who is now visiting the indisposed British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, presented the request for protection more directly to the President when he called at the White House on Sunday evening, is still problematical.

From some source not yet revealed the British Consul at Tuxpam heard that the American warships there and at Tampico, under the command of Rear Admiral Boush, were planning to send marines ashore to prevent depredations. To the Consul such a course appeared unnecessary and likely to lead to grave complications. He at once wired his fears to Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister to Mexico, and through the Minister the report was carried to Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Chargé. Mr. O'Shaughnessy's dispatch to the State Department at once drew forth the statement that no landing was contemplated, while Admiral Fletcher was ordered to take his flagship to Tuxpam and inspect the situation in person. To-day it became known for the first time that John Lind, the President's personal representative who has been lingering in Vera Cruz since President Huerta's refusal to dissolve the new Congress, had asked and received permission to accompany Admiral Fletcher to the troubled district.

In the meantime, before Admiral Fletcher could reach Tuxpam, Capt. Spencer S. Wood, commanding the battleship Nebraska at Tampico, had sent an officer ashore to confer with Gen. Aguilar, the rebel commander. The officer was courteously received, and Gen. Aguilar repeated to him assurances, already conveyed to Admiral Boush, that foreign rights and property would be protected. The General said he had taken every precaution to prevent even the accidental firing of oil wells and tanks, and intended to do his best to avoid any ground for international complaint.

While there is official intimation here that Mr. Lind's trip to Tuxpam was at his own request and not on orders from Washington, his presence in the disturbed area adds to the importance attached here to the situation in the oil fields. It also emphasizes the fact, generally know already, that Mr. Lind was doing nothing at Vera Cruz, and that all conversations with the Huerta Government looking to a settlement satisfactory to the United State had been at least temporarily abandoned.

Every event of the past few days has struck an additional blow at the supposition that Sir Lionel Carden's indiscreet references to American policy in Mexico estranged the British and American Governments. On the other hand, it is made plain that the United States is determined to give no excuse to Great Britain or any other Government to repeat suggestions, made some time ago and subsequently withdrawn, that the powers of Europe would be pleased to see something done to protect their nationals in Mexico.

The hope here now is that the Powers, having consented to wait, will not again renew their suggestions for information or action without some obvious development in Mexico imperilling the lives and property of their citizens.

It is to prevent these developments that the Washington Government is now bending all its efforts. A waiting policy, as already announced in these dispatches, has been definitely decided on. The only activities at present are directed to satisfying foreign Governments so that full time may be allowed for this waiting policy to run its course.

A faint echo of the Mexican difficulty was heard in the Senate to-day when Mr. Sheppard of Texas introduced a joint resolution appropriating $25,000 for the preliminary survey of a military road from El Paso southward down the Rio Grande to its mouth near Brownsville. There is already a road along the river bank, but Mr. Sheppard explained that it was in such bad repair that military supplies could be moved only with difficulty.

CHESTER LANDS MADEROS.

Saved from Death, Evaristo Tells of Their Treatment by Huerta.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 25.—Evaristo Madero, Daniel Madero, Leandro Aguilar, Andres Aguila, Santos Mora, and Antonio De La Paz Guerra, the Mexican refugees arrived here to-day on the United States cruiser Chester and expressed their gratitude to the United States for their rescue from certain death, but all refused to discuss the political situation in Mexico beyond saying that they lamented, as all good Mexicans should, the deplorable conditions existing there. They would not criticise Huerta, other than by telling of their own mistreatment.

"We are expatriates from Mexico," said Evaristo Madero, "because we were seeking guarantees for our liberty and our lives, which were denied us in our country. Not one of us has taken any part in or allied himself in any way with the present political situation. We have all devoted ourselves solely to our industrial and commercial interests. Therefore there was no cause whatsoever for the indignities we have suffered in defiance of our constitutional guarantees.

"We were arrested on Oct. 20, when supposedly we were summoned by the military commander of Monterey, and were taken at midnight in a special train guarded by fifty soldiers as dangerous prisoners, to Tampico. There we were kept in the barracks until Oct. 25, when we were embarked for Vera Cruz and incarcerated in the prison of that port. Twenty-six days after our arrest we learned that the Secretary of War had accused us of firing on Federal troops at Monterey during the Carranzista attack on that city on Oct. 23 and 24, which was absurd, as we were arrested on the 20th, and on the other dates mentioned were on our way to Tampico.

"Finally we were admitted to bail, but had only enjoyed our liberty forty hours when we learned of the Government's intention to rearrest us and send us with other prisoners to the prison at Quintanaroo. This was speedily confirmed, for we received a summons from the Federal commander of Vera Cruz to appear before him.

"In view of our previous experiences we feared for our lives, and decided to take refuge in the American Consulate."

WANTS OIL COMPETITION.

Washington Opposed to Foreign Monopoly of Latin American Supply.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—In the scramble that is going on for oil wells in the regions adjacent to the Panama Canal, Great Britain is showing great commercial activity. Since the adoption of oil fuel in the British Navy every possible effort has been put forth to acquire all the oil to be had in Mexico, the West Indies, and Central America. At this time concessions are pending in both Ecuador and Colombia, in which the Pearson syndicate is endeavoring to secure a monopoly.

These oil fields are likely to prove of the greatest importance in the future. They have thus far been only slightly exploited, but there is every indication of a very large supply. With the completion of the Panama Canal and the general adoption of oil fuel in the merchant marine these resources will become immensely valuable. Competition in the carrying trade will turn more or less upon the control of oil at points from which it can be cheaply transported to the terminals of the canal.

The Governments of Ecuador and Colombia have both granted the concessions desired by the Pearson Syndicate, but these concessions have yet to be ratified by the Congresses of those countries, and it is understood that the United States has entered the game to block, if possible, the proposed concession of the Colombia oil fields to the British concern. The opposition is said in some quarters to originate with a big American company, which is also trying to get oil supplies in the canal sphere for transportation.

At the State Department the explanation is offered that this Government does not look with complacency upon the acquisition of a monopoly of oil at both terminals of the canal, and the hope is expressed that the Colombian supply may be secured by an American company, or at least by another foreign concern than the Pearson Syndicate, in order that there may be competition, and steamships that need to take on fuel at the canal terminals may have the benefit of it.

HUERTA CABLES OF VICTORIES.

Tells Paris Paper of Winning Northern Battles—"Situation Improved."

PARIS, Wednesday, Nov. 26.—President Huerta has sent the following cablegram from Mexico City to the Matin:

"The situation of the country from an economical and military point of view has improved because the Government of the republic possesses the funds necessary to supply its needs, and, moreover, because the National Army came out victorious in the recent serious engagements fought against the rebels of the North.

"So far as our international relations are concerned, we are in complete harmony with all the powers except with the Government of the United States, but the republic looks to the latter to do complete justice to the national cause.

"To sum up, the situation is notably improved. The two chambers and the two other departments of the union are carrying out their functions in all regularity."

REBELS SHOOT AN OFFICER.

Lieut. Castro Condemned by Comrades for Killing a Hackman.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 25.—Standing against an adobe wall, chipped by the bullets which have ended scores of other lives, Lieut. José Castro of the Agua Prieta garrison was shot to death to-day in view of the entire population of the Mexican border town.

Castro paid the penalty imposed by a court-martial for having slain Maximiliano Montavvo, a former wealthy Mexican landholder, but reduced by the fortunes of war to the necessity of driving a hack. He was killed in a dispute over the fare he charged Castro.

Capt. Gil Saminiego, with a force of about 100 men who have been guarding Ojitas Pass, left here to-day to reinforce Villa at Juarez. Constitutionalist recruiting agents were busy recruiting 1,000 new men to send to the rebel army at Chihuahua.

MISS BIGGAR WINS APPEAL.

New Trial Granted of Alienation Suit Brought by Mrs. Hendrick.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—The Court of Appeals to-day granted a new trial in the case of Miss Laura Biggar, against whom Mrs. Agnes May Hendrick of Bayonne, N. J., once obtained a judgment for $50,579.87 for the alleged alienation of her husband's affections. This judgment later was reduced to $30,187.30, and then the case went to the Court of Appeals. The opinion was written by Judge Hiscock and concurred in by the entire court.

Dr. Hendrick, the husband, conducted a sanitarium in Bayonne, and his wife testified that his income was $15,000 a year. After he met Miss Biggar, however, it was alleged, he contributed only twice to his wife's support, and the total sum he gave her was $125.

Austin Dam Defendants Acquitted.

Special to The New York Times.

WELLSBORO, Penn., Nov. 25.—George C. Bayless of Binghamton, N. Y., President of the Bayless Pulp Company, and Fred M. Hamlin, Superintendent, were to-day acquitted of involuntary manslaughter before Judge David Cameron and a jury. The indictments were found as the result of the breaking of the Austin dam on Sept. 30, 1911, when eighty lives were lost. The discharge of the defendants was not unexpected. Claims totaling half a million dollars had been filed against the company, and the civil suits brought to collect this amount were recently dropped on the payment of $150,000.

brokers learned of the theft of stocks and bonds from the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and the quick exchange of messages followed, culminating in the arrest of Foye.

Little could be learned last night of the method by which Foye is alleged to have obtained possession of the stocks. According to the police, he is a brother of Policeman Foye, who was mentioned at the time of the shooting of Herman Rosenthal. Policeman Foye was tried before a Police Commissioner for failing to take prompt action. The police say that the prisoner was at one time employed as a secretary by John W. Gates and later by Charles W. Gates.

In giving his pedigree in the station Foye said he was 35 years old, single, and lived at 17 East Thirty-third Street. He gave his occupation as "clerk." He is tall and thin, and was well dressed.

Prisoner Had Waldorf Key.

In Foye's pocket, when he was searched at the Greenwich Street Police Station, was found a key to a room at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. The police at once telephoned to Detective Joseph E. Smith of the Waldorf and also to a Mr. Chandler, a Philadelphia broker, who was a guest there and who, it is said, was an emissary from the Philadelphia brokerage firm to which Foye sold bonds and stocks.

Detective Smith and Mr. Chandler went to the station, where Smith identified Foye as a man he had known for several years who recently was a guest at the Waldorf. On Nov. 1, the hotel detective said, Foye had registered at the Waldorf and taken a room there. Several times since, he said, he had seen Foye in the hotel. He had regarded it as queer that the room Foye engaged never was occupied. He could not recall when he had last seen Foye.

William B. Cardozo, Vice President of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, denied last night any knowledge of Foye's having stolen $200,000 worth of stocks and bonds from the concern. He acknowledged, however, that Foye formerly was employed by the trust company, and that he had heard of the arrest. Foye resigned his place in a regular way, Mr. Cardozo said, and went to Philadelphia.

The house at 17 East Thirty-second Street, which Foye gave as his address, is closed, and there is a "For Sale" sign on it.

Long Conference Over Robbery.

Bankers, lawyers, and detectives began to gather at 7:30 o'clock last night at the office of Graham & L'Amoreaux, lawyers at 42 Broadway. There was a long conference over the robbery which continued until an early hour this morning. The situation was discussed from every angle. Great reticence was manifested by all persons concerned.

The precise amount of the theft could not be learned, and no statement was issued. It was said by detectives, however, that the thefts might amount to $300,000. At an early hour this morning it was said that the Pinkerton detectives had found $108,000 of the missing securities in cash and certified checks, and that they hoped soon to find $42,000 more. The officers of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company would not confirm the report that made the robbery such an enormous affair.

Shortly after midnight, Vice President Matthews of the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia arrived in this city and hurried to the conference. It was the Corn Exchange National Bank on which the certified check for $97,000 found on Foye when he was arrested was drawn.

No word came from the conference as to the objects discussed or the conclusions reached. Every now and then, however, there would be a new arrival at the building. It was said that several other banking institutions besides the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia were represented at the conference, but the names of these institutions could not be learned.

Detectives at work on the case announced at 10 o'clock this morning that they had recovered from various vaults and strong boxes $200,000 in securities, which they asserted were part of the total of approximately $300,000 represented by Foye's thefts. Process servers, who said they represented Davis, Auerbach & Cornell, lawyers of 34 Nassau Street, attempted to serve papers on Foye in the Greenwich Station, during the night, but were unable to do so. The law firm, it is understood, seeks to recover possession of the $97,000 represented by the certified check, presumably for the Philadelphia bond brokers who paid Foye.

Foye Determined To Get Them.

When a reporter was permitted to speak to Foye at the station last night, the prisoner said:

"Well, I'd been working for those people for a small salary, and I made up my mind that I'd get them; and I did."

According to a check book found in his possession, Foye has $70,000 in a New York bank.

Officers of Trust Company.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company has its office at 22 William Street, with a branch at 475 Fifth Avenue. Its officers and Directors, according to the Co-partnership and Corporation Directory, are:

Edwin S. Marston, President; Cornelius R. Agnew, William B. Cardozo, and J. Herbert Case, Vice Presidents; Augustus V. Heely, Secretary; Directors, William A. Astor, Franklin D. Locke, George F. ESPIONAGE BUREAU FOUND AT GENEVA

Former French Officer Said to Head It and His Expulsion Is Ordered.

AWAITED AT EACH FRONTIER

Larguier Will Be Arrested the Moment He Reaches France, Germany, Austria, or Italy.

GENEVA, Nov. 25.—The Swiss authorities, after a lengthy investigation as the result of complaints made by a number of Governments, have discovered an extensive and cleverly organized international military espionage bureau here.

The bureau, it is alleged, was conducted by a French ex-army Captain of the name of Larguier, and to-day his expulsion from Switzerland was ordered.

The expulsion order places Larguier in an extraordinary dilemma, as, it is asserted, the moment he crosses any one of the four frontiers—French, German, Austrian, or Italian—he will be placed under arrest by the officials of the country he enters.

"QUALITY STREET" REVIVED.

London Again Sees Barrie's Play—Company an Excellent One.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Charles Frohman to-night revived Barrie's "Quality Street" at the Duke of York's Theatre with a company which, it is generally agreed, is better than that which performed the play when it was first produced in London a dozen years ago.

The lapse of time has not robbed the comedy of its charm. It had an enthusiastic reception and will certainly be a success.

ROBBED WOMAN IN STORE.

Thief Run Down by Police After Shooting at His Pursuers.

A man walked into the candy store of Otto Hottendorf, at 1,663 Tenth Avenue, Windsor Terrace, Brooklyn, at 8 o'clock last evening, and pointing a revolver at Mrs. Minnie Hottendorf, rifled the cash register. As the man hurried from the store Mrs. Hottendorf ran after him screaming. Passers-by joined in the chase, but dropped out when the thief fired a shot from the revolver and turned into Windsor Place.

After he had turned the corner the crowd got its courage back and renewed the chase. Near Fuller Place the fleeing man fired another shot, which brought Detective Lieut. Thomas J. Tunney of Manhattan Headquarters and Detective Joseph Mahan, both of whom lived near by, into the pursuit.

Through Windsor Place to Ninth Avenue, then to Sixteenth Street, to Eighth Avenue the thief ran. He fired a third shot near 604 Eighth Avenue, which called out Albert G. Froehleich, a three months' patrolman, who lived at that address.

Froehleich was overtaking the man near Fourth Street when the fugitive turned and fired a shot at him. Froehleich replied with two shots, and then leaped into a personal struggle. Aided by Fred Sulter of 143 Sixteenth Street he disarmed the man, who said he was Herman Kasman of 219 Bowery, Manhattan. Seventeen dollars was found on him. According to Lieut. Frank Cunley of the Fifth Avenue Police Station, he admitted the robbery of Mrs. Hottendorf's store.

After Kasman's arrest it was necessary to call police reserves to save him from mob violence

1,400 GERMAN FIRMS AGREE TO EXHIBIT

Will Send to San Francisco the Finest Display Their Country Has Ever Made.

TO ASK VOTE OF $500,000

Majority for It in the Reichstag Assured—Steamship Lines to Carry Exhibits Free of Cost.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—If an impression exists that Germany's refusal to participate officially in the Panama-Pacific Exposition means that there will be no German exhibit at San Francisco in 1915 it ought to be pointed out as soon and emphatically as possible that grave misapprehension prevails. Germany, as a matter of fact, will be represented at San Francisco by the greatest display she has ever made at any exposition in history.

One thousand four hundred great firms and corporations, representing practically every branch of German industry, have already definitely arranged to show wares at the Golden Gate. The Reichstag is about to be asked to vote $500,000 for a German building at the exposition. The great German steamship lines, persuaded of the limitless possibilities awaiting German export trade throughout the Western Americas and the Far East in consequence of the opening of the Panama Canal, have announced their readiness to transport German exhibits to San Francisco free of cost.

I am able to quote from a vigorous petition about to be submitted to the Reichstag by the independent committee organized by German merchants, manufacturers, and shippers. It calls upon the Reichstag to vote funds for the exposition and makes it clearly evident that German industry demands adequate representation at San Francisco lest Great Britain crowd it out of the North and South American markets, especially in the textile and machinery trades.

The petition insists that the German Government had no right to boycott the exposition in consequence of an "agreement" with Great Britain. It refers to the strong independent movement now in progress for a British exhibit at San Francisco and declares that the need of Government financial support to enable German industry to meet British competition is now more urgent than ever.

I am informed that sufficient parliamentary support is in sight to assure the voting of the desired $500,000 grant by a large majority.

How completely opinion in German industrial and trade circles and public opinion in general has changed since the official boycott is shown by the action of the Association of German Chambers of Commerce and the League of German Cities. Both of these great national bodies, speaking respectively for commerce and the citizenship of the Empire, have come out formally and unreservedly on behalf of the greatest possible German representation at San Francisco.

There is hardly a branch of arts, crafts, or science in which Germany aspires for trade abroad which will not be worthily represented. German exports to the United States alone total $175,000,000 a year, those to Latin America and the East more than twice as much. The Germans intend to make the Panama-Pacific Exposition the basis of a vigorous and forceful campaign for fresh conquests.

TO DIVIDE $50,000 REWARD

But Paris Informers Will Profit Most from Pearl Theft.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—There has been much speculation regarding the disposal of the reward of $50,000 that was offered in connection with the theft of the $675,000 pearl necklace. It is understood that $45,000 will be paid to Messrs. Brandstatter and Quadranstein, the Paris dealers, on the ground that their information led to the arrests and that if the arrests had not been made the pearls would not have been deposited where they were found by the workman, Horne, who is not legally entitled to a reward.

While Horne discharged only the bounden duty of any one finding property in the street in handing it to the police, it is recognized that he is morally entitled to a reward, and the assessors will probably recommend that a special gratuity—$2,500 has been mentioned—should be given to him. Gratuities will also be recommended to Chief Inspector Ward, officers of the detective force, and other persons connected with the inquiry.

The total cost of the theft to underwriters will probably be $150,000. To the reward and gratuities must be added $20,000, paid for two pearls bought before the thieves were arrested; $60,000, the value of the pearls still missing, and the costs of the investigation in France and elsewhere.

Wins the Femina Aviation Cup.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Mme. Daroche won the Femina Aviation Cup to-day at Bouy by covering 325 kilometers in four hours. The previous Femina record was gained by Mme. Pailler, who made 280 kilometers.

square over the breast, and a blue mantle lined with green, is seated in the open air, holding the naked Child on her left hand. He rests one foot on His mother's right hand and places His arms round her neck. He appears to grasp behind the Virgin's head the lose-falling veil. In the distance on the right is a church, and on the left an open landscape with a winding river."

Only twice before had the painting been exhibited publicly, once at the Manchester Art Treasures Exhibition in 1857, and again at Burlington House.

Writing of the picture in 1854 in his book, "The Treasures of Art in Great Britain," Dr. Waagen, Director of the Royal Gallery, Berlin, said:

"The dreamlike and highly interesting expression of the Virgin recalls the feeling of Perugino. This is probably the oldest specimen of the lighter mode of treatment, with glazing, which Raphael adopted from Fra Bartolommeo. The figures are half the size of life; the Virgin to the knees. The preservation is excellent."

VICTORY FOR BARTHOU.

Opposition Parties Withdraw Proposal Designed to Defeat Cabinet.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—With the object of bringing about the downfall of Premier Barthou's Cabinet the Opposition parties in the Chamber of Deputies to-day demanded that the new loan of $260,000,000 to cover the budget deficit should be debated after the inheritance tax project.

Premier Barthou absolutely declined to accept this procedure and made the question one of a vote of confidence in the Cabinet. At the last moment the Opposition parties withdrew their objection to the debate on the loan having the priority, and a vote was not necessary.

The Government's success in to-day's ordeal strengthens the opinion in political circles that the Ministry will weather the storm—an opinion which was reflected on the Bourse this afternoon by the upward tendency of rentes.

AIRMAN PERREYON KILLED.

One of the Best Known French Aviators—His Altitude Records.

BUC, France, Nov. 25.—Edmond Perreyon, one of the best known aviators of France, was killed to-day. His monoplane capsized while he was flying at a very low altitude over the aerodrome here and he was crushed to death beneath the motor.

Perreyon, who had held his flying certificate since December, 1910, was the creator of several altitude records. While flying alone here last March 11 he attained a height of 19,650 feet. In June he ascended here with a passenger to an altitude of 16,368 feet, and a little later in the same month at Vienna he made a record high flight of 15,480 feet with two passengers.

CITY AUTO KILLS BOY.

Driver, with Three Friends, Speeds Away—Stopped at Gun Point.

Frank J. Kemmerich, 17 years old, was knocked down by a southbound automobile in First Avenue at Seventy-eighth Street late last night and so badly injured that he died while being taken in an ambulance to the Reception Hospital. The automobile was a Department of Water Supply vehicle, and, after striking the boy, speeded away down First Avenue. As it disappeared in the darkness a policeman who had witnessed the accident, blew his whistle and shouted to the driver to stop, but the latter only increased his speed.

As the car approached Seventy-fourth Street the policeman on post there ran toward it with drawn revolver and commanded the chauffeur to halt. This time the order was heeded. The police found four men in the auto. The driver, William J. O'Brien, who said he lived at 385 Fourteenth Street, Brooklyn, and his three friends were taken to the police station and locked up. All were intoxicated, it is said.

Dr. J. C. Fisher, the ambulance surgeon who attended Kemmerich, said that the boy's skull had been crushed, and that he had received many contusions about the body. At an early hour this morning the police had not yet learned where he had lived.

THROWN FROM CAR ON CURVE.

John Macdonald Hit a Telegraph Pole and Was Killed.

John Macdonald, a hostler employed in the New Dorp Police Station, was instantly killed when hurled from an auto last night on the Fresh Kills Road, near Greenridge, S. I. Macdonald was riding on the step of the machine, there being no room for him inside the auto, and as the car rounded a turn he was thrown off, landing head first against a telegraph pole.

Macdonald went for a ride with L. W. Barker of Stapleton and two other friends in a small car. They were on their way home when the accident happened.

J. HAZEN HYDE WEDS COUNTESS IN PARIS

PRIVATE CHURCH CEREMONY

Bride's Brother-in-Law, Duke of Croy, Gives Her Away—Ambassador Herrick Best Man.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—James Hazen Hyde, ex-Vice President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and Countess Louis de Gontaut-Biron, whose maiden name was Miss Martha Leishman, and who is the daughter of John G. A. Leishman, ex-American Ambassador to Germany, were married to-day at the American Church of the Holy Trinity in Paris by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Samuel Watson.

The ceremony was private, the only guests present being the bride's mother, Mrs. Leishman; the Duke of Croy, the Duchess of Croy, the bride's sister; Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, and Mrs. Herrick; Harry S. Lehr and Mrs. Lehr of New York, and a few other friends.

The bride was attended by Princes Guy de Faucigny-Lucinge, formerly Miss Natividad Terry. Her brother-in-law, the Duke of Croy, in the absence of her father, who is in the United States, gave her in marriage. Ambassador Herrick acted as best man.

The civil marriage ceremony had been previously performed at the office of the Mayor of the Sixteenth Arondissement, when the witnesses were Henry Clews, Jr., of New York; the Duke of Croy, Ambassador Herrick, and Harry S. Lehr.

Ambassador Herrick and Mrs. Herrick gave a dinner to the wedding party last night.

The engagement of the Countess de Gontaut-Biron to Mr. Hyde was announced early in November. The Countess is the eldest daughter of the former Ambassador to Germany, John G. A. Leishman, and Mrs. Leishman. Her former husband, who died in Paris in 1907, was a member of a family of the old French aristocracy. Her younger sister, Miss Nancy Leishman, was married on Oct. 28 to the Duke of Croy in Geneva, Switzerland.

Mr. Hyde was a well-known figure in society and business circles in New York up to 1905, when he went to Paris to reside. He was at one time Vice President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, in which his father, the late Henry Baldwin Hyde, was the founder. Mr. Leishman, the bride's father, is now in New York, having arrived here last week from Europe.

BLACKSOD A FINE PORT.

H. C. Long Tells of Advantages of Proposed Ocean Terminal.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

DUBLIN, Nov. 25.—Henry C. Long, the American engineer who is studying the possibilities of Blacksod Bay as a terminal port for the proposed new transatlantic line, in discussing the subject to-day said:

"There will be little difficulty in obtaining a depth of 40 feet at low water at the side of the piers, which will be able to accommodate three or four large liners at the same time."

Questioned in regard to the character and quantity of freight which will be handled by the new line, Mr. Long said that freight was a secondary consideration. The great thing was the convenience which the route offered to passengers between the two continents. There was no doubt, however, that freight would come, and would, of course, be an important item.

Asked how the difference of gauge between the Irish and English railways would be overcome, Mr. Long said this presented no difficulty whatever. The problem had been tackled in the United States years ago, and similar methods would be applied on this side of the Atlantic. At the terminals at Dublin and Belfast there would be hydraulic apparatus which would lift the coaches off the bogies and hold them suspended while bogies of the required gauge were put underneath.

Mr. Long mentioned two years as a rough estimate for the completion of the work.

SCOTT'S AID MARRIED.

Commander Bruce Weds Daughter of Sir Jesse Boot, Millionaire.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A wedding which attracted a great deal of interest to-day was that of Miss Dorothy Boot, daughter of Sir Jesse Boot, the millionaire head of a big firm of druggists, and Commander Wilfred Bruce, brother of Lady Scott, who was second in command of the Scott antarctic expedition.

The ceremony took place in St. Anne's Church, Soho. Among those present were Commander Pennell, Commander Campbell, Lieut. Searle, and Dr. Lerick, all members of the Terra Nova expedition.

$1,500 FOR CANEVARI BOOK.

Volume That Belonged to Maioli Brings $1,475 at the Brooke Sale.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A folio copy of Livy's History of Rome, Paris, "Apud Audoenum Parvum," 1543, in a fine contemporary morocco binding executed for Demetrio Canevari, physician to Pope Urban VIII, brought $1,500 to-day at the sale of Lady Brooke's library at Sotheby's.

Thomas Maioli's copy of "De Rebus Oceanicis et Orbe," by Peter Martyr, folio, Basileae, 1533, went for $1,475. It is a slightly worn but a genuine and unrestored copy from the Sunderland Library "To Maioli et Amicorum" is in gilt at the foot of the upper cover, the lower cover having the motto: "In gratis servire Nephas."

"Monumenta Germaniae Historica," fifty-seven folio and quarto volumes, Hanover, 1826-1896 and 1877-1897, realized $1,175. The folio work is edited by G. H. Pertz and the quarto by "Societas Aperiendis Fontibus Rerum Germanicarum."

In the sale of the late J. H. Fitzhenry's collection of works of art at Christie's to-day a Dresden porcelain group, composed of a vase and cover, painted with Watteau figures in lake, resting on a Louis XV ormolu plinth, 8¾ inches high, brought $630.

An extremely rare circular medal in gold, Frederick III of Denmark naval award, 1659, was sold for $655.

A piece of ancient sculpture, a large head of Persephone (?) wreathed with flowers, marble, 13 inches high, in good Hellenic style, the nose wanting, realized the highest price of the day, $1,575.

POLONIUM AS MEDICINE.

Sir William Ramsay Believes It Has Therapeutic Qualities.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Sir William Ramsay, discussing the properties of radium at a meeting of the British Radium Corporation to-day, said there were other substances in the radium ores which had not so far been exploited from a therapeutic point of view. He hoped that polonium, which was perhaps the most easily produced, might prove to possess therapeutic qualities for the treatment of diseases which had hitherto not been treated.

Polonium, said Sir William, was somewhat analogous to selenium and tellurium, and also to bismuth, the therapeutic qualities of which had been tested. Those three elements remained in the system for some length of time, and then were excreted, but had practically no therapeutical qualities. Polonium differed from them entirely in that it gave off alpha rays, just the same as radium did, and he could not help believing that the potency of radium for therapeutic purposes depended upon the alpha rays.

Radium could not be administered as medicine to human beings, as it was too expensive, and probably too dangerous, but the three substances he had mentioned were eliminated in about three months, and his impression was that polonium might produce its effect for about that time and then be eliminated.

THE KAISER HARD UP?

Report in Berlin That He Is About to Sell the Monbijou Palace.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—A report in circulation here, apparently originating in Vienna, is to the effect that the Kaiser is about to sell the old Monbijou Palace, now the Hohenzollern Museum. It is asserted that the sale is due to the fact that the recent increase of the Emperor's civil list is insufficient.

There was a similar report some weeks ago regarding the alleged projected sale of a castle in the Rhineland.

Confirmation of the report is not obtainable.

rooms of the ground floor, while the members of the Cabinet, as usual, entered the northwest gate and passed direct to the elevator. Escorted by the uniformed aids, all finally found places in the East Room, which was not crowded at any time.

The full Marine Band, in their scarlet coats, with the brightest of gold cords, buttons, and embroidery, made a splendid mass of color in the great hall overlooking the corridor through which the bridal party was to pass from end to end of the mansion. Here the Roman vases between the columns separating the entrance hall from the Red Corridor were filled by white chrysanthemums. During the assembling of the company the sixty musicians, under the direction of Bandmaster Santleman, played an overture of Reinecke, "Festival"; "The Fustle of Spring," by Sinding, and two selections from Rubinstein, including the wedding march from "Feramors."

The musical selection, in addition, included the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," the wedding march of Mendelssohn, the "Marche Nuptiale" of the bridegroom's kinsman, Ethelbert Nevin, and Goldmark's "Bridal Song," and the serenade from "The Rural Wedding Symphony."

The entrance of Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Robert H. Sayre, the former escorted by Col. Harts, the latter by Lieut. Commander Needham Jones, was followed almost immediately by the coming of the junior aids, who took up their position in a double line at either side of the ribbon-made aisle. The mother of the bride and the mother of the bridegroom took their places directly to the north of the platform, where the palms and vase of lilies formed a triangular recess.

Mrs. Wilson wore a trained gown of acru chiffon velvet in plain and brocade pattern, with drapery of duchesse lace, the latter over an underlining of gold blue about the waist. There was also a generous embellishment of sable about the gown. Mrs. Sayre wore an equally handsome toilette of mauve velvet with bodice garniture of point lace and handsome diamond ornaments. Neither of these deeply interested witnesses wore hat or bonnet.

Entrance of the Bridal Parties.

With the opening measure of the bridal chorus came the bridegroom and his best man, Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, the medical missionary of Labrador. They took up their position directly in front of the green carpeted platform, where appeared almost at the same instant the officiating clergyman, the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach of Princeton, with the bridegroom's brother, the Rev. John Nevin Sayre, who arrived less than a week ago from Germany to assist at the marriage.

So well timed were these entrances that scarcely a moment elapsed before the four ushers were seen leading the procession from the State dining room, where the bride and her attendants had assembled, coming from the second floor by the small elevator which landed them at the dining-room door.

The ushers, walking two and two, were Charles E. Hughes, Jr., with Gilbert Horrax of Montclair, N. J.; Benjamin B. Burton, with Dr. Scovill Clark of Salem, Mass., all classmates of the bridegroom either at Williams College or at Harvard Law School. The ushers, like the best man and the bridegroom, wore dark morning coats with gray striped trousers. Each had a white boutonnière—the bridegroom a small orchid, the others a spray of lilies of the valley.

Following the ushers, and also walking two and two, were Miss Eleanor Wilson, the bride's youngest sister, and Miss Mary White of Baltimore; Miss Marjorie Brown of Atlanta, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Adelaide Scott of Princeton, and Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest sister of the bride, who walked alone directly in advance of the bride and their father. The President in his new rôle looked grave but perfectly at ease. As he appeared with his daughter on his arm a bugle note, clear and sweet, brought a hush among the assembled company. The bugler sounded the official salute entitled "The President." The last sound had scarce died away when the band burst forth with the music of the wedding march.

On reaching the foot of the platform the bridesmaids and maids formed a half circle, leaving the space of about five feet directly in the centre. Through this space the bridegroom stepped forward to meet his bride, with whom he ascended the platform, to be followed by Miss Margaret Wilson and Dr. Grenfell. Miss Wilson stood by her sister and the best man by Mr. Sayre. In the centre of the green-covered platform lay a pure white vicuna fur rug, presented by the Minister of Peru on which the bride and bridegroom had position for the first part of the joint ceremony, delivered by the Rev. Mr. Beach, and then knelt for the benediction of the bridegroom's brother.

The service was a unique combination of the Episcopalian and Presbyterian forms. In the latter the word "obey" is included in the bride's promise of love and faithfulness, but at Miss Wilson's especial request it was inserted.

As the two pledged their troth, the President and Mrs. Wilson stood hand in hand to the left of the platform.

"Who giveth this woman to be married by this man?" asked the Rev. Dr. Beach.

The President stepped forward, took the hand of his daughter, and placed it in that of Mr. Sayre.

"I, Francis Bowes, take thee, Jessie Woodrow, to be my wedded wife," repeated the bridegroom after Dr. Beach, "and promise and covenant, before God and these witnesses, to be thy loving and faithful husband, in plenty and in want, in joy and in sorrow, in sickness and in health as long as we both shall live."

The bride repeated the same words, except that to her response was added "to be thy loving, faithful, and obedient wife."

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom led the way through the guard of aids to the Blue Room, where they, with the President and Mrs. Wilson, received the congratulations of each witness to the ceremony.

The floral decoration here was, as one guest declared, in rare Bulgarian effect, the severely simple arrangement of white and green having been augmented by wonderfully handsome baskets, plaques, and trees of every known blossom sent by different friends. The largest of these floral tributes was a mound of white flowers, large as a beehive, on a base of orchids and roses, which was made by a local florist to represent Mount Chimbarazo, sent with the compliments of a Latin-American diplomat and marked with miniature flags of his nation.

While the precedence of the formal New Year receptions of the past one hundred years was not observed, the first guests to offer their good wishes after the immediate family were the members of the Diplomatic Corps, with the French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand leading the way. Few of the diplomats lingered beyond half an hour, while by 6 o'clock all guests save the relatives and bridal party had taken their departure.

During the reception refreshments were served in the state dining room from a table decorated in pink chrysanthemums and lighted by yellow capped candles.

Among those who extended their hearty congratulations at the reception were many of the President's old friends from Princeton University and Williams College. They included Dean Henry B. Fine of Princeton, President Harry A. Garfield of Williams, Secretary McAlpin of Princeton, Cleveland H. Dodge, and Robert Garrett, who were members of the Board of Trustees when Mr. Wilson was at Princeton; Governor-elect Fielder of New Jersey, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert E. Peary. The latter were accompanied by their daughter, born within the Arctic Circle and known the world over as "the snow baby," but now a grown-up Miss of twenty.

Little Miss Mary Tumulty, nine-year-old daughter of Secretary and Mrs. Tumulty, was the only child in the reception line. She was there by special request, and as she passed both Mrs. Wilson and the bride kissed her.

At the close of the reception the bridal party took their places at a round table in the breakfast room, where an old-fashioned Southern supper was served. Here the decorations were pink roses of the same variety used in the bridesmaids' bouquets.

Following the supper there was a dance in the East Room. It had not been planned, but became one of the most delightful parts of the affair. The Marine Band was called in, and the young people footed it merrily to the strains of tango and other up-to-date dance music.

BRIDE WORE WHITE SATIN.

Her Gown of American Make—Bridesmaids in Shades of Pink.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The bride's toilette was shown to advantage in the long procession, as also were the toilettes of her attendants.

Miss Wilson adhered to all the traditions of white satin and point lace, while her long veil was of tulle held by a delicate wreath of orange blossoms, arranged closely about her head rather than in the coronet fashion more usual on occasions of this kind.

The satin of the wedding gown was of American manufacture, and the dress had been made from the bride's own design. It followed the mode in regard to the cut of the skirt, which showed a becoming fullness about the top, merged into plaits at one side. Here a line of embroidery in small orange blossom design extended down the left side of the skirt, after outlining the V-shaped neck of the bodice. The bodice was of the close flat model now in vogue, with scant drapery of point lace to give the broadening effect on the shoulders without any unnecessary fullness, front or back. The sleeves of satin were half-length, finished by a rather deep fall of point lace, with the satin edged in the same embroidery of orange blossoms.

The court train was three yards long, with a square end, and untrimmed.

The neck of the gown, in addition to soft folds of mulline so delicate as to be almost invisible, had a narrow edge of point lace, leaving only an inch or two of the neck exposed. Here rested the diamond lavalliére, suspended from its platinum and diamond chain, which was the gift of the House of Representatives. Below this was a beautiful corsage ornament of diamonds, the gift of the bridegroom. Her white satin slippers were trimmed in tiny buckles of miniature orange blossoms, while the natural-sized blossoms served to mark the waist line at the front of the gown, where skirt and bodice appeared to merge into one piece under the soft-folded girdle of the satin.

The bridal bouquet was of lilies and white orchids.

The bridesmaids' gowns were alike as to model and materials, being of pink charmeuse in close foundation skirt, draped in matching chiffon, with considerable fullness at the back, over which was hung a silver lace tunic. The color, however, varied from a deep rose pink, as worn by Miss Eleanor Wilson and Miss White, to the palest hydrangea tint of Miss Margaret Wilson's gown. This shading from dark to light as the bridal party entered the room was most effective, as it broke the sharp contrast between the deep-tinted gowns and also proved a happy method of giving to each maid her most becoming color.

The gowns were made alike, with high Marie Antoinette collars, strangely enough of "Quaker" lace, which new variety of sheer lace also formed the flowing sleeves. The latter overhung to the elbow in chiffon of the same tone as that of the drapery under the silver tunic. The hats worn with these very smart frocks were of silver lace faced in pink velvet to match the gowns. All the bridesmaids carried huge bouquets of pink roses.

GOWNS OF THE GUESTS.

Smart Semi-Tailored Costumes in Dark Tones or All Black.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Had it not been for the uniforms of the diplomats and of the officers of the United States Army and Navy, who were in full dress from the highest to the last Second Lieutenant or Ensign, the attire of the wedding company would have lacked much in color. Coming, too, early in the day for dinner dress, most of the feminine guests compromised on semi-tailored suits of velvet or brocade in dark tones. An unusual number of all-black gowns in afternoon models also were worn. Those with conspicuously smart toilets were:

Mrs. William Jennings Bryan, coat suit of violet velvet, trimmed with Siberian squirrel; hat, a small turban of violet plush with band of squirrel and tall feathered ornament.

Mrs. Lindley M. Garrison, sage-green silk poplin trimmed with point de Venise lace and bands of sable fur; small hat trimmed with fur and ostrich feathers.

Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson, tête de negre crêpe de chine gown, draped in modish line with old rose moire introduced in long lines, and touches of white lace on the corsage, with orange velvet girdle; black velvet hat.

Miss Lucy Burleson, gown of silver rose taffeta trimmed with lace; black velvet hat trimmed with old rose flowers and fur.

Miss Sidney Burleson, pretty dress of white crêpe de chine ruffled with white taffeta with touches of fur on the waist; black hat.

Mrs. Josephus Daniels, an afternoon toilet of amethyst velvet fringed with fox fur; hat of the same shade velvet trimmed in fur and a cluster of violets.

Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, blue brocaded silk gown with long velvet cloak; velvet hat, with citron plumes.

Mrs. David Houston, black velvet suit, with cream lace blouse, combined with brocaded chiffon; hat of black velvet trimmed with a band of fitch fur and a tall aigrette.

SOME OF THE BRIDAL GIFTS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Both the President and Mrs. Wilson are deeply annoyed at the exaggerated reports of the wedding gifts received by this first bride of their family. While no authoritative statement has been given out concerning this important feature of the wedding, and only close friends have been permitted to view a very extensive collection of silver, china, books, and pictures and several handsome pieces of jewelry—the whole practically filling the large library on the second floor—it is understood that Miss Wilson's gifts represent a money value below rather than above $20,000, which is not quite one-fourth the estimate that has been made by those who chose to guess.

The handsomest as well as the most valuable of Miss Wilson's gifts is the diamond necklace and pendant sent by the House of Representatives, which she wore at to-day's ceremony.

A second official present of value was the silver service from members of the United States Senate. Three silver services have already been received, while still another is said to be on the way from California.

The Supreme Court sent a massive and beautiful silver centrepiece in the form of a boat. All the diplomats sent gifts, as did the members of the Cabinet.

Other gifts were:

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan—Drop leaf mahogany tea table.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Garrison—Rare old Chinese porcelain vase.

The Attorney General, Mr. McReynolds—Table silver.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Burleson—Antique gold bracelet studded with diamonds.

The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Lane—Silver vase.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Houston—Old English brass andirons and fire set.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Redfield—Fish set of Lenox china in special decoration.

The Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Wilson—Large silver vase.

The French Ambassador (dean of the Diplomatic Corps) and Mme. Jusserand—Handsome silver tray.

The German Ambassador and Countess von Bernstorff—Antique sugar and cream set.

The Italian Ambassador—Four antique silver candlesticks.

The British Ambassador and Lady Spring-Rice—Set of gold coffee spoons.

The Minister of Costa Rica and Mme. Calvo—Antique silver tray, with lotus blossoms in repousse.

The Spanish Minister and Mme. Riano—Large silver bowl.

The Minister from Guatemala—Silver bowl.

The Minister from Siam and the Princess Traidos Prabandi—Hand-wrought Siamese silver jar.

The Charge d'Affaires of Austria-Hungary—Silver vase.

The Admiral of the navy and Mrs. Dewey—Large silver vase.

Hugh Wallace—White Grizzly beer rug made from skins of animals he shot himself.

Goucher class of 1908, the bride's graduating class—Chest of linen, with handwork of each member.

Princeton class of 1879—Large silver bowl.

Princton Alumni Association of the District of Columbia—Silver tray.

Mrs. James W. Pinchot—Rare Brussels lace and Italian hand embroidery.

Distant cousin of the bridegroom—Colonial mirror, which has been in the Sayre family for five generations.

Miss Alice Nevin, relative of the bridegroom—Hand-wrought Roman silver lamp of the Fixing Mercury design.

Dr. De Witt S. Clark of Salem, Mass., one of the ushers—Sheraton mirror, once owned by the late Edward Holyoke, President of Harvard College.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie—Full dinner service of solid silver.

New Jersey Delegation in Congress—Two handsome Persian rugs.

The Southern Cousins Club—Set of antique mahogany furniture.

Two Women Voters of Northern California—Silver service of Colonial design.

Wheeling Iron and Steel Company Workers—Handsome pieces of silver.

Mrs. Jessie Porter Wood of Washington—Water color painting of the Wilson coat of arms on vellum.

Mrs. James R. Mann, wife of the Republican floor leader in the House—Antique cloisonne vase.

Mrs. Eugene Kinkead, wife of Representative from New Jersey—Sheraton mahogany tea wagon.

START IN AUTO ON HONEYMOON

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre left the White House before 8 o'clock, using one of the White House motors, but without revealing to any one where the first days of their honeymoon would be passed. As, however, they laughingly made engagements to meet friends going to the Army and Navy football game next Saturday, it naturally is assumed that they will pass the next few days near that city. It is not believed the motor taking them from the White House this evening traveled any further than Baltimore.

It is reported, however, that very soon they will start on a trip to Europe, returning early in January to Williamstown, Mass., where Mr. Sayre will be assistant to President Garfield of Williams College.

Mrs. Sayre's traveling gown was a hunter's green zibeline coat and skirt, with chiffon waist embroidered in green, with which she wore a round hat of green moire trimmed in velvet.

CROWDS WATCH WHITE HOUSE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The whole of Washington was permeated with the spirit of the White House wedding today. There was a holiday aspect everywhere. The Senate was in session, but the Supreme Court and the House were not.

By 3:30 o'clock little groups of spectators had gathered at the head of the east avenue, while fewer groups lounged idly near the great iron gates which on occasions of this sort shut off from the public the avenue that runs between the great granite building of the State, the War, and the Navy Departments, and the squat structure in which the President and his force of secretaries and clerks have their offices. But it was not long before the groups increased in size, and at 3:45 o'clock, three-quarters of an hour before the time set for the wedding ceremony, there were lines of spectators on both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue facing the main façade of the mansion, while the crowds at the heads of the entrance streets had increased to several hundred persons. Most of these spectators were women.

The White House grounds were open as usual to the public for all the forenoon and part of the afternoon, and many visitors took advantage of the opportunity during this period to wander under the broad portico and look longingly at the drawn shades of the great East Room, behind which the Sayre-Wilson wedding ceremony was performed. Brilliant sunshine helped along the prevailing feeling that this was a holiday occasion.

At 2:30 o'clock all the gates leading to the White House grounds were closed to the public, and thereafter no person was admitted who did not have one of the special tickets issued for the occasion. Seventy policemen were specially detailed to guard the White House and its vicinity.

There was little to see, however, until 4 o'clock. Then the guests began arriving, some in motor limousines, others in open touring cars, others in victorias and broughams drawn by horses, and by far the greater number in more plebeian taxicabs.

The members of the Cabinet entered at one of the main gateways of the grounds, and were driven under the porte cochère and deposited on the broad front portico. The Ambassadors, the Ministers, and their families made a wide detour and entered the grounds by a rear gateway and were shown into the mansion through one of the south doors leading to the cloak rooms in the basement, always reserved for members of the Diplomatic Corps on state occasions.

The other guests approached the White House by means of the avenue nearest the Treasury Building and entered the mansion through the long east wing.

SAY TAMMANY KNEW OF M'GUIRE 'TERMS'

Learned Distasteful Facts When Seeking Sulzer Evidence, District Attorney Hears.

MATTER WAS THEN DROPPED

Fear Was That "Big Fellows" Would Be Involved—Fowler Begins His Fight.

Information has reached the District Attorney's office that the whole story of the relations of James K. McGuire, now under indictment for soliciting campaign funds from a corporation, and his brother, George H. McGuire, with the Union Oil Company was in the hands of Tammany Hall investigators as early as last August. Tammany Hall, it was reported, had intended to use the story in the Sulzer impeachment trial to discredit William Sulzer.

According to the information which reached Mr. Whitman's office, an inquirer was sent from Fourteenth Street to Fillmore Condit, New York representative of the Union Oil Company, to ascertain what part William Sulzer took in the McGuire dealings. The inquirer, it is understood, brought back a report which made Tammany Hall drop the matter with great rapidity.

This is why the McGuire matter never figured in the Sulzer trial, it was explained. Had the information been used in any way as reflecting on Sulzer it was thought many high Tammany officials would be involved. Tammany Hall, it was said, would have been willing enough to sacrifice the McGuire brothers, but there were big fellows involved.

When Arthur B. Chamberlin, the asphalt broker, was on the stand at the John Doe inquiry on Monday he pointed out that Condit's typewritten statement said specifically that James K. McGuire had asked for $5,000 as a "campaign contribution" and that nothing was said about the Democratic Party. The Condit statement, it was asserted later, quoted Chamberlin himself as saying to Condit: "I don't believe the McGuire brothers were ever authorized to make such an offer. I am going to Fourteenth Street to find out about it."

Condit goes on record in the statement, it was reported, as saying that Chamberlin did go to Fourteenth Street to find out, and that Chamberlin at that time was a personal friend of Charles F. Murphy and of his nephew, Charles F. Murphy, Jr.

When Chamberlin was on the stand the inference was that Condit wrote out his statement about the McGuire negotiations shortly after they occurred; that is, in the Summer of 1912. It appeared yesterday, however, that this formal statement was written last August, long after Chamberlain had left Condit's employ. This was the time when investigators were searching throughout the State for evidence against Sulzer for the impeachment proceedings.

Mr. Condit said yesterday that three weeks before the last election he personally had taken a report of the whole McGuire-Condit incident to the office of Borough President Lewis H. Pounds of Brooklyn, thinking that the story might be used in Mr. Pounds's campaign for election on the Fusion ticket. He left the information in charge of an engineer at the Borough President's office, he said, but it was never used in the campaign. Mr. Condit explained that he was interested in the election of the Fusion ticket.

Watching McGuire's House.

James K. McGuire's home in New Rochelle was watched all day yesterday by detectives. One of the detectives carried the bench warrant issued on Monday afternoon by Judge Crain. McGuire, however, did not appear.

During the afternoon a rumor was circulated in the Criminal Court Building to the effect that McGuire was aboard the steamship Caracas of the Red D Line on its way to this port from Porto Rico and South American ports. The Caracas is due at its pier at the foot of Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, to-morrow. Assistant District Attorneys Clark and Embree got into communication with the Red D Line officials, but said later that they had learned nothing to substantiate the rumor. It was learned, however, that Detective Leigh of the District Attorney's staff would be sent down the bay tomorrow to meet the steamship.

In the absence of District Attorney Whitman the John Doe investigation was suspended yesterday, and for the first time in two weeks there were no up-State contractors in the District Attorney's office.

Fowler's Fight Is On.

An argument in the case of Everett P. Fowler of Kingston, indicted for extortion because of his activities as a "bagman" for the Democratic State Committee, occupied Mr. Clark's attention.

Martin W. Littleton appeared before Justice Davis in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court on behalf of Fowler and moved for an inspection of the Grand Jury minutes and for the dismissal of the indictment against Fowler. Mr. Clark opposed both motions, but by agreement the final arguments on the motions were postponed until next Wednesday. Justice Davis, it is expected, will give his decision shortly after the final argument.

Mr. Littleton obtained from Mr. Clark a summary of the Grand Jury testimony on which Fowler was indicted. This was briefly to the effect that Fowler had extorted $250 from Seneca P. Hull, a contractor of Cortland, in Syracuse in 1911; that Hull made out a check to Norman E. Mack, and that the check was sent to Arthur A. McLean, Treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, at 1 West Thirty-fourth Street; that the check was indorsed by both Mack and McLean, and that it was cashed in the Fourth National Bank of this city.

Basing his argument on this summary Mr. Littleton contended that Fowler should be tried in Onondaga County in which Syracuse is situated, and that the New York County courts had no jurisdiction.

"It will appear from the Grand Jury minutes," Mr. Littleton said, "that the contract held by Hull was obtained from the State Highway Department in Albany and that Mr. Fowler and others called on Hull to meet him and others in Syracuse in 1911. According to Hull, Fowler admonished him to give a campaign contribution.

For the purposes of this argument I will assume that Fowler used the alleged extortionate methods of which he is accused, and obtained a check for $250 which was turned over to Fowler and finally transmitted to Norman E. Mack, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and deposited in the Fourth National Bank of New York City.

"If these be the facts," proceeded Mr. Littleton, "I contend that we have the right to inspect the Grand Jury minutes and this court has no jurisdiction to try the issue. I have no desire to muddle or complicate the District Attorney's case by seeking to learn what evidence the District Attorney has. But I am entitled to 'shoot on sight' regarding the question of jurisdiction."

Mr. Clark argued that the circumstances of the case placed the jurisdiction in New York County as well as in Onondaga County. He asserted that the money transaction had not been completed until Hull's check passed through the Fourth National Bank and he asserted that both Mack and McLean had indorsed the check in New York County.

Acknowledging that jurisdiction lay in either county he insisted that the District Attorney would oppose vigorously any effort to transfer the responsibility of trying the case. Justice Davis adjourned the proceedings until next Wednesday in accordance with the agreement reached between Mr. Clark and Mr. Littleton.

JURY HEARS HENNESSY.

Investigator Testifies at Putnam County Graft Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

CARMEL, Nov. 25.—The special Grand Jury which is investigating charges of highway graft in Putnam County adjourned this afternoon until Dec. 1 because information which it desired was not at hand.

The jury, after many adjournments in the Summer, started anew on the investigation yesterday. John A. Hennessy, the Sulzer investigator, was examined as a witness this morning. District Attorney Henry J. Rusk is conducting the investigation.

DISCLAIMS A. P. A. ATTACK.

George P. Newman of 3 Fifth Avenue Says He Isn't President.

George P. Newman of 3 Fifth Avenue, disclaimed all responsibility last night for a recent circular sent out by the American Protective Association, better known as the "A. P. A." and containing attacks on Mayor-elect Mitchel, Collector Dudley Field Malone, and Gov. Martin H. Glynn because of their Catholicism.

Mr. Newman said that he had been notified of his election as President of the association, which had been accomplished without his knowledge or desire and had not been installed in office when the circular was sent out. He said he had known nothing of the circular until he had seen it published in THE TIMES.

Mr. Newman said that in the last campaign his sympathies were with Mitchel. He added he had no sympathy with the personal attacks in the circulars and other literature on Gov. Glynn and Collector Malone. Mr. Newman said when he was informed of his election, he asked time to acquaint himself with the association's plans and purposes, and insisted that no publicity be given to his election until he had made his decision on the question of its acceptance.

Mr. Newman also disclaimed the attacks on the Catholic Church as a body contained in the circular. He said:

"It is not my purpose to assail any man's religion, but to the contrary, to make his religious liberty secure, so long as it does not interfere with any other religion or with the affairs of state, which governs men of all religions and which, therefore, should be superior to any and all earthly powers—religious or otherwise—within its sphere

"Now, whether or not we are in any immediate danger of such sectarian interefernce I am unable to say, as I must frankly admit that I have not given the matter any great consideration or study. Hence it would be folly, unwise, and unjust on my part to bring any accusation against any religious body or individual; but if such were the case I want to assure the American public that I would be one of the first to oppose and prosecute to the utmost extent the offender or guilty ones. And if there is not any immediate need of taking prevetive measures along this line there is an old adage which says, 'In time of peace prepare for war,' as a splendid way to insure peace is to be ready for war. So it may be along these lines that the American Protective Association has been formed. At any rate, this could be explained better by one who is more familiar with its motives than I, and if there is just causes for the charges published in the articles it is a matter that will be left with the authors thereof to explain."

UNCLE REMUS STOCK CAUSES A BIG ROW

NO ISSUE IN DECEMBER

John T. Hettrick Fails to Get a Committee to Examine the Books.

Stockholders of the Pulitzer Magazine Company, Inc., in which Walter Pulitzer—pending an action now before the Supreme Court—holds the controlling interest, held a stormy meeting yesterday afternoon in the office of Henry L. Ruppert, counsel for the company, at 1 Madison Avenue. The meeting was called to hear a report on the financial status of the company. George W. Glaze, counsel for Mr. Pulitzer, offered the information that the corporation was unable to get out the December number of the Uncle Remus Magazine, two numbers of which it has issued, because of destroyed credit, brought about by defamatory publications and court actions. Mr. Glaze once referred to the session yesterday as an autopsy.

The minority stockholders, headed by John T. Hettrick, continued their attack on Mr. Pulitzer. Mr. Hettrick finally introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of three minority stockholders, of which he was to be a member, to investigate the books of the company. That started trouble immediately, and Mr. Hettrick consented to the withdrawal of his name. Then the resolution was put to a vote, the committee proposed being composed of Louis Posner, Jerome S. Hess, and George W. Jones. Mr. Glaze, proxy for Walter Pulitzer, voted the Pulitzer stock against the resolution, and defeated it.

Mr. Glaze apologetically, but none the less firmly, controlled the meeting. First in opposition to the wishes of most of the minority stockholders, as expressed by their vote, he selected Henry L. Ruppert as Chairman. Hettrick, for the minority, made a protest against the legal right of Mr. Glaze to control the meeting with Pulitzer stock, asserting that the Supreme Court had been called upon to determine the ownership of the stock, and that the suit was pending. Then things warmed up.

George W. Jones, representing men in the South who subscribed for about $1,300 of the company's stock, pressed Mr. Glaze for a detailed financial report. Mr. Glaze reviewed first the history of the Pulitzer Publishing Company and then that of the Pulitzer Magazine Company.

"That is all very interesting, I suppose," said Mr. Jones, "but what I would like to hear is a statement of the finances." Finally a report of Oct. 31 was read, showing the chief assets of the company to be "copyrights" valued at something like $160,000. Mr. Jones asked what copyrights were, and being informed, reached for his hat.

"Well, I don't see that there is anything more that interests me very much," he asserted. "I was asked to come here to see if the stock purchased was worth anything."

Mr. Jones, however, decided to stay and hear the worst. Mr. Glaze in an impassioned speech charged that the company had been demoralized financially, for the present at least, by the actions of Mr. Hettrick, who, he said, had caused to be published in The World and other newspapers stories that Walter Pulitzer's affairs were to be investigated by the Grand Jury. The point had been reached, he said, when the credit of the company was destroyed, and he thought the real question to be considered was whether the company should be continued or dropped.

Mr. Hettrick broke in to ask vehemently whether or not it was not true that all Walter Pulitzer had paid for the Uncle Remus magazine was $750, and why he should have in return received $160,000 worth of stock. That, replied Mr. Glaze, was a question the courts were to decide. Then Mr. Hettrick wanted a more complete accounting for the $32,000 for which stock was sold and for the sale of which, he understood, agents had received as high as 35 per cent.

He repeated the charge that some of these agents had used the name of The World, which is in no way connected with the Walter Pulitzer interests, to sell stock. He said he represented men "worth much more than any of us here may ever hope to obtain," and they wanted to find out about their investments and whether or not they had been misled. He mentioned the name of Frank Woolworth as one investor.

The financial report submitted showed an outlay of about $10,000 an issue for the Uncle Remus magazine. Because of recent developments, Mr. Glaze said, it was impossible to sell stock or obtain money for the publication of another number.

Walter Pulitzer did not attend the meeting. It was stated that he had delegated his powers to Mr. Glaze because he feared that his presence would result in further controversies. Nothing of a definite nature had been accomplished when the meeting adjourned.

OBSERVE EVACUATION DAY.

Old Guard Parades and Sons of Revolution Smoke.

The one hundred and thirtieth anniversary of the evacuation of New York by the British troops was celebrated yesterday by the Old Guard Veteran Battalion. Commanded by Major S. Ellis Briggs, the Old Guard assembled at the City Hall, wearing their Winter uniforms. After being reviewed by Mayor Adolph L. Kline, the guaardsmen paraded down Broadway to the Battery.

There a crowd of 3,000 persons awaited them. Two field pieces from Governors Island fired a national salute of twenty-one guns, after which the battalion dispersed and went to the Hotel Plaza for luncheon, marching up Fifth Avenue from Forty-second Street. Admiral Sigsbee and Lieut. L. D. Fancher were guests at the luncheon. The famous Old Guard punch was served.

More than 200 were present at an Evacuation Day smoker in Delmonico's given last night by the New York State Sons of the Revolution. Robert Oliphant, First Vice President of the society, presided and read an account of the evacuation by the British and the reoccupation by American troops. A lecture illustrated with stereopticon views on "Westchester County in the Colonial and the Revolutionary Period" was given by Aivah P. French.

Among those present were Henry Russell Browne, Col. William M. Ladd, Col. Eugene K. Austin, Augustus G. Heaton, Talbot Oliphant, John M. Blake, Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, Talbot Root, Stephen W. Giles, Henry St. John Hyde, the Rev. James Clarence Jones, and W. L. Snyder.

HELD FOR $600 FORGERY.

Cleveland Man Charged with Signing Broker's Name to Check.

A man who described himself as Edward A. Moore of Cleveland was locked up in the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station last night charged with forging the name of William R. Jones, a broker, of 25 Broad Street, to a $600 check. Detectives F. J. Farley and William Lyman of the Burns agency had attempted to arrest him at Thirty-ninth Street and Second Avenue, but he had torn himself away in a struggle in which he sustained two severe scalp wounds only to run into the arms of Patrolman Wangerman.

The Burns men had trailed a messenger boy bearing a decoy package from M. A. Forgotson's jewelry store at 1,342 Broadway. They said last night that Moore had gone into the store a few days ago and had presented a $600 check in payment for diamonds valued at $560. He had sent the messenger boy to get the diamonds.

In his pockets the police found $251 in cash, two watches, a pawn ticket for a suit of clothes, a number of valuable rings, a 1,000-mile book of transportation on the New York Central Lines, and a Pullman ticket good on a train leaving Grand Central Station for Buffalo last night.

HENRY E. HOWLAND'S WILL.

Estate Is Divided Among His Widow and Family.

The will of Henry Elias Howland of the law firm of Howland, Murray & Prentice of 37 Wall Street was filed for probate yesterday in the Surrogates' Court. Mr. Howland died at his home, 10 East Tenth Street, on Nov. 7, and left an estate estimated in the petition filed with the will as more than $20,000. Mr. Howland left $1,000 in his will and $4,000 additional in a codicil to Katharine H. Bellows, his sister. A bequest of $1,000 to Alfred C. Howland, his brother, is revoked in the codicil.

Mr. Howland left property at 14 East Ninth Street in trust for life to Annah J. W. Howland, his wife. At her death the property is to go to her children. The residuary estate is left in equal shares to the three children, Charles P., John, and Frances L. Howland. The two sons, named as executors of the will, are asked to pay to Mr. Howland's sister-in-law, Clara W. Howland, enough to make her income $1,800 a year.

ROADS SAY LOSSES JUSTIFY NEW RATES

Railway Men Make Known Their Plan to Raise Intrastate Charges Also.

FACE "SLOW STARVATION"

Witness Shows Recent Deficits of 28 Roads Contrasted with Previous Surpluses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The forty-nine railroads east of the Mississippi which are seeking to raise their freight rates 5 per cent. completed their main case for the advance to-day before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which thereupon adjourned the hearing till Dec. 10. Meantime the commission and opposing counsel will analyze the mass of testimony submitted by railroad accountants, rate makers, and traffic experts.

The burden of the evidence tendered was that while the roads, generally, were enjoying an increased business, the returns from operations were continuously decreasing, until as General Manager Maxwell of the Wabash said:

"The situation is becoming daily more serious. We are suffering from slow starvation."

It was stated that the demands of the traveling and the shipping public for improvement and extension of railroad facilities could be met by the roads only as they were enabled to obtain more money. The margin of profit, it was asserted, was so constantly narrowing that it was becoming increasingly difficult to obtain the necessary additional capital with which adequately to maintain, equip, and operate the roads.

The witnesses to-day were George M. Shriver, Second Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio, who continued to review the financial and operating status of that system; W. C. Maxwell, General Traffic Manager of the Wabash system; Dr. Frank Haigh Dixon, a professor of Dartmouth College and statistician of the Bureau of Railway Economics, called by the railroads to submit various tables covering the operation of the forty-nine railroad systems applying for the increase; C. C. McCain, who, as Chairman of the Trunk Line Association, mapped out the basic elements of the 5 per cent. increase; E. Morris, Chairman of the Central Freight Association, who worked out the 5 per cent. rate increase for the territory west of Buffalo, extending to the Mississippi River, and R. H. Lang, General Coal Freight Agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who analyzed the effect of the proposed rate increases on coal, coke, and iron traffic.

Applies to Intrastate Rates.

From the three last-named experts the commission learned for the first time that the general advance of 5 per cent. was to become applicable, if sustained, to intrastate as well as interstate traffic. The tariffs filed with the commission relate only to interstate traffic. The commission has no authority over rates wholly intrastate. It was explained that the railroads, pending the action of the commission on the proposed increase, had voluntarily suspended its application to intrastate rates. The increase also would be applicable to import and export rates.

The testimony of Mr. Maxwell of the Wabash related to the railroads in the Central Freight Association territory, which includes all roads between Pittsburgh and Buffalo at one end and the Mississippi River at the other, with the Ohio River at the south. This region embraces Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, New York, and the Canadian stretch between Buffalo and Detroit.

Mr. Maxwell produced elaborate data concerning thirty-eight railroads with 31,957 miles of line, showing as a result of their operation in 1913 a gross increase in operating revenues of $78,000,000 above 1910. Nevertheless, after paying operating expenses and taxes these roads suffered a loss of $12,000,000 in operating income. This result was due to an increase in the ratio of operating expenses and taxes to gross operating revenue between 1910 and 1913 of from 72 per cent to 78.2 per cent., despite the fact that large sums of new capital were invested in additions and betterments.

Mr Maxwell directed particular attention to the condition of a special group of twenty-eight railroads, including the Big Four system, Vandalia, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Grand Trunk Western, Grand Rapids, Illinois Central, Chicago & Alton, and Wabash Railroads.

According to Mr. Maxwell many of these railroads would soon be headed toward receivers unless this 5 per cent. increase in freight rates was allowed. The net corporate income of the properties was actually $8,000,000 less than in 1908, although in this five-year period $180,000,000 of new capital was put into them. Statistics submitted by Mr. Maxwell showed that in 1913 only nine of them paid dividends.

Since 1908 the aggregate amount of dividends paid by these twenty-eight roads was $13,258,261 in 1909, $13,285,165 in 1910, $12,969,028 in 1911, $12,199,763 in 1912, and only $10,242,130 in 1913. In 1910 these twenty-eight roads had a balance of $2,343,240 after paying dividends.

Deficits of Twenty-eight Roads.

Since the latter year these twenty-eight roads, after paying dividends, had deficit of $1,389,444 in 1911, $10,507,852 in 1912, and $8,374,420 in 1913.

Keen interest was manifested in the testimony of Mr. McCain, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Lange and their analysis of the proposed 5 per cent. rate of increase. Mr. McCain said that the minimum rate observed in arranging the increase was 5 cents more on tonnage traffic and a quarter of a cent a pound on traffic by the pound weight.

Mr. McCain explained that the tariffs affected by the 5 per cent. increase continued the existing differentials on west bound freight from Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The rates between points in Trunk Line territory such as from New York to Syracuse were all advanced 5 per cent., said Mr. McCain. These rates all stood on their own bases, and were not related to other rates. The ex-Lake grain rates from New York to Buffalo as well as the so-called F. O. B. rates, Mr. McCain said, were all raised 5 per cent.

Commissioner Clements inquired whether any of the tariffs filed carried a proposed increase in State rates. Mr. McCain said that a majority of the rate increases in the tariffs filed were interstate, but that the carriers had adjusted the local rates. In reply to another inquiry from Commissioner Clements, Mr. McCain testified that import and export rates were included in the 5 per cent rate.

"How did you treat State rates that are limited by State statute?" asked Mr. Brandeis.

"My impression is that they were all advanced 5 per cent.," said Mr. McCain.

"Regardless of the statutes?"

"Yes," replied Mr. McCain.

"But," Mr. Butterfield explained, "they have all been voluntarily suspended by the carriers pending the outcome of the decision of the commission regarding the 5 per cent. increase in interstate rates."

Anthracite Coal Rates Remain.

Mr. Brandeis asked whether the anthracite coal rates were about the only ones that were not raised. Mr. Butterfield responded that, as a general proposal, that was so. Judge Clements inquired whether the 5 per cent. increase was exceeded on any commodity. Mr. McCain said no computation had been made as to commodities, but that the variations from 5 per cent. in the increase, whether above or below 5 per cent. were about evenly divided.

Mr. Butterfield interposed to say that the railroads estimated that the 5 per cent. increase would produce about $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 additional gross revenue.

E. Morris, Chairman of the Central Freight Association, explained that between points in that territory, both interestate and intrastate, class rates of 3¾ cents per 100 pounds were increased 5¼ cents a pound, and rates in excess of 5¼ cents per 100 pounds were increased 5 per cent.

Mr. Morris said that the class rates from Chicago to New York were to be increased 5 per cent., as follows:

First class, 78.8 cents, instead of 73 cents per 100; second class, 68.3 cents, instead of 65; third class, 52.5, instead of 50 cents; fourth class, 36.8, instead of 35; fifth class, 31.5 cents, instead of 30, and 26.3 cents instead of 25 cents.

The class rates from other points of Central Freight Association territory to New York City. Chairman Morris explained, were increased subject to the established percentage of the advanced basing rates as named above to apply from Chicago to New York. For instance, the rates from Toledo to New York would be 78 per cent. of the Chicago-to-New York rates.

The rates from interior Eastern basing points were computed, he said, subject to the established percentage of the advanced basing rates to New York City, the rate from Chicago to Albany being made 96 per cent. and the rate from Chicago to Rochester 74 per cent. of the Chicago-to-New York rate.

Grain By-Product Rates.

According to Mr. Morris, the rates on grain by-products for export from Chicago to New York were increased 5 per cent. He said that from points in the West, taking 100 per cent. or less of the Chicago to New York rate, these percentages were preserved on shipments of export grain by-products for Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Newport News, and that the differentials as between these points were preserved in the increases.

Mr. Morris said as to the domestic grain rates that the basing rate from Chicago to New York was increased from 5¼ to 7½ cents per 100 pounds.

To the East, said Mr. Large, no advances were provided for the anthracite coal rates, first, because these rates were already under attack, and, second, because the large tonnage in small sizes was being sold now at less than cost in competition with bituminous coal.

It was also explained by Mr. Large that the roads had intended to advance the intrastate coal and iron rates 5 per cent., but that the tariffs have not yet been filed, pending the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in a big case.

One of the attorneys representing coal shippers wanted to know whether, if the coal rates now existing were found to provide 75 or 100 per cent. profit, Mr. Large felt that the 5 per cent. increase on coal rates would still be justified. He promptly replied in the affirmative.

PARTY CONFERENCE TO PUSH MONEY BILL

Senate Leaders Call One for To-day to Clear Way for Trust Measure Next Session.

AIM AT A COMPROMISE

Hitchcock Says Senate Changes to Administration Measure Have Introduced 60 Per Cent. New Matter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Democratic leaders of the Senate decided to-day to exercise every pressure to hasten the passage of the Currency bill. They realize that President Wilson, in insisting upon the continued session of Congress, was largely actuated by a desire to leave the regular session free for his bills regulating trust control. With the extra session practically over, they feel that unless something is done it will be nearly March before the Senate will be able to consider anything other than the Owen-Glass bill.

The first effort made will be through a party conference which Senator Kern called for to-morrow morning. No attempt will be made to reach an ironclad agreement affecting the fundamental provisions of the bill. But a programme will be sought that will expedite legislation and proposals will be discussed looking to a compromise by which a solid majority may be lined up to support the bill in a form satisfactory to the President and the House.

It is still undecided whether any overtures will be made to the Republican side of the chamber. The party leaders have already shown clearly that they hope for stricter party action rather than concessions to the minority. But in their eagerness to prevent protracted debate, which now threatens to last two months, they may try to reach some informal understanding, concentrating speeches on particular subjects and reducing their number as much as possible.

Senator Owen announced to-day that he would hereafter insist that the Senate remain in session every day until 6 o'clock. He said the delay was costing the country $5,000,000 a day. The unanimous consent agreement by which the Alaska Railroad bill must soon come before the Senate, he said, would be allowed as little as possible to displace the currency measure. At every lull in the Alaskan debate, he said, he would bring forward the Currency bill and press for votes on particular amendments.

Considerable progress was made in the debate to-day. Mr. Hitchcock, the Nebraska Democrat, who headed the Republican half of the Committee on Banking and Currency, replied to Senator Owen's speech of yesterday. Mr. Hitchcock, besides praising Mr. Owen's industry and good temper, spoke in the highest terms of the President's determination and courage in urging currency reform. But for his insistence, said Mr. Hitchcock, the work of reform, already well advanced at both ends of the Capitol, might have lingered for several years to come.

Mr. Hitchcock said that even the Democratic measure, which was supposed to accord with the wishes of the House and the President, was in reality 60 per cent. new matter, while only 40 per cent. of it stood as written by the House. His own bill, he said, was only 64 per cent. new, while he retained 36 per cent. of the House language.

The Senator contended that the House bill and the Owen bill were faulty in that they forced banks to give up a part of their present capital for the new system.

"To take away from the individual banks at one sweep one-tenth of their cash capital was, in my opinion, a mistake. It was to aggrevate the evil of lack of capital which already existed, and still further reduce the margin of safety for the depositor. And so I have joined in recommending an amendment by which the capital in the regional banks, instead of being supplied by the banks themselves, is to be supplied by the people of the United States."

The divergence of views in the Senate on currency was indicated to-day when Mr. Newlands of Nevada, a Democrat, and a supporter of the Administration, introduced a resolution amending the bill in most of its important features. Instead of eight regional reserve banks he would establish one in every State. He also proposed important changes in the National Banking act as it affected reserves and capitalization.

Mr. Shafroth of Colorado, a member of the Banking and Currency Committee, argued that while central banks of issue had been found satisfactory in European countries, the size of the United States was so great as to make a regional system really a fair counterpart of the European institutions. He thought the bill did not provide enough regions while the Hitchcock proposals he considered as bad as a central bank.

Reception Room for Warship Crew.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Secretary Daniels approved to-day plans for a reception and reading room for enlisted men on the new battleship New York. Mr. Daniels said the provision was a new departure, and has been inaugurated to increase the comfort of the crew and add to the attractiveness of the ship for enlisted men and their visitors when in port. Similar changes probably will be inaugurated on other vessels.

MAIDA DUPREE A SUICIDE.

Actress Discouraged by Failure—Followed Le Maire from England.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—An investigation by the Coroner into the death of Maida Dupree, a New York vaudeville actress, also known as Maida Lane and Betty Daley, who committed suicide in a hotel here last night by taking poison, brought to light the fact that she had followed George Le Maire, an actor, to this country from England. Le Maire is appearing with a theatrical company in this city. Last night he received a note signed "Betty Daley," summoning him to her hotel. The young woman was found unconscious. She died several hours later.

Before the Coroner this afternoon Le Maire said he met Miss Dupree in London nearly a year ago. She had been ambitious to succeed as an actress and had failed. She had written and wired him in London and New York, appealing to him to help her to success. Le Maire said he did try to get her an engagement, but avoided her. The police at first believed that she was infatuated with Le Maire, but this he denied.

Le Maire said the young woman's father lived in New York, and was named Grossman or Grassman. Among her effects were jewels valued at $2,800, and pawn tickets for jewels pledged in New York for $1,370.

TO PRESCRIBE LINER LANES.

Government Instead of Steamship Control Broached by Hydrographers

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The question whether the Governments of the United States and the European countries should prescribe the lanes to be traversed by ocean liners and pass laws requiring all vessels under the respective flags to adhere strictly to those lanes is raised in the annual report of the Naval Hydrographic Office, made public to-day.

The lanes now in use were adopted by the steamship companies April 15, 1913, and will continue in force until changed by them, unless an international agreement should be reached. The Naval Hydrographer, Capt. George F. Cooper, is at present in London, attending the International Conference on Safety at Sea, and it is expected that he will submit the proposed change to that body.

ARTISTS GIVE DINNER TO J. ALDEN WEIR

Noted Painter the Guest of Honor at Feast at Salmagundi Club.

HE TELLS OF EARLY DAYS

Votes of Asylum Inmates Sent Him Ahead in Popularity Contest—What a Dealer Advised.

More than one hundred artists gathered last night to do honor to J. Alden Weir, the noted painter, at a dinner in his honor in the exhibition gallery of the Salmagundi Club, 14 West Twelfth Street. Mr. Weir was assured that he would not have to make a speech, but after hearing the speeches made in his praise by Royal Cortissoz and F. Ballard Williams, and eating the dinner prepared by the incomparable Pollock, chef of whom the Salmagundi Club is so proud, Mr. Weir rose from his chair to offer some reminiscences of his early career.

"Some time ago when I sent a painting," said Mr. Weir, "to an exhibition out West, I received a letter from the Secretary of the association giving the show, in which he told me that I was carrying off great honors, because my painting was running neck and neck with Mr. Brown's.

"Later I received a second letter in which I learned that every person paying 10 cents was entitled to a vote on the merits of the exhibitors.

"'You and Mr. Brown were running neck and neck,' the writer said, 'until yesterday, when we, the inmates of the asylum for the half-insane, were let in to see the exhibition, and then you forged ahead.'"

Mr. Weir went on to relate how he and John Henry Twachtman had given an exhibition in the year 1880, in which each had entered forty pictures. For several days the exhibition went on and not a picture was sold.

"I finally tried to persuade an art dealer," he continued, "to buy some of the pictures, but he objected that there was no foreground.

"'You can't sell pictures nowadays without flowers and things in the foreground,' he told me. 'You say that is a middle distance, but it won't do. The people demand flowers and pretty things in the front of it.

"'Now, take Jones's painting,' he said. 'He was trying to sell pictures with yellowish, unhealthy pools of water on them. But everybody thought they looked malarial and unwholesome, and he could not sell a picture. Well, I told him that if he wanted to make a success he would have to paint good, clear water through which you can see the stones on the bottom. He took my advice, and see the success that he has made.'

Finally, Mr. Weir said, he sold one picture, but Twachtman was not even that successful. So that Twachtman's feelings should not be hurt, Mr. Weir and his friends arranged to find a purchaser for a Twachtman painting. This was accomplished, and the sale made Twachtman very happy. Several days later, however, the two painters were invited to visit the place where the Twachtman picture was hung. They found the painting had been hung upside down.

Mr. Weir's recollections had such an effect on a white-haired member of the club that he rose to his feet, apologized for being out of order, and proposed a toast to Twachtman and Weir, which was drunk standing.

SAYS VERA SCOTT IS RAVING

Official Denial of Her Story That She Shot Young Field.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—James Simpson, Vice President of Marshall Field & Co., said to-day that Mrs. Vera Prosser Scott's statement that she shot Marshall Field, Jr., was a "lie, the ravings of a drug-mad unfortunate."

"The story that Mr. Field was killed in the Everleigh Club is a lie," Mr. Simpson continued. "I refer you to Coroner Hoffman, Dr. Billings and Dr. Bevan, who made exhaustive reports on the case at the time. These gentlemen will tell you that Mr. Field was accidentally shot in his own home. Rumors at the time of his death were that Mr. Field had been shot in the Everleigh resort, but the facts when presented to the Coroner's jury showed this was untrue."

Hans Schmidt's Trial Put Off.

Judge Foster in the Court of General Sessions yesterday postponed for two weeks the trial of Hans Schmidt, murderer of Anna Aumuller. The application was made by Alphonse G. Koelble, Schmidt's counsel, and was unopposed by Assistant District Attorney Delahanty, who insisted, however, that the case come to trial not later than Dec. 8.

To Commercial Travelers

TWENTY years ago, when Munsey's Magazine struck out on new and popular lines, bounding as it did into a nation-wide circulation, you, the Traveling Men of America, were among the first to recognize its merits and did more than any other body of men to support it and commend it to your friends and acquaintances.

Now, just two decades later, I am giving you another new type of magazine in The Munsey—this time a far bigger and far better magazine than before.

With its full book-length novel, complete in each issue, Munsey's Magazine is preeminently the magazine for you commercial men who have long hours to while away on railway trains and in hotels away from home. So situated, there isn't much satisfaction in reading a fragment of a novel—just a sop, that's all.

But there is a lot of satisfaction in finding in your magazine a full complete novel—exactly the kind you would pay $1.50 for in book form. And there is a further satisfaction in the fact that in Munsey's Magazine you will get this novel for 15 cents—get novel and all the other features, illustrated and unillustrated, that go to make up a standard illustrated magazine.

Get the December Munsey and read George Barr McCutcheon's great novel, "Black is White." I strongly recommend it.

Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. FUND FAILS BY $226,498

But $100,000 Is Pledged Conditionally and a Final Effort Will Be Made To-day.

WORKERS BUSY UNTIL LATE

Total for the Day More Than $300,000—John D. Rockefeller Adds $150,000 to His $350,000.

When the two weeks' campaign to raise $4,000,000 for a building fund for the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations came to its scheduled end last night the workers had fallen $226,498 short of the desired amount. George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee, announced that $100,000 more had been contributed anonymously, on condition that the fund be completed to-day, and stated that he, for one, was heartily in favor of extending the time another twenty-four hours. He then asked if there was any one present among the leaders at the meeting of the workers on the first floor of the Hotel Manhattan who was not in favor of going on. There was not a dissenting vote.

The failure of New York to carry out successfully the great money raising movement was a bitter disappointment to those who have given their entire time, thought, and efforts to the campaign for the last two weeks. When the first session of the evening adjourned shortly before 9 o'clock and there was still $258,139 to be raised in order to bring the campaign to a successful close on schedule time, many of the workers did not leave the hotel, either because they had no one else to canvass or else because it was supposed that some donor—as yet unknown—would contribute enough to make up the final deficit. On the other hand, many of the leaders sped to the telephone and kept busy for more than an hour trying to raise the necessary amount. Some of them even went among the guests of the hotel in the lobby and succeeded in getting small amounts.

The meeting was again called to order by Mr. Perkins at 10:57 o'clock, and $31,641 in subscriptions was added to those reported but an hour or so before.

The Last Subscribers.

Among these subscriptions were the following of $1,000 or more:

Anonymous	$10,000
Mrs. Edwin Gould	1,000
Norman B. Ream	1,000
Henry Lewis Morris	1,000
Mrs. Bradley Martin, Jr.	1,000
George T. Brokaw	1,000
Isaac Guggenheim	1,000
James T. Pyle	1,000

There was a significant pause when it was announced that the fund had fallen over $200,000 short. The news was almost a blow to most of the workers who confidently expected that some public spirited New Yorkers would come to the rescue at the last moment. There was a murmur of disappointment, and then Mr Perkins rapped on the table for order, and made his announcement of the $100,000 conditional gifts.

"We are so near that we ought to go on," said Mr. Perkins. "Our showing is truly remarkable considering the conditions existing in New York and our lack of ability to raise money in the financial district, where large amounts are generally subscribed.

"I believe we owe it to the cause and to the people who have contributed so generously from small incomes. I don't know where the Executive Committee can get the balance. We have been unable—as others of you have—to get certain people by telephone, and several of our telegrams have not been answered. We have covered the ground for large subscriptions pretty thoroughly. It is a question to be decided here now whether to extend the time until to-morrow and try to raise the $126,000 we still need. Is there any one here who is not ready to go out to-morrow and work harder than on any other day of the campaign?" There were no replies.

"Very well, then," continued Mr. Perkins, "we will meet here again to-morrow night."

At twenty-three minutes to 9 o'clock Chairman Perkins had called the workers together and said that about $258,000 was necessary by 10 o'clock.

The final luncheon of the campaign in the headquarters at 25 Broad Street yesterday was marked by frequent outbursts of applause as the contributions were announced. The total for the twenty-four hours between Monday noon and luncheon time yesterday was given as $225,292. This brought the grand total to $3,655,539, leaving $344,161 still to be raised by 10 o'clock last night. The committee chairmen and the team leaders were urged to leave no stone—or rather checkbook—unturned to complete the fund, and the luncheon was brought to a speedy termination so that the canvassers might hurry back to work.

OPPOSE STATE AID DIRECT TO WIDOWS

Morris D. Waldman Would Utilize Existing Private Agencies.

DANGER IN PUBLIC RELIEF

Pension Fund to Keep Fatherless Families Together Still Under Discussion.

The Commission on Relief for Widowed Mothers appointed by the Legislature continued its sessions yesterday at the City Hall. Frank Tucker, Vice President of the Provident Loan Society, suggested that a State administration of a pension fund for widowed mothers might be devised in such a way as to minimize the possible abuses which professional charity workers had advanced in their arguments opposing the plan.

Chairman Aaron J. Levy of the commission asked Mr. Tucker if he knew that the State had legislated for the payment to farmers of the value of cattle destroyed for tuberculosis and horses destroyed for glanders. Mr. Tucker said he did, and he agreed with Mr. Levy that the fraud which marked the early administration of these laws had been almost wholly wiped out as the administrators of the law gained experience.

Morris D. Waldman of the United Hebrew Charities said the safest way to administer any State aid to widowed mothers to prevent the breaking up of homes through the commitment of their children to institutions was through the present "child caring institutions." Mr. Waldman said most of the institutions at present have the right to board out the children or to give them away for adoption, as well as to care for them in asylums, but that they have no power in most cases to support the children with their mothers. Such a power, he said, should be granted to them.

Mr. Waldman said that in proposing this he was not unmindful of the dangers of entrusting public monies to private institutions. He said he offered the suggestion from his experience with the Jewish child-caring institutions of this city, which he pronounced the best of which he had ever heard. He opposed the administration of a widow's pension fund through public agencies.

As an example of their inefficiency he said 24 per cent. of all children who came under the New York Bureau of Dependent Children had been deserted by their fathers. Their support costs the city $750,000 to $800,000 annually. Yet the Bureau and other city departments, he said, made no effort to bring the fathers back and force them to support their families. In five years, however, he said the United Hebrew Charities, a private body, had checked family desertion by half by systematic efforts to bring back the absconding fathers. Five years ago the society expended $34,000 in caring for children whose fathers had fled. During the past year they spent less than $15,000. The total number of cases of desertion he said had been gradually cut from 400 annually to less than 200.

Mr. Waldman said that in a public administration not only would the work be less efficiently done, but there would be abuses resulting from the pressure which might be brought to bear upon the officials.

Mr. Waldman and Commissioner Sophie Irene Loeb, who is a suffragette, had a spirited colloquy at the end of his testimony, in which he stated that since the death of a husband and father removed, "the chief financial and moral prop of the family," the private society should act "in loco parentis." Miss Loeb strongly disagreed with the assertion that a husband was to be assumed to be the "chief moral prop." Mr. Waldman stuck to it that a wife needed the guidance of a husband, and a child the guidance of a father.

Publicly administered charity was severely criticized by Mr. Waldman, who said that it was impossible to get the best administrators. Those at the top, he said, were selected for political considerations, while those at the bottom were chosen by the inflexible requirements of the civil service, which made it impossible to choose the most fit.

Alfred T. White, President of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, the charity organization of that borough, opposed the proposition to pension widowed mothers as the entering wedge for the re-establishment of outdoor public relief. This, he said, had demoralized industrious men and women prior to its abolition in Brooklyn in 1878.

Dr. Henry Berg opposed the proposition as a tax payer and gave it as his opinion as a physician that children of widowed mothers were better off in institutions, if the motner was destitute. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who followed him, said that every one admitted that the best institutions were but substitutes for the home and that it was always preferable to keep the children with their mother. He urged a thorough investigation of the subject.

C. Sulzberger, President of the National Conference of Jewish Charities, asserted that the best way was to have the State supplement the funds of existing private agencies. Mrs. V. G. Sinkovich of the Greenwich Settlement House avered Governmental relief.

CITY BREVITIES.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the National Civic Federation will be held at the Hotel Astor on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 11 and 12. The programme will include reports from departments treating of workmen's compensation, pure food and drugs, conciliation and mediation laws, welfare work, regulation of municipal utilities, and of industrial corporations.

Frank Moss, Assistant District Attorney, will address the members of the City College Club, 63 West Fifty-sixth Street, on Saturday evening, Nov. 29.

The annual meeting of subscribers to the Crippled Children's East Side Free School will be held at 157 Henry Street on Monday, Dec. 8.

SARGENT'S FRIEZE OF 'THE PROPHETS'

American Mural Artist Is Leading Portrait Painter of All Europe.

While every one who has seen an advance copy of the special rotogravure section devoted to The Girl of To-day, which will be one of the features of the Christmas number of THE NEW YORK TIMES, is enthusiastic about the pictures of typical American girls it contains and the splendid work of the new rotogravure process of photographic reproduction, admiration for the colored section of the same number, which will be devoted to a reproduction of the famous frieze of John Singer Sargent, entitled "The Prophets," is no less keen.

Any one who has never been in Europe, or more especially in England, for any length of time finds it difficult to realize the position that this American artist fills abroad. For many years Sargent has been considered the leading portrait painter of all Europe. His vogue in England has been approached by no artist since the days of Sir Joshua Reynolds and Gainsborough, and his reputation is such that for years he has been able to refuse to paint any person who did not appeal to him as a subject. In the annual exhibitions at the Academy his portraits have usually had the place of honor. Indeed, he is regarded as the foremost figure to-day in the world of painting, and that distinction he has enjoyed for more than ten years.

What Sargent gets for his paintings nowadays is not a matter of common knowledge. A decade ago he got as high as $10,000 for a single portrait—he made his own prices—and sometimes his price was only $2,500. His aim in portrait painting seems always to have been to make the soul or the character of his subject appear in the face. The story is told of a famous Boston beauty who when she received her portrait from Sargent, took it to her room, studied it, and realizing that the artist had laid bare her true character on the canvas, in a fit of rage cut out the face and tore it to shreds.

It was more than twenty years ago that Sargent was asked to try his hand at a decoration for the Boston Public Library. His own choice of a subject was given. To the astonishment of everybody he selected a religious subject for this theme. He has been regarded as exclusively the painter of fashion. He had never done any mural painting, yet when the first section of the great work was exhibited in London in 1894 the world stood up and admired. Now they have a whole gallery in the Boston Public Library named after him, the mural decoration of which is his work.

The painter has described his complete scheme as representing "The Triumph of Religion"—a mural decoration illustrating certain stages of Jewish and Christian history. The subject of the first portion is the confused struggle in the Jewish nation between Monotheism and Pantheism.

The frieze of "The Prophets" illustrates the monotheistic and spiritual principles of the Jewish religion. It has been compared to a Greek chorus, "interpreting and supporting the movement of a great drama." The central figures, Moses, Elijah, and Joshua, stand out strong and aggressive. On the right hand the three extreme figures are exulting—in strong antithesis to the three prophets at the other end of the decoration—in the sure hope of a Messiah who shall relieve Israel of her woes.

The reproduction of the frieze in the special section of THE TIMES will be in the three colors of the original. It will be in three parts, the whole measuring fifty-five inches long by ten inches wide. There is no printing on the back of the pictures, so that the reproduction will be suitable for framing.

A Bountiful Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving day was first observed by the Israelites after they made their escape from Egypt and reached the promised land which "Flowed with milk and honey." In this country the day was made an established custom by the pioneers of American liberty. One of those pioneers was Roger Williams, founder of Rhode Island, who also built a church and a brewery in Providence in the seventeenth century. This month 90,000,000 Americans will celebrate the day by feasting, drinking and giving thanks for the fruits of a land which has become the greatest and richest of all nations upon the earth. That is something to be thankful for, indeed. Nearly ten million of these good Americans live within a short radius of the Jacob Ruppert Brewery, where stands the finest Brewhouse in the world. There will be found the beer that satisfies most of these people the year round, and from there will flow the beer that will satisfy these same people on Thanksgiving, November 27th, 1913, the day designated by the President of the United States. For sale by all dealers.

TO STOP SPEEDING OF MAIL TRUCKS

Aldermen Adopt Amendment Putting Postal Autos Under Motor Law Restrictions.

MAYOR KLINE TO SIGN IT

One Truck Out of Every Eighteen Takes a Life Yearly, Says Committee Report.

The Aldermen adopted unanimously yesterday an amendment to the motor vehicle law providing that auto trucks carrying United States mail shall be subject to the restrictions and regulations imposed on all other vehicles, except fire engines and ambulances. If the ordinance, as now amended, is enforced, United States mail wagons will not be allowed to go through the city streets at an excessive rate of speed.

The special committee on speed regulation of the board, of which Alderman Folks was Chairman, and to which the amendment was referred, reported back that it believed that under the police power the Aldermen had the right to make provisions of law necessary for the protection of human life, provided the provision be reasonable, and it recommended that the amendment be passed. At a public hearing held on the amendment last week Joseph Stewart, Second Assistant Postmaster General, appeared in behalf of the United States Government in opposition to the measure. He characterized the proposed speed restriction as unjust and an unfair discrimination against vehicles transporting United States mail, and said that the number of persons killed by mail wagons was not excessively out of proportion to the fatalities caused by other vehicles. The only opposition to the amendment came from the United States Government and the contractors, many civic organizations and private citizens urging that the amendment be passed. The report of the special committee said:

The committee presents herewith statistics submitted from the Coroners' office of the Borough of Manhattan and the National Highways Protective Society and other data submitted to the committee in the nature of written communications, including an opinion from the Corporation Counsel's office. From the statistics submitted, arguments presented at the public hearing, communications received and personal observation of the members of the committee, the committee finds the following facts:

250 Mail Trucks in Use.

That under the present conditions approximately 250 motor-driven vehicles are transporting the mails throughout the City of New York. These vehicles, by custom or toleration, or color of legal right, have enjoyed the right of way in our public highways and, in addition, have been subject to no restrictions, except the provision prohibiting reckless driving. The committee, in its original report several months ago, stated, in substance, that unlimited discretion means recklessness, and it now reaffirms this conclusion, and finds that when a vehicle is given the right of way in addition to the freedom of being driven with discretion, it becomes a perpetual menace to the citizens of our city and a public nuisance.

Actual statistics conclusively show that United States mail wagons have caused some fifteen deaths this year, seven since Sept. 1. The number of motor mail wagons in use during the year averages less than 250 per day. On this basis, at least, one vehicle out of every eighteen is destroying a human life every year. The total number of motor vehicles in New York City is estimated at 55,000, and the number of deaths for the year 1913 is 230. Therefore, one vehicle out of every 239 kills a citizen, as against one out of eighteen mail wagons. The daily mileage of a mail wagon is undoubtedly greater than that of many other vehicles, which would lessen this percentage of fatalities to a certain degree. All things considered, the committee concludes that the United States mail wagons have killed and are killing a number of citizens far in excess of their ratio to other vehicles in the city.

Human Life More Important.

The committee appreciates the efforts of the Post Office authorities to get the best and most economical mail service for the city. It also appreciates the fact that the great commercial interests of the city, and to a certain extent of the entire world, demand the best mail service possible. It believes, however, that the safety of human life is far more important than the dispatch of mails. For these reasons the committee believes that vehicles carrying United States mail must be subjected to rules and regulations commensurate with the public safety.

The committee believes that vehicles responding for emergency work in case of fire, accident, public disaster, or impending danger, should be given wider latitude in the restrictions under which they are compelled to travel upon the public thoroughfares, owing to the nature of their business and the conditions under which they respond to an alarm. Their missions being those of mercy, and their travel being attended with more than the average degree of alarm, the public is awakened to the fact of their presence. These conditions are not at all times present in the travels of mail-carrying vehicles.

Mayor Kline, it was said yesterday, will sign the amendment on Friday, and it will then be sent to the Secretary of State for his approval. The Secretary of State has thirty days in which to consider the measure, so that it may not become effective until Dec. 28, thus doing away with another contention made by Assistant Postmaster General Stewart that it would interfere with the delivery of Christmas mails.

Under the amendment mail wagons must not turn corners at a speed greater than four miles an hour; they must not exceed ten miles an hour when approaching school houses and bridges, and they must keep eight feet behind street cars which are either in motion or standing still. It also provides that fifteen miles an hour shall be prima facie evidence that a chauffeur is exceeding the speed limit and that twenty miles an hour will be the maximum of speed allowed in outlying districts of the city.

FIND AHEARN UNCONSCIOUS.

Revived, State Fire Marshal Complained of Pains in Body.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—State Fire Marshal Thomas J. Ahearn was found unconscious on the floor of his office today, but revived before a physician arrived. He complains of pains in his left shoulder and chest. Recently he had suffered severely from rheumatism in the left shoulder.

State Fire Marshal Thomas J. Ahearn arrived in this city yesterday and went to the home of his sisters, the Misses Ahearn, in Flushing.

His brother, John F. Ahearn, who was questioned about his brother's condition last night at the John F. Ahearn Association, 290 East Broadway, said that he was with the State Fire Marshal about a week ago, and that at the time his brother complined of feeling ill. His present illness, according to his brother, is probably due to the many strains to which he has been subjected in fire fighting and fire prevention. Fire Marshal Ahearn will take a vacation for a few weeks, remaining for the most of that time with his sisters.

BELIEVE ZELAYA FLED TO CANADA

Federal Authorities Not Hopeful of Finding Ex-Nicaragua President Soon.

READY FOR EXTRADITION

Nicaraguan Legation Asked Detention—Former Dictator Wanted on Charge of Assassination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Although the Department of Justice is making every effort to arrest former President Zelaya of Nicaragua, wanted by the Nicaraguan Government, it is said, on a charge of assassination and abuse of authority, reports received here up to a late hour to-night hold out no hope that he may be found soon.

Officials of the Department of Justice believe that Zelaya received an intimation that he would be sought for and fled to Canada, where Government agents are now searching for him.

The charge against Zelaya is that he caused the death of two Nicaraguans, Domingo Toribio and Sixto Pineda, at Mesaya, April 21, 1901. The request that the United States Government detain Zelaya came from the Nicaraguan Legation here to the State Department. The request was immediately transmitted to the Department of Justice, and it was fully expected that Gen. Zelaya would be taken into custody at his rooms in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City.

At the State Department it was announced that no application had been received for the extradition of Zelaya, and that his arrest would be a "provisional detention" only. It is understood, however, that a formal application for Gen. Zelaya's extradition is now on its way from Nicaragua. The Nicaraguan Legation declined to make any statement to-day.

Gorry M. Stadden, an attorney, representing Gen. Zelaya, attempted to see Secretary of State Bryan, but was informed that, adhering to the ruling previously made, the Secretary of State would not see Gen. Zelaya or any representative of his.

Mr. Stadden then sought Counsellor Moore, to whom he presented a request that he be informed if the reports were true that the State Department was seeking Gen. Zelaya's arrest on a murder charge. He stated to Mr. Moore that the Nicaraguan Legation had denied having sought the detention of Gen. Zelaya. Counsellor Moore told the attorney that he had no information on that point, and could not discuss the case in any way.

It was learned to-night that if a demand is received for Zelaya's extradition, the State Department will speedily carry into execution its plan to return Zelaya to Nicaragua.

Mr. Stadden insists that Zelaya is prepared to enter an ample defense against his extradition, and that the ex-President will appear at any time the State Department sets for a hearing. He would not, however, give any clue to Zelaya's present whereabouts.

The search for Gen. Zelaya was continued here yesterday by special agents of the Department of Justice and United States Deputy Marshals.

In an effort to get some information as to the direction Gen. Zelaya took when he vanished from the Waldorf-Astoria Assistant United States District Attorney Ruger Wood in the afternoon had a long talk with Dr. Julian Irias, who was Minister General to Nicaragua during the latter months of the stormy régime of the banished dictator.

In their efforts to find Zelaya, Marshal Henkel's deputies ransacked the rooms at the Hotel Hargrave of his two sons, one of whom is appearing in vaudeville as a piano player. They found part of the General's baggage, but it afforded nothing in the way of a working clue.

C. Alfonzo Zelaya protested as the searchers ransacked his father's baggage.

"He is the prey of his enemies," the son said. "Nicaragua to-day is ruled by my father's bitterest enemies, and if he is returned there his life will not be worth a penny."

EXAMINES MERRITT'S SAFE.

Hurried by Two Constables, Receiver Finds Little of Value in It.

Benjamin M. Freemen, the receiver appointed by the United States Court, yesterday made a hurried examination of the private papers in the safe of Henry C. Merritt, the missing Supervisor of the town of East Chester. He said last night that he found little that would aid him in his investigation of Mr. Merritt's accounts. He intends to remove the safe to-day to the Gramatan National Bank of Bronxville, where he can examine the papers at his leisure.

"I was told by John P. Hayes, receiver for the Merritt Construction Company," said Mr. Freeman, "that I might enter the office of the company and examine the papers. When I arrived there I found Mr. Hayes, Miss Gilcher, the stenographer, and two constables. They told me to hurry. While I went through the papers superficially with Miss Gilcher's assistance I was hustled about by the constables, who said they were in a hurry to leave. I felt intimidated, and soon put the papers back in the safe and locked it.

"All I found of any value was a bank book of the Liberty National Bank showing a deposit of $3,000 to Mr. Merritt's credit, and some protested notes payable to him. I don't know the amount of them.

"I found that the seals on one of the drawers of Mr. Merritt's desk in the office had been broken. I don't know if anything of value was taken from it because I made no inventory of its contents. To-night I received a letter from Henry W. Smith, a New York lawyer living in Bronxville, and the attorney for Mr. Merritt's family, giving me permission to enter and go all through the house to make an inventory and search for private papers.

"I heard to-day that Mr. Merritt had been seen several times in New York City within the last few days, and that he was at his house one night. I don't know how much truth there is in the statements, but they may be true. No warrant has as yet been issued for him."

Roses Abloom While Snow Falls.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Nov. 25.—A rosebush, covered with bloom, while a snowstorm was in progress, was an admiration on the lawn of Alderman W. L. Dicks, on Albert Street, this city. The oldest residents marveled at the sight, which attracted large numbers.

STOVER NOT FOUND IN SAN FRANCISCO

Report That Missing Park Commissioner Reached Coast Is Not Believed.

FRIENDS CLING TO HOPE

Still Think Absent Official Is Taking Vacation and Will Return When Rested.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—The sensational announcement by an afternoon newspaper in its early edition that Charles B. Stover, New York Park Commissioner who has been missing since Oct. 16, had registered at the St. Francis Hotel caused much comment here, but when the story was investigated it proved to be untrue.

The story said that Stover registered from New York with J. H. Francis, presumably a missing Alderman of Chicago; that Stover asked for two rooms with bath but before the clerk could assign him, he went away saying he and his friend had to look after their baggage on the Overland train and would select rooms when they returned. The story also said that Verne Stover and wife were on the passenger list of the Pacific mail steamship Manchuria to sail on Thursday for the Orient.

The man who registered at the St. Francis did not resemble the missing Park Commissioner. The names of Stover and Francis are on the hotel register but neither men has yet reappeared.

The inference is strong that the story is a canard and manufactured to boom some moving picture houses. The article told of the plan to exhibit pictures of Stover on Thanksgiving Day.

Inquiry at the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's office showed that Verne Stover and wife are booked for the next sailing of the Manchuria on Thanksgiving Day, but that they do not come from New York.

The Park Commissioner's friends and former associates here were inclined to be skeptical of the announcement that he had made his way across the continent since last Friday morning. At that time Mr. Stover was seen and recognized in the Union Station at Washington, D. C.

Mayor Kline was disinclined to take any further official action regarding an appointment of any one to succeed the absent Park Commissioner yesterday. The Mayor said that if Stover was on a vacation, as it is believed he is, there was no immediate necessity for filling his place. The appointment of Commissioner Kennedy as Acting President of the Park Board and of L. F. La Roche as Acting Commissioner for Manhattan provided amply for carrying on the work of the Department of Parks for the time being, he said.

The rumor that the salary of Commissioner Stover had been ordered withheld until his return was declared incorrect yesterday. A check for his October salary is awaiting him at the office of the Park Board. Ira H. Patchen, secretary to the Commissioner, said Stover's salary for November will probably be sent to the office in the same way.

EINSTEIN LETTERS READ.

Wealthy Manufacturer Bitterly Opposed His Son's Marriage.

Intimate affairs and family secrets of the Einstein family were disclosed in the Supreme Court yesterday when letters from the late David Lewis Einstein, the manufacturer, to his son, Louis, were read before Justice Giegerich in the suit between Sir Charles and Lady Waldstein of England and Mrs. Spingarn, wife of Prof. Spingarn, formerly of Columbia University. The suit is to determine the disposition of $125,000 left by David Einstein to Lady Waldstein, his daughter, to be used at her discretion and disposed of as she thought best.

One construction of the will is that the $125,000 was intended for Louis, Mr. Einstein's disinherited son. Lady Waldstein, however, contends that the disposal of the money was left to her discretion, and that she can accordingly keep it for herself.

The letters from the manufacturer to his son were written in 1904, after Louis Einstein had married Helene Raili, ten years older than himself. One of the letters read:

"Your dear mother is prostrated with grief over the degradation which you have brought upon yourself. I am grieved to inform you that I have changed my will, and that you will not participate in my fortune at my death. If you will dissolve your marriage with Helene you will be received back into the arms of your broken-hearted father and mother, and will have what you should have, share and share with your sisters. Do not suppose that any entreaties or threats you may make will influence us. Helene will never be received by your mothers and sisters."

The other letters, which were read by ex-Justice David Leventritt, who represented the minority trustees of the Einstein estate, were of much the same tenor. Letters from Louis Einstein to Lady Waldstein showed that Louis expected his sister to give him a share of the father's estate. Louis is taking no part in the suit.

The minority trustees hope to show that a verbal understanding existed between David Einstein and Lady Waldstein that Louis should receive the $125,000 turned over to Lady Waldstein to dispose of as she saw fit.

YEAR'S WORK FOR CHILDREN

Aid Society Found Homes for 539 —Want Schools to Help More.

C. Loring Brace, Secretary of the Children's Aid Society, gave a review of the work of that organization at the annual meeting yesterday at the Union Trust Company.

In the last year, Mr. Brace said, 530 orphans and homeless children were placed in family homes, 642 runaway children were returned to relatives, 6,357 children were sheltered in lodging houses, 5,533 children were given relief in their homes, 7,407 children were given from one to ten weeks' outings in Summer homes, and 14,897 women and children received day outings at the seaside and in the country.

The suggestion was also made that the public schools should be genuine social centres, recognizing the need of social uplift of the whole family.

"While the public schools have developed along wise and broad lines, the need of social uplift of the whole family at the same rate as the pupil has not yet been considered by the public school authorities," said Mr. Brace, "and will not be recognized until the schools become social centres, not only affording each child the mental and moral training he or she requires, but the training of the mentally inefficient mother and father as well."

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, William Church Osborn; Vice President, William Douglas Sloane; Treasurer, Edwin G. Merrill; Secretary, C. Loring Brace. These trustees were selected to serve until 1916: William Douglas Sloane, Archibald D. Russell, F. Delano Wecks, Evert Jansen Wendell, and Charles R. Richards.

CAUTION!

The great popularity of the clean, pure, healthful WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT is causing unscrupulous persons to wrap rank imitations that are not even real chewing gum so they resemble genuine WRIGLEY'S. The better class of stores will not try to fool you with these imitations. They will be offered to you principally by street fakirs, peddlers and the candy departments of some 5 and 10 cent stores. These rank imitations cost dealers one cent a package or even less and are sold to careless people for almost any price. If you want Wrigley's look before you buy. Get what you pay for. Be SURE it's WRIGLEY'S.

We are inserting the above caution solely to protect our customers, who are continually writing us that they have been deceived by imitations which they purchased thinking they were WRIGLEY'S.

CHURCHILL BACKERS EAT VICTORY DINNER

Confident of His Reappointment by Mayor, They Celebrate at Calumet Club.

KLINE'S LIST MADE OUT

But Names Contained In It Will Not Be Made Public Until Board Meets This Afternoon.

When the members of the Board of Education assemble for their regular semi-monthly meeting in Education Hall at 4 o'clock this afternoon they expect to find a letter from Mayor Kline awaiting their consideration. In this letter the Mayor, they think, will bring to an end the controversy that has centred around the question of the reappointment of Thomas W. Churchill as a member of the board by announcing his decision as to this and all other pending appointments.

Besides Mr. Churchill, eight other members of the Board of Education are to be either reappointed or displaced by new members. It was said at City Hall yesterday that the delay in announcing appointments was not due to any uncertainty on the part of the Mayor as to who should be named, but was in accordance with a tradition that the appointments should first be announced at the last meeting of the Board of Education for November of each year.

Mayor Kline wrote the letter announcing his appointments yesterday. While he would not intimate upon whom his choice had fallen, those members of the board who supported President Churchill were so confident that his name was on the list that they held a dinner and celebration last night at the Calumet Club.

Besides President Churchill, those whose terms expire this year are Gen. George W. Wingate, Miss Olivia Leventritt, Abraham Stern, Dr. Ira S. Wile, Ernest W. Stratmann, Robert E. McCafferty, Henry P. Morrison, and Dr. Louis Haupt.

Mrs. Reba C. Bamberger was appointed to serve until Jan. 1, 1916, as a member from Brooklyn. As she moved from Brooklyn a short time ago it was contended by some members that she had thereby forfeited her place on the board. It was expected that if Mayor Kline concurred in this view he would also name a successor to Mrs. Bamberger.

Henry P. Morrison, the member from Richmond Borough, was slated to be displaced on account of the fact that he accepted a position some time ago which made it impossible for him to attend board meetings. It was stated at the Board of Education hall yesterday that he had not attended any meetings for three months.

Dr. Wile, Mr. Stern, Mr. Stratmann, and Mr. McCafferty were urged to reappointment by those who supported President Churchill on the ground that they had indorsed his policies and so had made possible the "reforms for which Mr. Churchill stands." It was regarded as practically certain that Gen. Wingate and Miss Leventritt would be reappointed.

As possible new members of the board the names mentioned include Abraham Flexner, who signed the letter of President Nicholas Murray Butler protesting to Mayor Kline against the reappointment of President Churchill; Charles D. Hillis, who was secretary to President Taft; Charles Pratt of Brooklyn, and several others.

A final word as to the issues involved in the controversy concerning Mr. Churchill's reappointment was supported to Mayor Kline yesterday in the form of a letter from the Public Education Association. Dr. Maxwell's policies were described in the letter as progressive, and not reactionary, as charged, while Mr. Churchill's policies were set forth as dangerous and unsound, and the assertion was made that City Supt. Maxwell was not responsible for the opposition to President Churchill.

Supporters of President Churchill said last night that the association was formed by City Supt. Maxwell and was dominated by him, so that the letter should be considered as practically a statement from him.

TO INVESTIGATE POISONING.

Coroner Has Case of Woman Who Took Bichloride of Mercury.

The Board of Health refused yesterday to issue a permit for the burial of Mrs. Ida Jacobs, a widow, 47 years old, who died on Monday night at the St. Francis Hospital, Brook Avenue and 142d Street, and the Coroner's office in the Bronx has ordered an investigation. Mrs. Jacobs was a victim of bichloride of mercury poisoning. According to Dr. Cross of the St. Francis Hospital, Mrs. Jacobs accidentally swallowed thirty grains of the poison at 3 o'clock last Wednesday morning, and was removed to the Polyclinic Hospital. On Saturday evening, he said, "through the influence of a priest," the woman was transferred to the St. Francis Hospital.

The hospital authorities know little about Mrs. Jacobs, and were unable to find any of her relatives. She had been stopping at the St. Paul Hotel, 42 West Sixtieth Street, for ten days prior to the time she took the poison. She said, according to Dr. Cross, that she had intended to take some asperin tablets, and did not realize that she had made a mistake until she began to suffer great pain. An operation was performed on Mrs. Jacobs on Monday night by Dr. John Rogers and Dr. A. A. Cross.

Bichloride poisoning claimed another victim yesterday. Mrs. Leah Fortel, 40 years old, who swallowed forty-five grains of the poison at her home at 1,090 Southren Boulevard, on Friday night, died in Lebanon Hospital. She was operated on by Dr. Woveschein.

OLIVER FOR ELLIS ISLAND.

Tammany Is Glum Over Report That O'Gorman Is Pushing Him.

Tammany Hall was stirred yesterday over a report that United States Senator James A. O'Gorman had presented the name of his private secretary, Francis V. S. Oliver, to President Wilson for appointment as Commissioner of Immigration at the Port of New York. Mr. Oliver was formerly chief of the Bureau of Licenses, and has long been a political admirer and follower of John Purroy Mitchel.

Tammany had two candidates of its own for the place, James W. Riley, who is private secretary to National Committeeman Norman E. Mack, and John W. Keller. Senator O'Gorman presented Mr. Keller's name to the President, but, feeling that the case was hopeless, Mr Keller withdrew. Tammany then based its hope upon Mr. Riley.

The action of Senator O'Gorman in presenting the name of his private secretary has convinced Charles F. Murphy and his advisers, it was said, that the Senator has thrown in his lot with the Administration at Washington and has deserted the Fourteenth Street organization.

In justification of this view, Tammany leaders pointed out that Senator O'Gorman obtained the appointment of his son-in-law, Dudley Field Malone, as Collector of the port, as well as the appointment of the Senator's law partner, H. Snowden Marshall, as Federal District Attorney.

LOST HAND IN EXPERIMENT.

Schoolboy Tried It in His Backyard with a Magneto, He Says.

With a book on "Experimental Science" at his call, Godfrey Meier, Jr., 15 years old, tried an experiment in the back yard of his home at 243 East Fifty-fifth Street after school yesterday. Just what his experiment consisted of the police could not learn, but the result was an explosion which blew off the fingers of the boy's right hand and so lacerated the hand that it was amputated in Flower Hospital.

When his mother asked him what caused the accident he said he was playing with a magneto. The police think, however, that he had got hold of a fulminating cap or something of the kind. At the time of the accident a four-year-old nephew of Godfrey was standing only a few feet away. The child was knocked down, but was not injured.

$9,000 Left to St. Peter's Church.

In the will of Mrs. Mary E. Ferguson, who died on Nov. 18, a legacy of $9,000 was left to the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. Peter in West Twentieth Street. Provision was made that $4,000 of this legacy be used for the general purposes of the church and that the remainder go to the church endowment fund. Legacies of $1,000 each were left to the Rev. Oli Scott, rector of St. Peter's Church; and to Dr. John Sengstacker of Stony Point, N. Y. The will was filed for probate yesterday in the Surrogates' Court.

MRS. PANKHURST AT VICE SYMPOSIUM

English Militant Suffragette Ends Her American Lecture Tour at Eltinge Theatre.

CHRISTABEL'S TRACT SOLD

Store Across the Street Rented When Management Bars Women Vendors from Theatre.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette leader, who began her lecture tour of this country about a month ago with a discussion of suffrage, ended it at the Eltinge Theatre yesterday afternoon with a discussion of the social evil. Compared with the other speakers who preceded her, however, the English militant must have proved a mild and disappointing anticlimax to those who had come to hear and be shocked. The furthest she advised going in the solution of the social evil was for women to gain through citizenship control of the legislative power and compel men to rise to their own higher moral standards. The other speakers—vice experts every one of them—went a great deal further.

It was distinctly a symposium of sex. Society in all its phases was represented in the audience; the fashionable world by Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont in a box; the under crust by "Dr." Ben Reitman, the hobo's friend, and ant-society by Emma Goldman. Alexander Berkman also was present, Emma Goldman, Reitman announced, tried to get on the programme to speak on another side of the many-sided sex matter there discussed, but she was told by Frederick H. Robinson, President of the Sociological Fund of the Medical Review of Reviews, which conducted the meeting, that there was no more room.

The performance was advertised as "the first free and fearless public discussion of the social evil." Fearless it may have been; but it was not free. The price of admission was $1, $2, and $3 a seat.

Long before the house began to fill up, women vendors of papers elbowed their way past Capt. Conboy and policemen from the West Thirty-seventh Street Police Station, detailed for duty at the theatre, announcing that they had for sale "suppressed copies of The Suffragette," containing Christabel Pankhurst's "free, frank, and fearless" discussion of the social evil. The management of the theatre, with a care to its license, they were told, objected to their selling the publication on the pavement in front of the theatre or within. So they rented a vacant store just across the street and sold their wares there.

Anthony Comstock Berated.

Capt. Conboy, when asked, said he couldn't stop them, and Anthony Comstock, much to the disappointment of the press agent of the undertaking, didn't show up at all. The speakers at the meeting called Mr. Comstock various names, ranging from "a wooden-faced man" to "an idiot." There were easily ten women to one man in the audience, which altogether numbered about 600.

It had been announced that among those applying for peddlers' licenses to sell the sex literature on the streets would be Mr. Robinson; Paul Bern, Secretary of the Sociological Fund; Upton Sinclair, the author, and Mrs. James P. Warbasse. But these thought better of it and took places on the platform instead.

Mr. Sinclair was Chairman of the meeting. He denounced the "policy of suppression" of sex discussions as responsible for the sacrifice "not of one maiden a year to an ogre, as in the fairy tales of our childhood, but of 200,000 or 300,000 girls a year to an ogre which we are not allowed to talk about, much less to kill." But this, said Mr. Sinclair, was for once an intelligent audience, not afraid of discussing the causes of the social evil.

Mr. Sinclair then introduced Norman Hapgood, editor of Harper's Magazine. Mr. Hapgood said he was rather disappointed in that he felt he couldn't shock any one in that audience. He missed, he said, the "wooden-faced man," who was always the best stimulus to vigorous speech.

"If I could feel, for instance, that there was secreted somewhere in this audience Mr. Anthony Comstock, I'd feel very happy; for then I could be pugnacious in my argument."

Mr. Hapgood told triumphantly how the play "Damaged Goods" first offered under the auspices of the Sociological Fund, had proved such a success that it had now gone on the road as "a merely commercial speculation," and he said that another play, "The Guilty Man," equally as important, was soon to be staged here, despite "the hubbut in the newspapers."

"You can find people like the Chicago society that recently protested against the vice investigation there, and idiots like Mr. Comstock," said Mr. Hapgood, amid applause, "but you can now also find many boards of health, many plays, and treatises like Christabel Pankhurst's, handling the subject of sex frankly.

Double Standard Must Go.

"We have got to do away with the double standard. We must impose the same restraints on men as on women. Men must raise themselves to the level of women in the sex question. There is no opposition of interests implied in this. It will react as much to the benefit of the men as of the women."

Mr. Sinclair next introduced Dr. James P. Warbasse as a physician who had made a special study of the sex question.

"The double standard of morality among men, and deferred marriage due to the discrepancy between wages and the cost of living, are two main factors in the social evil," Dr. Warbasse said. "Wealth which goes to the idle class deprives the workingman of the bride who should be his."

The next speaker on the programme, Dr. William J. Robinson, was unable to speak, having recently undergone a surgical operation. But he had sent a letter instead, which Mr. Sinclair read. After Dr. Frederick C. Howe had been heard, Thomas Nast, Jr., the cartoonist, was then called in. He drew several cartoons of the social evil, one with the white slaver holding forth "the price" to a woman for "her living," and another of a policeman arresting the woman, but not the man."

And then came Mrs. Pankhurst, dressed in a black tailored suit, with a fur collar, and a small black bonnet with black ostrich plumes. She was greeted with an outburst of applause that lasted nearly a minute. In her talk she spoke with a voice of singular sweetness and earnestness that didn't sound at all akin to splintered glass or exploding bombs.

"It is not for me as a woman to repeat what has already been said by able men," she began. "For me it remains to speak of this subject from woman's point of view, what women are feeling about it, and what they have determined to do about it.

"How is it that what is abnormal about women is normal among men? It arises from irresponsible power of men over women, the feeling that they alone have to decide and to dictate the position of woman, whether inside or outside of matrimony.

"No one disputes that women are the moral half of humanity, and we who are now more highly civilized morally than our brethren have made up our minds very definitely about certain things. Gentlemen, we have made up our minds that men must become as highly civilized as women in this thing. We have found a new method of achieving this end by forcing men up to a higher standard of morality, by compelling men as well as women to recognize their responsibility toward the race and the future.

"They used to attempt to do this in the pulpits and scientific books and in meetings for men only, where men were looked on as the natural protectors of women. All these failed. It has to be done by making women feel the sanctity of the sex relationship.

"We women have made up our minds that ever child that is born is going to be a welcome child, and that it is going to have two parents. We are not going to achieve this by talk alone. We must register this point of view in laws and in custom; we are going to make woman's point of view count through her citizenship and to register her opinions in legislation equally with men. We intend to make the moral standard of men equal with that of women, to impose the same responsibility for one as for the other."

14,000 WALK OUT AT SCHENECTADY

But Plans for General Electric Strike Halt in Face of A. F. L. Opposition.

CALLED A 'DEMONSTRATION'

Hours and Wages Not Involved, but Alleged Attempt by Company to "Crush Unionism."

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 25.—With 14,000 employes of the General Electric Company voluntarily idle, this city to-night faces an industrial crisis. But it faces it quietly; there is no excitement, notwithstanding to-day's walkout involved nearly all the force of the largest manufacturing plant of its kind in the world.

In a dozen labor headquarters meetings were held and preparations begun for what many fear will be a long strike. In a central hall heads of the local unions met and discussed ways and means of carrying on a strike should one be called. The leaders declare there is no strike as yet. They explained today's walkout as a "demonstration of strength to show that the General Electric Company cannot crush unionism."

The preparations for a struggle were temporarily halted to-night by the Central Committee on receipt of a telegram from Indianapolis. Although the union leaders declined to make its contents public, it was currently reported that it was from a high official of the American Federation of Labor and that it was not favorable to the calling of a strike.

The union workmen are not looking for shorter hours or more pay, they point out, but to correct what they assert to be an unjust discrimination against two of their companions—Frank L. Dujay and Miss Mabel Leslie, both of whom have been active in union circles. The two were laid off recently, the company asserting that their removal was a part of a policy of retrenchment. The union workers, however, assert that the laying off of the two was due to past activities in labor union circles. They also declare that the receipts of the plant for the current month exceed by more than $1,000,000 the receipts for November, 1912.

George E. Emmons, general manager of all the company's plants, to-day denied that any discrimination was intended. Persons close to officials said preparations were being made to cope with any emergency that might arise. They stated the company had countermanded all large incoming orders.

The presence in town to-day of W. R. Fish, General Manager of the company's plant at Lynn, Mass., caused comment. The employes said he was antagonistic to union labor in Lynn and had come here to assist in crushing out unionism in Schenectady. Officials of the company said he was here merely to attend a meeting of the company's manufacturing committee.

With its weekly payroll of $250,000, the plant provides the principal source of income for the city. There is a strong undercurrent of belief that the company will not reinstate Dujay and Miss Leslie, and will await overtures from the workmen.

Ten of the local union men have left the city to solicit funds. Friends of the employes are urging George R. Lunn, the Socialist Mayor, to appoint special deputies from the ranks of the workers and remunerate them from the city treasury. The Mayor said to-night that he had not been asked to take sides, but that "not a single person of whom I have knowledge shall suffer for lack of food or clothing while I am Mayor." His term expires Dec. 31.

Union leaders to-night perfected plans for picketing the works, not so much, they said, because they feared the introduction of strike breakers, as to see that none who walked out to-day returned to work.

With the exception of a few firemen and watchmen, the plant is unoccupied to-night. The majority of the employes walked out quietly this morning, without any demonstration. Most of the others, with the exception of the office staff, followed during the day.

SILK STRIKE IMPENDING.

I. W. W. Demands Will Be Denied by Paterson Employers.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 25.—The threatened strike of ribbon weavers, of which there are about 5,000, may bring about another general silk strike in this city, which would affect between 20,000 and 25,000 operatives.

Edward Koetgen, I. W. W. organizer, announced this morning that a mass meeting of broad silk weavers had been called at I. W. W. headquarters to arrange for nine-hour demands. This meeting is scheduled for Friday night. On Saturday afternoon another meeting has been called at I. W. W. headquarters of the directors and the directors' helpers, also, to arrange for a nine-hour demand.

If both these decide in favor of the nine-hour demand, of which there is little doubt, another great silk strike will start next month. All the manufacturers approached have said positively that they would ignore the I. W. W. and fight to the last.

POLITE BROADWAY RAID.

Inspector Gillen Chases 15 Men from Alleged Racing Bureau.

An alleged racing information bureau was visited yesterday afternoon by Inspector Gillen in an office building on Broadway near Thirty-fourth Street. After ordering fifteen men and a woman found in the place to leave, the Inspector confiscated four telephones and several racing charts. Sergt. McGee and four detectives were with him.

The place appeared to be the office of a legitimate business concern, and on the windows and door the name of a moving picture film exchange was painted. When the Inspector went to the building somebody saw him coming and locked the door of the office from the outside.

The Inspector tried the door and found it locked. He was about to walk away when he heard some one moving about in the room, and a voice shouted: "Let us out; open the door!"

"Come right out;" answered the Inspector; "I want to get in," and he threw a key which he had obtained from the janitor over the transom.

Tricked Out of $25,000, He Says.

Alleging that Clinton Graham had induced him to invest $25,000 in a brokerage house which Graham said he was about to open, Henry W. Gabriel began suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to recover the amount he says he invested. Gabriel says that he was to be a silent partner of the concern, but that it was all a scheme to part him and his $25,000.

Another feature of the Equitable Building is—

THAT when you want additional lighting in your offices, it is not necessary to disfigure your walls with wires.

The installation of a most complete system of pipe conduits will permit of changes in or additions to your lighting, without making your offices look like a "bucket shop."

Thus an after-thought on your part is provided for by fore-thought on ours.

Leases now being made from May 1, 1915. The building, however, is due to be completed 2 or 3 months ahead of this date.

SAYS VAIL PURPOSES TO MAKE PUBLIC PAY

By Merger Would Recoup Enormous Losses from Competition, Witness Quotes Phone Head.

MORGAN & CO. AS BACKERS

Fisher Swears Davison Said Banking House Was Ready with Cash for Huge Combination.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Rates charged for telephone service in cities of nearly equal population by Bell-controlled companies are higher where there is no competition, according to Ernest B. Fisher, Grand Rapids, Mich., Secretary of the Citizens' Telephone Company, who testified to-day at the hearing of the Government's anti-trust suit against the American Telephone & TelegraphC o.

Mr. Fisher, substantiated the statements previously made that J. P. Morgan & Co., were back of the proposed merger of the American with the independent companies or the United States He testified that he was one of the Directors of the Independent Telephone Association of America, who on Dec. 10, 1910, met Theodore N. Vail, head of the American; and H. P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co., at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago.

"The fact that Mr. Vail and Mr. Davison would like a conference was conveyed to the independents by Frank Woods, head of the Independent Telephone Company, at Lincoln, Neb.," said Mr. Fisher. "Mr. Vail said the destructive competition between the American and the independents costing the American enormous sum. He said he wanted to see practically the whole country controlled by a single corporation—be the American. In certain rural districts the independent companies could continue to operate, he said but they would practically be under the control of the parent company. The merger, he said would take several years to effect.

"Mr. Vail said the public had profited up to that time by destructive competition, but that once the merger was formed 'the company was going to make the public pay for it.' Mr. Davison said that the house of Morgan was in a position to care for all transactions in case the merger was put through, and that if the independent companies absorbed by the American wanted cash for their stock, the house of Morgan stood ready to meet that demand."

Mr. Fisher said he had opposed the proposition as "improper" and financially bad. Telephone rates rise to unjustified proportions as soon as competition is eliminated, he said. After the establishment of competition in Grand Rapids, he said, telephone rates were placed at $36 yearly, which enabled a subscriber to have both systems for $72 yearly. In Springfield, Mass., Mr. Fisher stated, where the Bell system has no competition, the rate is $72 a year for one telephone, and in Albany, N. Y., it is $96 a year for one telephone.

The Citizens' Company, according to Mr. Fisher, is another independent which is on its feet and thriving under Bell competition. It has 12,514 subscribers in Grand Rapids, while the Bell has 8,000, and the Citizens' Company has averaged 8 per cent. dividends and has paid 6 per cent. regularly on its bonds.

George W. Robinson of St. Paul, Minn., Vice President of the Tri-state Telephone and Telegraph Company, testified that he was one of the committee of seven appointed by the independents to negotiate with the Bell system. Plans were under consideration for an arrangement of the independents into twenty classes, and an appraisal of their properties when he went to New York with his colleagues to confer with Vail and Davison.

"While we were in New York for the conference early in 1911," Mr. Robinson said, "we learned that the Bell system had purchased the Kansas City independent company. This violation of this pledge to buy no more independents while the merger negotiations were pending, had the effect of putting an end to the deal."

MISS BRANDT'S CONTEST.

Ziegler's Sister Asks for Commission in Fight Over $30,000,000 Estate.

Florence Louise Brandt, sister of William Ziegler, Jr., adopted son of the late William Ziegler, the baking powder manufacturer, in her fight for a share of the $30,000,000 Ziegler estate inherited by her brother, asked Supreme Court Justice Cohalan yesterday, through her lawyer, for a "written commission" to examine two witnesses, one being George W. Brandt, the father of William, Jr., and herself. These witnesses, she says, can prove that when Mr. Ziegler adopted her brother and herself he made an oral promise that he would make both of them his heirs in law.

John M. Bowers, attorney for William Ziegler, Jr., said that William Ziegler decided to adopt the two children of his half brother in 1896.

"The adoption," he said, "was accomplished, but in 1902 Florence decided that she did not wish to remain any longer the adopted daughter of William Ziegler, and had her adoption abrogated. In 1905 Mr. Ziegler died, and last July William Ziegler, Jr., attained his majority. In February his sister started proceedings to get a share of the estate, based on Mr. Ziegler's alleged oral promise that she and her brother were to share his estate at his death. It is easy to understand the motive her father and his friend, Dr. Price, would have in attempting to sustain such a theory."

Justice Cohalan asked that briefs be submitted by both sides and reserved decision.

MUSICIAN'S LEAP KILLS.

Casler Jumps for Restaurant Elevator and Is Crushed.

Joseph Casler a musician in the orchestra at the Café de Paris, 1,457 Broadway, was killed in an elevator accident at the restaurant yesterday afternoon. Casler's brother is leader of the orchestra and had been conducting a rehearsal on the fourth floor. The musicians were called to the restaurant, and, with the exception of Joseph Casler, they all responded at once.

Casler followed a little later. The elevator used by the employes was at the fourth floor, where the operator, George Nicas, had let a passenger off. There were two waiters on the car who wanted to go to the fifth floor.

Shouting "Down!" Casler ran toward the car as Nicas was closing the door and ascending. Casler jumped and was caught between the floor and the framework of the shaft. Nicas reversed his car as soon as possible and Casler fell to the basement, five stories below. Dr. Schrock of the New York Hospital said that Casler probably had been killed by the car and not by the fall. Casler was 19 years old and lived at 298 North Main Street, Yonkers.

ROSENHEIMER GOES FREE.

Auto That Killed Grace Hough Overspeeded Technically.

Edward T. Rosenheimer, who ran down and killed Grace Hough in his automobile in August, 1910, and was subsequently indicted for manslaughter and a violation of the Callan automobile law, was released yesterday on the latter charge. Judge Mahoney of the Court of General Sessions suspended sentence on the ground that the violation was only a technical one.

It was charged that Rosenheimer speeded away immediately after the accident, and thereby violated the Callan law. It was brought out, however, that he returned later to the scene of the accident, after every one had gone. For this reason, and on the assertion of Assistant District Attorney Wasservogel that Rosenheimer had suffered enough, Judge Mahoney accepted a plea of guilty and released the prisoner.

TWO REMARKABLE PICTORIAL SECTIONS, one in three colors and the other produced by the wonderful new process known as rotogravure, will distinguish the CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, DEC. 7. The edition will be unique among newspaper publications. It will be sold out far ahead of time. The only way to get a copy is to place your order at once.

THE PROPHETS IN COLORS

These famous paintings by John S. Sargent are in the Boston Public Library. The frieze will be reproduced in the original colors, on heavy paper, suitable for framing, by the same process which was used when The Times issued Abbey's "Holy Grail" and the Morgan pictures. It will be equal to any colored art print ever offered by Christmas publications costing fifty cents and a dollar.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY

Twenty-nine pictures of typical American girls, selected by seven noted artists after The Times had asked its readers to submit photographs, will fill this eight-page section. They will be reproduced by a new process known as rotogravure, which gives extraordinary results hitherto unknown in newspaper printing. The Girl of To-day Section will be the first eight-page American newspaper section produced by rotogravure, which will soon be used for all The Times's regular pictorial sections.

It was originally planned to select only twenty-nine from among the hundreds of photographs submitted to The Times as typical of the American girl. But the judges chose ninety as worthy of reproduction. So an additional rotogravure section will be issued on Sunday, Dec. 14, with the remaining sixty-one selections.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 26, 1913.

THE BIGGEST BUSINESS IN THE WORLD.

The Railroad Committee of Presidents, whose members presented on Monday before the Interstate Commerce Commission the plea for an increase of 5 per cent. in all interstate freight rates north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers and east of the Mississippi River, represents a part of the greatest business on earth. The figures of miles of track, passengers carried, property investment, revenues and expenditure, would be much larger for the entire area of the United States, but the imagination cannot begin to grasp the vast aggregates presented in the Eastern railways' figures. The number of tons carried one mile during the fiscal year ended June 30 last was nearly 160 billions. The number of passenger fares over one mile was more than 16 billions, on a trackage of nearly 108,000 miles.

It cost this year to run the Eastern railroads $1,023,000,000; the net revenue from the operations amounts to $402,000,000. The total capital stock of this business is $2,560,000,000, the net corporate income being over $206,000,000.

The total capital obligations of the business run up above $6,389,000,000, and the property investment is more than $6,280,000,000. The figures in detail are as follows:

BUSINESS OF EASTERN RAILROADS.

Property investment.....	$6,280,571,611
Net operating income.....	336,754,065
Per cent. of return on property investment.....	5.36
Total capital obligations...	6,389,535,638
Net corporate income (plus interest).....	362,470,794
Per cent. of net income on total capital obligations.	5.67
Total capital stock.....	2,559,782,887
Net corporate income.....	206,591,864
Per cent. of income on stock.....	8.07
Operating revenues.....	1,424,119,991
Operating expenses.....	1,022,085,457
Net operating revenue.....	402,034,534
Tons carried one mile.....	156,799,754,183
Passengers carried one mile.....	16,055,486,746
Miles of track owned.....	107,933.49

The income on the vast property investment has shrunk 14.65 per cent. during the past fiscal year as compared with 1910, and 9.57 per cent. on the total capital obligations; the net corporate income is 10.38 per cent. less, and the income on the capital stock is 16.8 per cent. less. Since the business depends upon the support of private capital, and as private capital is supplied only with the prospect of sufficient profit, President WILLARD says that the Government's decision upon the plea for higher rates will "mark an epoch." The great business must go on.

President WILLARD of the Baltimore & Ohio Road presented statistics showing the very disquieting ratio of growth in operating expenses and taxes as compared with the growth of revenues. During the last fiscal year the railroads in the official classification territory showed gross earnings greater by $186,775,000 than the earnings of three years ago, yet the net return after paying operating expenses and taxes was $16,311,000 less than in 1910, although $659,000,000 of additional money had been spent for betterments and equipment. Mr. SHRIVER, who explained the statistical tables to the Commission, said that a new property investment of about $3.50 was required for each dollar of increased gross earnings, and for every $1.86 of gross increase in earnings expenses and taxes increased $2.01, and this without any allowance for the new money.

President WILLARD intimated that, unless the railroads were permitted to increase their rates, Government ownership must follow, but on such a showing as this Government ownership would inevitably produce large deficits which the taxpayers would have to make up. Moreover, if the roads were to pass out of private ownership, the Government, using the word in its general sense, would forfeit the very large annual sum it now receives in taxes. Mr. WISHARD, speaking for the New York Central Lines, referred to the fact that taxes had grown at a greater rate than either revenues or operating expenses. In 1913, which we suppose means the road's last fiscal year, taxes took 14.4 per cent. of the net operating revenue of the road, a sum equal to 64.5 per cent. of the total dividends paid. It appears, therefore, that for every $100 the New York Central Lines distributed to the owners of the property $64.50 is paid to the Government.

There is in these figures no comfort for the advocates of Government ownership. That way out would be chosen only because as things are now going the Government would be forced to take over the roads as an escape from universal receiverships. The actual deficits, which under the scale of rates now allowed are not so far in the future, would be met by public tax levies, simply because the policy of the Government frightens private capital away from railroad investment. Prof. DIXON pointed out in his testimony yesterday that while railway net returns in 1910 were only 5.7 per cent. upon capital, the principal manufacturing industries showed a net return of 11.8 per cent. The case the railroads are making out in this hearing is vastly stronger and more compelling than the presentation of facts made when the last application for a general increase of rates was denied. The figures give proof of imperative need. A refusal of the Commission to grant the relief prayed for would be a shock to the country, and a disaster to its greatest business interest.

THE WHITE HOUSE WEDDING.

To the bride and bridegroom of the White House wedding a sympathetic nation has extended its congratulations. There have been other weddings in the official residence of our Chief Magistrate in the 113 years of its existence, including one within the memory of the present generation in which the President himself was bridegroom, but if either that or the elaborate wedding of President GRANT's daughter, in a less sophisticated if not a simpler age, seemed to excite a larger measure of public interest, the reason is that there was less in public life those days to awaken interest. Yesterday's ceremony was as impressive in its beauty as any ever held in the spacious salons of the Presidential mansion, the bride was as comely, as clearly representative of the best type of American young womanhood, as surely an object of affectionate public regard as any White House bride of the past.

Now, as in the past, the popular imagination is stirred by the spectacle of young love triumphant in the midst of the solemn and often unutterably tedious "affairs of state," in the very abiding place, in spite of any disposition its official occupant may have to banish intrigue from its portals, of political rule. A man and a woman are joined together in the living Presence; GOD hath joined them and the event, taking on a national importance because of the place of the ceremony and the origin of the bride, touches the sympathies of a nation which still believes in GOD, in spite of the present activity of His enemies, and which holds closely to the old ideal of the sanctity of marriage and the home.

President WILSON is to be congratulated as a father who has been enabled to bestow the care of a beloved daughter's happiness so well, and the bride's mother on the assurance that, however sharp may be the pang of parting, the marriage of her daughter was attended in spirit by a whole nation and such a blessing invoked as must endure. Finally, the nation is to be congratulated upon the occupancy of the White House by a family which so well represents the American ideal of the well-ordered home.

THE FORTY-SECOND STREET STATION.

There may be private corporation reasons why the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is averse to having the express station of its Broadway line placed at Forty-second Street, why it would prefer a station at the north end of Times Square. Whatever reasons there are for such a misplacement of the station, they must be private, for all reasons of public convenience and interest demand an express station at Forty-second Street.

Public convenience demands it because that is where great multitudes of passengers wish to enter or to leave the Subway. Nearly 100,000 passengers now use the Times Square station of the Interborough daily. With the completion of the Broadway and the Seventh Avenue lines, the westward extension of the Steinway Tunnel, and the construction of a tunnel through Forty-second Street west of Times Square to New Jersey, the traffic tributary to the stations of the two subways at that point will be enormously increased. It is at this point that a transfer from one system to the other would be most natural and easy, for the two lines here run for a short distance parallel, not more than seventy-five feet apart. An underground concourse would not only facilitate the transfer of passengers, but would provide sub-surface street crossings, thus diminishing the congestion and avoiding the dangers of the street at one of the most crowded crossings of the city.

The objection has been made, we believe, that to establish the Broadway express station at this point would increase the congestion. This is a baseless assumption, for additional facilities, while they may bring increased numbers, avoid congestion by providing for an unimpeded flow of the human current. If the coming and going of great numbers of persons at Forty-second Street and Broadway is to be avoided, then it will be necessary to remove the many hotels and theatres of the Times Square district to some other quarter of the city, and to remove also the Grand Central Station, the Pennsylvania Station, many business houses, and the new 1,200-foot piers now in course of construction. Certainly, the evil of congestion will not be mitigated by putting an express station at the north end of Times Square, for the great majority of the passengers alighting there would immediately return to Forty-second Street, because that is where they want to go. If the end sought is the inconvenience of passengers, then, by all means, the northerly site should be chosen, and the further north the better. It has been objected, too, that the underground pipes and conduits are an obstacle. That obstacle stands in the way of subway construction at every point. It is the business of the engineers and contractors to surmount it.

The public interest and convenience, as we have said, will be best served by an express station at Forty-second Street. If the advocacy of the more northerly site is based upon a private motive, we should say it is the business of the Public Service Commission to find out the nature of the motive and to give it consideration only according to its merit. But certainly the Commission cannot permit private interest to stand in the way of public convenience in a matter so important.

THANKSGIVING NUISANCES.

With the recurrence of Thanksgiving, one of our most characteristic national holidays, we must expect to have the cheer of the day again molested by the hordes of ill-bred, ungovernable children who, dressed in odds and ends of rags, and with their faces discolored or masked, are wont to pester householders and pedestrians with their demands for alms. These youthful disturbers of the public peace, (and in some parts of this city grown men take part in the hideous masquerade,) represent a strange survival of the Fantasticals who used to parade the streets, not on Thanksgiving Day, unless it fell exactly on Nov. 25, but in the annual celebration of the evacuation of New York by the British. When the celebration of Evacuation Day was abandoned the Fantasticals, who may have originally glorified the rags of the conquering Continentals, stopped parading, but their imitators, transformed to beggars, continued their nuisances on Thanksgiving.

The evil, which it was once hoped would die out, has grown worse rather than better, and the reason must be that timid or careless people actually give alms to these street brigands. This is the height of folly. It is unwise ever to give to street beggars, it is worse to encourage youthful offenders such as these. The police presumably have never been instructed to suppress the evil, but by refusing to give pennies to the beggars the citizens can surely do something to abate it. Appeals to parents, even of the children of the humbler tenements, might serve some good purpose if it were made by their pastors. The teachers in the public schools might help to abate the nuisance by warning the children of the existence of a law against street begging which ought to be strictly enforced. These fantasticals are not all children of the very poor by any means, but none of them can be the children of parents who are bringing them up wisely and well.

GETTING THE VOTES.

It is impossible to read without emotion Representative THOMAS's candid and touching statement of his position on the question of Congressional mileage. He says he wants it and does not care who knows it. Not on personal grounds. He could live on $7,500 a year "but it happens I am from a Republican district and in that kind of district it takes money to get the people to vote right."

That makes a straight issue whether the country needs Representatives chosen in that way from that sort of district. Is it worth while on public grounds to spend so much money on elections? Why not save the money and let the people realize that if they want themselves properly represented they must vote intelligently? Such is the conclusion reached by one manager of the remarkable campaign through which this city has just passed. In THE TIMES Magazine section last Sunday the manager of the Fusion campaign said that campaigns of red fire and frenzy are doomed. Mr. ADAMSON gives a list of approved ways of spending campaign funds which he thinks the city has outgrown, and which will not be used hereafter. Bands, bunting, and banners, he thinks, are foolish and futile arguments to address an electorate called upon to choose the officers charged with the expenditure of a billion dollars. The days for circus campaigns and circus conventions have passed. Hired hand-clappers and shouters for pay have had their day.

The reason why is even better than the fact. It is because voters are not influenced in that way sufficiently to make it worth while. They are willing to be amused and they do not need to be instructed. It costs over $20,000 to send a circular to each voter, and it is not worth while to send one telling voters, for example, how to split a ballot or to supply them with a sample ballot marked in the manner desired. The returns show that the instruction is unnecessary. We are willing to believe it, and we can venture to explain it. Mr. ADAMSON asserts it but does not tell how it came about. Our theory is that Fusion was able to make an efficient campaign because the newspapers helped in the work. There was a different sort of newspaper before there was a different sort of campaign, and there is not a different sort of campaign worker yet. Mr. ADAMSON testifies that there is no lack of takers of campaign funds. It merely is not worth while to pay them out in that way. That can only be because from the newspapers campaign managers get for nothing what is above price.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Journalism As Seen By An Expert.

Journalistic doctrine of the very soundest sort was preached by the General Manager of The Associated Press in his address to Columbia's students of newspaper-making. As is usually the case with sound doctrine, Mr. STONE presented nothing that was unfamiliar in either fact or theory to those of us who have had some or many of his opportunities for seeing both what the modern newspaper is and what it ought to be, but it was well, on the principle of "line upon line," that he should impress upon neophytes still presumably sharing to some extent the great public's highly inaccurate notions as to newspaper methods and motives certain great truths as to this particular combination of profession and business.

To Mr. STONE's declaration that the newspaper's first duty is to be useful—to give accurate information—information on which just opinions concerning current events can be based—he might have added that this has long been realized in many newspaper offices as the only foundation of real and permanent success. To this realization is due that importance of the reporter upon which he dwelt—an importance quite unknown in the days, sometimes so foolishly regretted, of so-called personal journalism. One editor was then about all there was to a newspaper, and everything in it was colored to suit that editor's private opinions and to advance his private ambitions. The latter sometimes were high and good, and sometimes they were the reverse.

Those were the days when "Old Subscriber," properly enough, stopped his paper when its editorial utterances did not suit him. He sometimes does the same thing now, but only from habit and without excuse, for if he is taking the right sort of newspaper it gives him both sides of every question, uncolored and fairly.

Mr. STONE attempted a difficult task and performed it with dubious success when he tried to establish an essential difference between news and what he called "episodes." Probably there is no line of firm division, for an earthquake, though distinctly episodic, is as distinctly news, and whether or not divorces, prizefights or fires on Grand Street are news depends a good deal more on how and why they are handled than upon their nature, considered abstractly. Historians have changed their minds of late years as to relative values, and no longer think that Kings and Generals and international bickerings are of anything like as much importance as are social and economic movements, the only evidences of which are often to be found in "sensations" and "human interest stories."

Expectations Sadly Disappointed.

As is too often the case, recent discussion of the "mother teacher question" has been characterized by more of emotionalism than of demonstrably accurate information as to whether the mother is or is not a better teacher than her unmarried rival. The disputants on both sides have been inclined to base their convictions on what they thought must be, rather than upon knowledge of what was, and, as always happens in those circumstances, probably nobody, in spite of all the argument, has changed the opinion with which he or she started.

In an evident and highly commendable effort to supply the controversy's lacking factor, one member of the Education Board, Dr. IRA S. WILE, as he said in the Cooper Union meeting, has been seeking to find out what the experience has been in States where there is no discrimination against the married teacher, and no penalty is imposed for her occasional enforced absences. According to the reports he received, in those States the mothers are regarded as the better teachers.

Dr. WILE began his investigation with that belief, however, and one notices that, quite without intention, of course, his inquiries were directed to sources whence only the opinions he wanted were to be obtained. In the printed summaries of his address there is nothing to show that the reports he received were based on statistical proof that the children learned more and better things when instructed by mother teachers. Yet such proof, if it exists, is certainly attainable, and if mother teachers really are superior to celibates, obviously the latter should be banned from the schools entirely. Nobody has yet suggested doing that.

And why did Dr. WILE, by profession a scientist, stir his hearers to applause by picturing the replacement of a "competent teacher with a splendid record" by "an inexperienced girl with no knowledge of the great problems of life"? That begged so many, many questions that one wonders how a scientist could do it—could present for ridicule and indignation a proposition that nobody ever made, an alternative wholly or largely imaginary. Some extremely bad arguments against the employment of mother teachers have undoubtedly been presented, in as well as out of the Board of Education. They excused impatience, but they did not refute the good arguments that have been offered. Neither did Dr. WILE refute them, nor will he unless he gets from his informants something more convincing than assumptions which at least possibly are pure sentimentalism.

Evasions and Anxieties.

A controversy is apparently to rage over the boy who the other day ran away from home, promptly found employment, and started in to earn the independent living for which, he had decided, the time had come in his case. The father traced the wanderer, brought him back to his distracted mother, and, without punishing or even criticising him severely, sent him back to school.

Some observers of this adventure see in it only the pain the boy caused to his parents, his inappreciation of educational advantages as the basis of a career; others commend his enterprise, his self-confidence—his "spirit."

Accurate determination of whether this boy should be praised or blamed would demand a fuller knowledge of the facts than can be obtained from the published accounts, but that boy, it is fairly safe enough to say, has some high qualities of character, and what seems to be his chief fault, inconsideration, is probably of his age rather than essential. He cannot be numbered, of course, among the boys of whom it is said that "they never gave their mother a moment's anxiety," but that can be said of few boys, perhaps of none, who in later life have proved that they were worth raising.

Presumably there are no mothers who would not, if they could, protect their boys from all perils and temptations. Their invariable failure to do so for boys mentally and physically active and competent is the inevitable and apparently necessary cause of maternal anxiety, but that feeling is not without its adequate compensations when the perils are escaped and the temptations overcome.

The justification of the boy who runs away from home lies in the use he makes of his liberty and independence. Off-hand condemnation of him is almost certain to be undeserved.

AMERICAN LANDSCAPES.

Interest in Gardening Is Growing In This Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Replying to "C.," who took issue with me in THE TIMES recently on "Apathy Toward Gardening," in which he states that I evidently know little of the interest taken in this subject in England, I am aware that the estate owners abroad are more attracted to their gardens than we find the American owners to be, but I am also awake to the fact that Americans are manifesting a keener interest in gardening in this present age than they ever did before.

As to his comparison of the New York show of last Spring with that of the Holland House show in London last Summer, morning is no time to seek a New York show crowd. Had "C." visited the New York show on any afternoon he would have found big crowds and a long line of automobiles and carriages awaiting their turn to get to the door; and these crowds were present although the weather was most inclement during many of the days on which the show was held. I venture to say that with the great interest which has developed in flower shows in this country within the last few years we will witness similar scenes at our shows before another score of years roll by as are now seen at the European flower shows.

During the four days of the Fall flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York, which was held the first of this month at the American Museum of Natural History, over 200,000 people passed through the doors.

"C." states that "whether the gardens are left to the gardeners or 'landscapers,' they cannot have the individuality or expression of long years of loving care and thought like the English gardens." To this I answer that long before many of our American estates attain the age of most of the English estates they will compare most favorably in their natural beauty, which is being developed, but which only time can finish.

American landscapes should not be compared with English landscapes. An American landscaper who knows his business can get more beautiful effects in the Fall from the coloring of the leaves than Europe ever dreamed of. This is due to different climatic conditions. On the other hand, Europe surpasses us in its Winter landscape effects on account of the holly, hews, and many varieties of laurel that are ever green in Europe, and which we, owing to our climate, cannot grow successfully, because they are not hardy with us. But the possibilities for beautiful effects are just as great here as in Europe or in any other part of the world; it simply remains for the skill of the gardener to develop them. Up to now, much of our trouble has been due to slavishly trying to follow European models and ideas. America presents opportunities for horticulture which are unequaled in any other portion of the globe. California and Florida can produce wonderful tropical effects; the East, while it may miss some of the hardy evergreens, still can grow enough varieties to make evergreens a feature, and, as stated above, our beautiful Fall effects are unequaled in any part of the world. PERILOUS MISSION WORK.

Women Going to Philippines May Encounter Much Danger.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with keen interest the news article in THE TIMES that two worthy women missionaries are to go to Mindanao and Jolo, in the Philippines, to work among the natives. I lived at Zamboanga, in Mindanao, for a year after Americans first took possession there. I made frequent visits to Jolo during that period and became fairly familiar with those people and their peculiar problems. I was a member of Gen. Bates's party when the treaties permitting slavery and polygamy among them were made, and our jurisdiction was accepted by their Sultans and Dattos.

Our one recommendation to them, as they could see it, was our solemn pledge that we would not try to do as the Spaniards had done—interfere with their religion or their domestic living customs. Before going there I had been in most of the other principal Philippine Islands. Nowhere else were any such people; they are not an irreligious people. In fact, they are fanatical Mohammedans.

I think that nowhere could Christian missionaries find territory so unfruitful as Mohammedan territory. When I was first picking up some of their languags thers ran toward me one day a handsomely dressed little boy, his mother following at a distance. I picked the boy up and asked his mother how much he was worth. I thought it an utterly harmless way of attempting a civility. But the scream the mother let out, followed by a quick rushing of men with knives from all the huts round about, soon convinced me I had offended seriously. A priest of their faith, who had been giving me language lessons, was luckily among the first to arrive. I explained to him I had meant nothing wrong. He in turn explained to me that bartering in children was very much of a reality among them. And, more than that, that it was not the custom for any man ever to address a remark to their women at all. I had doubly offended, as the child was a Datto's son, and only the children of the low and enslaved were for sale.

On calling at this priest's home for months afterward I found it always the custom to utterly ignore the presence of the women of the household. For American women missionaries to go among such people will, I am confident, create the most serious confusion and alarm. British officials in Borneo, handling the same kind of people, warned us time and again that it would be absolutely fatal to us to allow any soldier to have an affair of any sort with a Mohammedan woman—that a fanatical religious war would break out at once. We soon learned that the advice was good and was founded on a correct appreciation of the situation. ROBERT E. PRATT.

DOWSER'S PHILOSOPHY.

Diviner of Springs and Hidden Riches May Work Psychically.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The arrival in New York of Landrath von Uslar of Apenrade, the divining rod expert and friend of the Kaiser, gives occasion for noting that the public has only superficial knowledge of his philosophy. The most detailed reports on the divining rod and the ability of its wielder to locate hidden sources of water, oil, and valuable minerals are those of Sir William F. Barrett, F. R. S., professor of physics in the University of Dublin, printed in the "Proceedings" of the Society for Psychical Research, Vol. XIII., pp. 2-282, and Vol. XV., pp. 130-382. In these reports the subject is gone into very thoroughly, and the evidence examined from all possible sides. Prof. Barrett admits that he started on his investigations with the usual skepticism, but ended firmly convinced of the reality of the facts—that water and hidden metal can frequently be discovered by this means, when all other methods have failed. Various "theories" have been advanced to explain the action of the rod. Let us briefly enumerate these.

First, the theory of conscious fraud is now given up by all impartial investigators. A list of those who have been enabled to use the rod successfully should be a sufficient answer to this objection. Among them I may mention Lady Milbank; Mr. J. D. Enys, F. G. S., President of the Royal Geographical Society of Cornwall; the Rev. J. R. Blunt, Judge Spink of British Columbia, Sir R. Harington, Bart.; the Right Hon. Sir Edward Fry, &c. These are only a few of the many amateurs who can use the rod successfully. Prof. Hyslop himself has been enabled to make use of it on several occasions. Even granting that the dowser moves the twig voluntarily, by muscular action, the problem still remains: How does he know when to move it in this manner? That is the question.

We have next the theory of unconscious muscular action. This theory is adopted by Prof. Barrett as the real cause of the motion of the twig; but the primal question still remains unanswered; How does the dowser know when to bend it? That we must still answer.

The third theory put forward is that the dowser finds water because he is a student of geology, and knows the "surface signs" of water, or metal, as the case may be. Seeing these, he involuntarily bends the twig. This theory was carefully examined by Prof. Barrett, and found to be totally unable to explain the facts. Many of the dowsers were quite unread and unfamiliar with the subject. Most of the "amateur" dowsers know nothing of geology. Experiments were also conducted in which the dowsers were compelled to walk over the ground blindfolded, their conclusions checked off by two or more dowsers working independently. Further experiments were conducted in which the dowser was asked to find a piece of metal placed beneath one of several saucers. The twig invariably "dipped" over the right saucer! No knowledge of "surface signs" would have sufficed to inform the dowser as to which saucer hid the bit of metal.

There is again the theory that if you dig deeply enough anywhere you will find water. This again was proved to be quite untrue. Wells had repeatedly been sunk to great depths and no water discovered. Several of these had been sunk within a few hundred feet of one another, with no result. But the dowser not only found water between these "borings," but told exactly how much water would be found and at what depth.

Some experts are of the opinion that there is a physical cause—some subtle physical emanation or radiation which issues from the ground and affects the organism of the dowser. Others incline to a psychological theory, and believe that the dowser's power is more closely akin to clairvoyance. This is what the scientific committee is at present discussing in Germany—not the facts, which they consider established, but their interpretation.

SALVATION ARMY PIONEERS

Endured Insult and Ridicule, Like Suffragists of To-day.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having just read the article on the Salvation Army and woman suffrage by Everett P. Wheeler, and having lived at a time when the Salvation Army was new and in a town at a time when women were given citizenship, it seems but right that a few actual facts should have a place in your paper which will dispel the fearful forebodings of those who listen to the "misguided creatures" who imagine things.

In the early days of the Salvation Army they passed through the same forebodings and ridicule of hoodlums that patriotic women of to-day have suffered in some places. I well remember some of the Salvationists being arrested for "disturbing the peace," "frightening horses with their tambourines," and "exposing young women to dangers." Insulting epithets were shouted at them then, just as those opposed to woman suffrage shouted at the marchers in Washington, and in this city a few years ago.

I lived in a town at the time the vote was given to women, and at the first election in which the women voted the women, combined with the decent men, elected decent men to office, and the town was changed from a "tough" town to a suitable place in which to bring up children. The same happened in other towns, as one after another they gave the women their citizenship, until finally the whole State, and nine other States, did the same, and others are going to.

Psychology Tests for Servants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Anent the "new psychology" in relation to household servants, where may one learn, or be supplied with, the tests for application to servants? Also, may one find at the same source of information tests for application to mistresses? If not, the work must be of very slight value compared with its possibilities. The mistress who would not gladly welcome the test for herself with the thought of requesting it for a maid should be given a course in a kindergarten if it might be found that her mentality were still plastic enough to derive benefit from training in elementary subjects.

We are frequently informed that the age of romance is dead. Do we, in our sometimes stupid rush, ever pause to think what an apology we should have to leave for future years if we thought we had really arrived at the age of reason? A. B. C.

Engineer Carr's Heroism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The occasional fatal blunder of one locomotive engineer among 20,000 or more in this country, who daily convey 3,000,000 passengers in safety, is promptly seized upon in the horror of the moment by people more thoughtless and prejudiced than heartless to illustrate the inefficiency or indifference of railroad labor "as at present controlled." Very much less is ever heard, or ever known beyond local limits, of cases like that of Engineer Carr, lifted from his cab on a fast express unconscious from scalding steam, but his hand on the throttle and his train safely brought to a standstill.

Many a man, falling in battle, has won a monument for deeds less magnificently heroic in defense of his sacred trust.

DRAMATIC LIBRARY SALE.

Rare Books and Letters of Stage People Bring Good Prices.

Three sessions of the sale of Douglas Taylor's dramatic library were held by the Anderson Auction Company yesterday. P. K. Foley of Boston paid $41 for the following: "Memoirs of John Howard Payne, the American Roscius," with criticisms on his acting, London, 1815; "Lispings of the Muse," a selection from juvenile poems by Payne, privately printed, 1815, and "Therese, the Orphan of Gevern," a drama by Payne, New York, 1821, all in one octavo volume. Inserted were a portrait and autograph letter of Payne and a scarce play bill announcing "Benefit for Master Payne," and presenting "Hamlet." at the New Theatre, May 31, 1809.

W. T. Hanson, Jr., gave $25 for an extra-illustrated copy of Gabriel Harrison's "Life and Writings of John Howard Payne." Inserted were fifty-four portraits, plates, and autographs.

Three volumes of the "Thespian Magazine and Literary Repository," London, 1793-94, extra-illustrated by the insertion of 152 fine portraits, were bought on order for $39.

D. T. Valentine's "New York Manual" for 1844-5 sold for $22, his manual for 1845-46 brought $27, and his manual for 1847 $23.

Benno Leowy obtained for $62.50 "Memoirs of the Life and Private Adventures of Madame Vestris," London, 1839, extra-illustrated by the insertion of 200 portraits, views, and autograph letters, including the colored frontispiece portrait of Madame Vestris by I. R. Cruikshank. This volume is said to have been extra-illustrated by Augustin Daly and to have cost $200 originally.

Among the letters of well-known actors and actresses sold were those of Charles Mathews, the elder; Maggie Mitchell, Mme. Modjeska, Harry J. Montague of Wallack's Theatre; James E. Murdock, John E. Owens, Henry Placide, Tyrone Power, the elder; "Jim Crow" Rice, Lillian Russell, Forbes-Robertson, McKee Rankin, Stuart Robson, Tomaso Salvini, Mr. and Mrs. John Sefton, Francois J. Talma, Mary Taylor, Ellen Terry, Lydia Thompson, J. L. Toole, George Vandenhoff, James W. Wallack, Lester Wallack, Genevieve Ward, William Warren, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams, Francis Wilson, Mrs. John Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wood, and William B. Wood.

There will be two more sessions of the sale to-day.

NEW SUFFRAGE HOME.

Empire State Campaign Committee Opens Headquarters.

Another suffrage headquarters has come uptown, and this afternoon rooms on the third floor of 1 East Forty-first Street, just opposite the Public Library Building, will be occupied by the Empire State Campaign Committee. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, International Suffrage President, is Chairman of this committee, the work of which is to bring suffrage to New York State women in 1915. On the committee are represented the State Suffrage Association and all but one of the big suffrage organizations of New York City. The Women's Political Union has not joined forces in this work.

The new headquarters makes four within a block of each other—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont with her Equal Franchise Society, at 15 East Fortieth Street; the National Suffrage Headquarters, at 505 Fifth Avenue, corner of Forty-second Street, and the Women's Political Union, at 13 West Forty-second Street.

The upstate campaign which the women will wage was opened by Mrs. Raymond Brown, the new State President, on Monday night at Troy, N. Y., where she spoke to a packed house in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

13,229 AT COLUMBIA.

Corrected Registration Figures Given Out—907 Instructors.

Columbia's final registration figures, with all corrections for duplicates made, shows a total of 13,229 students, according to announcements made at the university yesterday. To give instruction to this vast army of students there are 907 professors and teachers.

Teachers College heads the list with 1,670 students, and the graduate schools have 1,496. Columbia College has 841 students, and a freshman class of 325, the largest in its history. The schools of engineering have 665, Barnard College has 623, the school of law 450, the college of pharmacy 441, the school of medicine 341, the school of architecture and music 159, and the school of journalism 106. In extension courses 2,492 are enrolled, and there are 1,152 in special courses in Teachers College, while 4,539 attended the Summer sessions.

OLD TAPESTRY BRINGS $2,550

Mrs. John Jacob Astor Among the Buyers at Cottier Sale.

There was a good attendance at the Cottier sale of the American Art Galleries yesterday afternoon, among the buyers being Mrs. John Jacob Astor and her mother, Mrs. Wm. H. Force. The returns for the day were $9,037 and for the entire sale to date, $47,769. A Seventeenth Century Flemish tapestry, ("Triumph of Alexander the Great,") brought the highest price of the sale, going to Mrs. H. Murray for $2,500. A Flemish Renaissance tapestry, ("Life of King David,") brought $1,000, going to R. Johnson, and Flemish verdure tapestry brought $1,425, going to Charles.

David Warfield was among the buyers, paying $200 for two panels of fine Cluny lace with insert squares of eyelet embroidery, $405 for three other panels, similar, and $190 for an Italian altar frontal with pictured scenes in embroidery.

Mrs. Astor paid $114 for thirty-eight yards of slate colored damask bird, vase and plant design, and $120 for a fine fillet lace panel, 11 feet 3 by 5 feet. G. H. Bland paid $120 for two panels of fine Cluny lace with eyelet embroidery inserts. Mrs. H. A. Alexander, Mrs. G. B. Brownell, Mrs R J. Young and R. Forrest Russell were also among the buyers.

The sale will be concluded to-day when more textiles and etchings and engravings will be sold.

Crown Street In 1699.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interesting article in Sunday's TIMES headed "Liberty Street in 1749" leads me to confirm the name of Crown Street by stating the fact that I own a parchment document which reads as follows:

The six and twenty day of December A. D. 1699, and in the eleventh year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord William Third, by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, defender of the faith—Elizabeth Loyd, one of the daughters of Thomas Loyd, late of the town of Philadelphia, in the Province of Pennsylvania, in America, Esq., deceased, granted to Jacob Bodey, all that certain part of land lying and being without the north gate of the said city, bound on the east to a certain street called and known by the name of the broadway, and to the north by Crown Street.

THANKSGIVING LUCK.

Thanksgiving comes upon the trail
Of Autumn's russet gown,
And never mind how much we rail
At price of turkey, pig or quail,
We'll eat our dinner without fail
And chuckle when it's down.

Nobody ever counts the cost
Of chicken pie or duck,
When in Thanksgiving morning's frost
The appetite we thought we'd lost
Comes back—for only, then, we wish
We might have emptied every dish—
And even if the price was high
Our one long happy, heartfelt sigh
Is for our great good luck.

LURANA SHELDON.

CARNEGIE FINDS 78 A YOUTHFUL AGE

But Life Is So Full of Happiness He Regrets to Pass the Milestones.

SOME THINGS HE DISLIKES

Especially Sex Plays and Fiction—Approves President Wilson's Policy in Mexico.

Andrew Carnegie was 78 years old yesterday, and he busied himself receiving the congratulations of friends. In the afternoon he went out for a long walk with Mrs. Carnegie.

As is his custom on birthdays, Mr. Carnegie received reporters yesterday and talked long and interestingly to them on many subjects, among them the trouble in Mexico, the new tariff, campaign contributions of both the proper and improper sort, and, of course, a great deal about peace in the family of nations.

Mr. Carnegie was up and about at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, and you can take his word for it that no one in the vicinity of Ninety-first Street and Fifth Avenue felt one bit younger or any happier than he did at the dawn of his seventy-ninth year.

"How on earth do you expect a youngster like me to know anything about the so-called joys and delights of an old age," asked Mr. Carnegie, "when I am feeling as young and chipper as any one of you young men? As a matter of fact, I am just exactly 78 years young, and that is all there is to that.

"But," added Mr. Carnegie, and he was a bit solemn, "I have passed another milestone and I am not keen on going ahead too fast. This earth of ours is such a heaven to me that I want to stay here just as long as I can, and if any of you youngsters can get me an option on life, I will let you name your own price."

Somebody mentioned Mexico.

"Ah, there's a sad business for you," said Mr. Carnegie; "but after all it's a family affair of the Mexicans and I don't see that we have any right to interfere. Just remember that the civil war in this, our own country, was the biggest family row in the history of the world, and we would not have tolerated any outside interference. If any country had interfered, both the North and the South would have stopped fighting long enough to repel the intruder."

"What do you think of President Wilson's policy with reference to the Mexican situation?" Mr. Carnegie was asked.

"I am certain," he replied, "that President Wilson is acting for the best in the way he is handling this very delicate question. We must remember that President Wilson knows a great many things about the situation that the public does not know. I don't know whether the trouble in Mexico can be settled peacefully or not, and I know that in warfare property destruction is unavoidable."

Mexico did not fit in with the well-known peace views of Mr. Carnegie, and so at the first opportunity he switched the talk to matters nearer home. He took up the question of public entertainment.

"The level of public entertainment," said he, "is sinking, and the overemphasis of sex in the magazines, fiction, plays, and even the opera is lamentable. But the solution is in our own hands, and I for one have stopped going to theatres where such plays are being produced, and I have discontinued my subscription to two magazines that have taken up the prevailing deplorable fashion of emphasizing the sex question in fiction.

"Keep these things out and you will go a long way toward changing 'heaven is not home' to 'our home is heaven.' There is woman, for one, to make it so. For self-sacrifice, devotion, loyalty, g

MISS EDITH LOGAN WEDS IN ST. THOMAS'S

Married to Dewees W. Dilworth Before Society Throng — 2,000 Lilies in the Chancel.

MISS ROOSEVELT A BRIDE

Daughter of John Ellis Roosevelt Married to Fairman R. Dick in St. Bartholomew's Church.

The wedding of Miss Edith Logan, daughter of Mrs. John A. Logan, Jr., and the late Major John A. Logan, to Dewees W. Dilworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Dilworth of this city, formerly of Pittsburgh, was celebrated at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Thomas's Church.

This was the first large society wedding of the season in the recently completed church, with its wonderful Gothic lines and cathedral distances. The floral decorations were displayed in the chancel, more than 2,000 recession lilies being used, and thousands of white Marguerites, also four immense and rare palms, towering twenty-five feet high, which were grown in the royal gardens of Belgium.

While the guests were arriving Prof. T. Tertius Noble, the organist, formerly of York Minster, England, played a brief musical programme. The ushers were Seth R. French, Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr., Arthur Gardiner, J. Macy Willets, Henry Sproul, Lawrence C. Beggs, Robert S. Patten, Gordon L. Rand, S. Bayard Rives, Sellars McKee, Rufus S. Tucker, and Joseph Dilworth, a cousin of the bridegroom.

The bride walked down the nave with her brother, John A. Logan, 3d, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin and a veil of rare Hompton lace which fell almost to the end of her Court train. A cluster of orange blossoms held her veil in place, and her skirt was caught up at the side by a cluster of the same bridal flowers. A touch of color was given to her costume by pale purple orchids in the shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her ornaments consisted of a superb ovollar of diamonds worn high on the neck, the gift of the bridegroom, and a corsage ornament of diamonds shaped like a butterfly, with pendants of diamonds, presented by her mother.

Mme. Henri de Sincay, the bride's sister, who came over from Paris to act as matron of honor, wore a trailing gown of pink silk, the court train of sheer, white organdie of brown tulle falling from the shoulders, and a hat of brown tulle edged with skunk, and topped with a single pinkish rose. She wore a string of pearls, and superb corsage ornament, half moon of diamonds, and carried a muff of brown tulle, with golden orchids and pink roses.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Vouletti Doctor, Mercedes de Acosta, Audrey Osborn, and Eleanor Lamson. They appeared in frocks of pink silk with tunics of brown tulle edged with brown fur, scarfs of brown tulle, and gold lace hats, each carrying brown tulle muffs.

Mrs. Logan was in brocaded taupe chiffon velvet and a silver lace hat and silver fox furs, and Mrs. John A. Logan of Washington, D. C., was in black. Mrs. John A. Logan, third, who was Miss Margaret Powell of St. Joseph, Mo., wore a silver lace over white satin and a brown velvet hat.

The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of the church, performed the ceremony, William de Forest Manice was best man for Mr. Dilworth.

The couple left later for Virginia on their honeymoon. On their return they will stay with Mrs. Logan until January, when Mrs. Logan sails for Europe. They have taken a house at Hewlett, L. I.

Dick-Roosevelt Wedding.

Fairman R. Dick, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Evans R. Dick, Sr., and Miss Gladys Roosevelt, a daughter of John Ellis Roosevelt, were married quietly yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Bartholomew's Church, the Rev. Dr. Houghton Parks officiating. The church was simply decorated with tree palms and huge bowls of rose red chrysanthemums.

Miss Roosevelt walked with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown having a long, square train. The corsage top was entirely of point lace and the elbow sleeves were of tulle and lace. On each side of the end of the train long wings of point lace were laid over from the side to the centre, and down each side of the skirt from top to bottom was a wide flounce of white lace that opened to give a panel front effect to the gown, and from the waist line over this panel fell scarfs of white net and lace, embroidered in crystal. Her long lace veil was held with a cap of Irish lace that almost completely concealed her blonde hair. She carried lilies of the valley.

Miss Jean Roosevelt was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a peg-top skirt of brocaded white charmeuse, slashed in front to show a white chiffon petticoat, the satin being draped slightly. The girdle was of orchid-colored satin, with a bow at the back, and above this girdle was a loose fold of satin, the rest of the corsage being a loose-fitting kimono blouse of white chiffon with elbow sleeves, open in the front half way to the waist line, and finished with tiny white tulle frills. Her hat was of natural straw-colored satin, with a brim rolling high at the front and left side and low at the right. She carried a large cluster of purple orchids.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., a sister of Mr. Dick, was the matron of honor. She was gowned like the maid of honor, but her hat flower and bouquet were of brilliant mauve orchids, and the girdle matched the flowers.

Mr. Dick's best man was his brother, Evans R. Dick, Jr., and the ushers were Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., George Emlen Roosevelt, and N. L. Tilney of New York; J. Austen Amory and Alexander D. Grant of Boston, and A. S. Mather of Cleveland, Ohio. A small reception for the relatives followed at the residence of Mr. Roosevelt, 818 Madison Avenue.

MISS GOLDSMITH A BRIDE.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Goldsmith Weds Dr. L. Kessel at St. Regis

The wedding of Miss Evelyn Marian Goldsmith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Goldsmith, and Dr. Leo Kessel of this city was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the St. Regis. The ceremony was performed by Judge Almet Jenks in the marble ballroom under a bower of white roses and lilies of the valley, the bridal couple walking up an aisle formed by gilt standards and white ribbon.

The bride wore a gown of white satin draped with lace and trimmed with pearls, and a tulle veil surmounted by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids. Her father gave her in marriage.

Mrs. George Ewing acted as matron of honor. She wore pale yellow moire with a brown hat, and carried yellow roses. Dr. Alfred Cohn was best man for Dr. Kessel.

There were 400 guests at the wedding and the reception which followed. The ballroom and the Louis XVI rooms were decorated with white chrysanthemums and growing plants, and a buffet collation was served in the oak banquet room.

Dr. Kessel and his bride left later for the South on their honeymoon, and upon their return they will reside in this city.

The bride is a graduate of Barnard College, and her parents live at the St. Regis. Her father is a well known lawyer.

Justice Eugene A. Philbin and Mrs. Philbin of 63 West Fifty-second Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eugenie A. Philbin, to Arthur R. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Strother Jones of 29 East Thirty-ninth Street. Miss Philbin was introduced to society last season, and has been socially active in the younger set ever since.

Mr. Jones is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1909, and is a member of the Tuxedo Club. His father is a well-known polo player. No date has been set for the wedding.

MISS BETH LEARY'S DEBUT.

Daughter of Mrs. Daniel J. Leary Introduced at a Tea.

Mrs. Daniel J. Leary of 26 West Forty-ninth Street introduced her daughter, Miss Beth Leary, at a tea yesterday afternoon. A theatre party, a supper, and dancing at the Leary residence followed in the evening.

Mrs. Leary, in ping and silver lace, and the débutante, in white lace and silver and carrying pink moss rosebuds, received. Miss Frances Montagu Ward and Miss Ruth Wills were at the tea-table. Others assisting the hostess were the Misses Dorothy Taylor, Joy Williams, Marion Hall, Evangeline Hill, Priscilla Bull, Eleanor Pomeroy, Rowena Lawrence, and Virginia Geddes.

The young men asked for the theatre party and supper were Charles Requa, Dunbar Adams, James and Theodore Crisp, Morell Swasey, Robert Ingersoll Brown, Holmes Daly, Donald Daly, Harold Van Tyne, Eugene Moore, Brenton Pomeroy, Clifton Baumann, Harold Williams, and Garrett Day.

BRIDE OF REV. C. B. STUNTZ.

Miss Florence A. Watters Weds Son of Bishop Stuntz, Who Officiates.

Miss Florence Ada Watters, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Philip M. Watters, pastor of the Washington Square Methodist Church, was married last evening to the Rev. Clyde Bronson Stuntz, son of Bishop Stuntz, Methodist resident in South America, in the Washington Square Church. Bishop Stuntz and Dr. Watters officiated.

Miss Hyla Watters was her sister's maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Jane Tildsley, Clara Stuntz, Katherine Whitney, and Grace Briggs, whose engagement was recently announced to Rev. P. S. Watters. Hugh C. Stuntz was his brother's best man, and the ushers included Gilbert Q. Le Sourd, the Rev. Philip Sidney Watters, Harry F. Hunter, and Heldon T. Adams.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Zabriskie Weds.

A theatrical crazy quilt was unrolled at the Fulton Theatre last night and for the better part of two hours had the audience gaping with surprise or wondering what would happen next.

No nomenclature of drama will serve to describe it, so for want of a better—term "The Misleading Lady" may be called a cubist play. With this difference, perhaps. That cubic art is mostly unintelligible, whereas no one will experience any difficulty in grasping every idea this play contains.

To comprehend just the state of mind, however, which made its composition possible—well that's another matter altogether.

Anyhow, there's a lunatic in it.

And he believes that he is Napoleon. Also, he creates no end of amusement, and ends by touching a really pathetic note in a passage in which he thinks he is transforming a harmless and obliging American citizen into a Marshal of France, and is then marched back to the sanitarium while his sympathetic keepers sing the Marseillaise, to keep up the sad delusion.

This, however, is only one incident in a play which begins with an arraignment of the fair sex that is sure to create discussion and develops drama, farce, and vaudeville by fits and starts, so that from one thing to th enext the spectator is kept in a state of perpetual doubt.

It all happens as the result of a seemingly harmless joke. A would-be actress, Helen Steele, induces a man to proposed to her in order to convine a producer that she is the right person to act the rôle of the siren in a forthcoming production. that is all right as far as it goes, only she happens to pick the wrong man for the experiment. He is a dominant, fearless gentleman recently returned from Patagonia who has definit theories about womankind that he isn't afraid to put into practice. When Helen suggests that he may know women, but that of woman, the individual, he knows nothing, and never will until he "gets under the bell-glass" and makes a study of her, he unceremoniously bundles her up, and, despite shrieks and struggles, carries her off to his loge in the Adirondack wilderness.

There, after she has made various efforts to escape, he chains her up, and, while studying her on the one hand, proceeds to teach her a few lessons on the other. And, as is the way in these things, she doesn't realize how much she loves him until she has laid him out with a smash of the telephone receiver across the forehead When he recocers consciousness she is missing. And besides the complications involving the escaped lunatic, he is presently kept guessing by an irate gentleman with a six-shooter who claims to be married to the lady, and various other intruders who happen to be wandering around the mountainside on that dark and stormy night.

How he faces his rival unflinchingly, how he blows tobacco in the later's eyes, thereby gaining possession of the shooting iron; how the lunatic Napoleon, expecting an attack, loads a shotgun with coffee beans and awaits the enemy; how the door finds a woodsman's hole and promptly ceases to qualify as a canine Sherlock Holmes; how the lunatic chops a rope in half, expecting thereby to make it longer—how this, and that, the other thing, and yet some como about, come across, and come around, are mere details.

The main fact to record at present is that besides being a curiosity in the play line, "The Misleading Lady" is very good fun of a sort—of several different sorts, in fact.

And some good acting helps to make it so—notably the definite, virile, authoritative quality of Lewis Stone's hero and the amusing variety of Frank Sylvester's Boney.

WEDDED IN ST. GEORGE'S.

Delavan M. Baldwin Married to Miss Eleanor Hinton.

Delavan M. Baldwin, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Delavan Baldwin, and Miss Eleanor Hinton, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Post Hinton, were married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, which was decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums, with smilax draping the galleries. The Rev. Karl Reiland, rector of the church, officiated.

The bride, who walked with her father, Alfred Post Hinton, wore a traveling bridal robe of white satin draped with old point lace, a tulle veil held with orange blossoms, and carried lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, a sister of the bride, was Miss Isabel Hinton, and the bridesmaids were Miss Mabel Hinton, another sister; Miss Louise Baldwin, a sister of the bridegroom; and the Misses Rosina Otis, Ruth Haskins, Dorothy Salisbury, and Dorothy Dominick. The bridesmaids were yellow crêpe de chine frocks with tunics trimmed with fur. Their hats were brown velvet and tulle with touches of yellow in the feathers.

Runyon S. Baldwin was his brother's best man, and the ushers were two other brothers, Martin S. Baldwin and Roland D. Baldwin; Shelton E. Martin, Morris Groves, John P. Ramsay, and William F. Lawson.

BLACKWELL—HUNGERFORD.

Daughter of Mrs. Wm. A. Hungerford Married to Birney Blackwell.

The marriage of Miss Margharita A. Hungerford to Birney Blackwell of this city took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. William A. Hungerford, 121 West Sixty-ninth Street. The Rev. Nathan A. Seagle performed the ceremony.

The bride, whose brother, Charles S. Hungerford, gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white charmeuse trimmed with rose point lace and embroidered with pearls. Her tulle veil was caught up with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids. Owing to a recent death in the family, Mrs. Rufus M. Gibbs of Baltimore, Md., was unable to act as matron of honor, and Mrs. J. Harvey Williams, a sister of the bridegroom, acted in her place. She wore cloth of gold with a hat to match.

Frank E. Blackwell was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Henry Sheldon, J. Harvey Williams, Charles R. Wendt, and Edward Kirby.

"THAIS" GIVEN IN ENGLISH.

Massenet's Opera Performed at the Century Opera House.

Athanael	Louis Kreidler
Nicias	Gustaf Bergman
Palemon	Alfred Kaufman
Man Servant	Hugh Schussler
Thais	Lois Ewell
Myrtale	Florence Coughlan
Crobyle	Othelia Hoffman
Albine	Cordelia Latham
Conductor	Alfred Szendrei.

Massenet's "Thaïs" was added to the repertory of the Century Opera Company last evening, when its first performance was given in English. The audience was about as large as those that have witnessed most of the Century performances. It is a noteworthy fact that the opening of the larger house on Broadway has as yet had little effect upon the numbers who visit the Century Opera.

"Thais," since Mr. Hammerstein first introduced it to this public half a dozen years ago, has retained a certain popularity, though it is not one of his most brilliantly inspired works for the lyric stage. It has a few taking passages which please the public, the redoubtable "Meditation" being, of course, the chief. But there are extensive strata of dullness and of slow solemnity in the opera, when the action proceeds with the utmost deliberation or halts entirely.

The doings of the early Christians on the Banks of the Nile are sometimes a little slow for modern taste in dramatic representation. On the other hand, the scenes of gayety in Alexandria offer contrast and relief. The part that Miss Mary Garden had in making "Thais" popular is not lightly to be disregarded in considering the place of the opera in the repertory; nor the assistance rendered her by such artists as Messrs. Renaud and Dalmorès. All of whom have been prominent in performances of the opera heretofore heard in New York.

There was intelligent striving on the part of the singers who carried the burden of the musical drama last evening. Mr. Kriedler as Athanael was deserving of much credit for his sincere and skillful impersonation, as well as for excellent singing. There were also excellences in Miss Ewell's Thais. The later part of it was better than the unregenerate portion, and yet if she did not wholly succeed in this it was not for lack of an anxious imitation of Miss Garden's manner, poses, gestures, and even, what was more serious, some of her vocal mannerisms. Mr. Bergman met reasonable expectations, not too high, as Nicias. Mr. Szendrei worked hard to get good results from the orchestra, which showed training, and certain instrumental solo effects were well played. Among these the violin solo in the "Meditation" did not hold a high place, though this interlude was repeated at the demand of the audience, as has so often been the case before.

The scenery, it was announced, was borrowed from the Boston Opera House, as the Metropolitan Opera House has never produced "Thais" and had none to lend. But it did not do much credit to the Boston Opera House, either in design or in color, and much of it seemed rather crude.

JOSEF HOFMANN'S RECITAL.

Beautiful Playing of the Pianist at His Second Appearance.

At his second recital in Carnegie Hall, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Josef Hofmann did some of the most remarkable and beautiful piano playing that he has ever set before the public, in a programme that was original and extremely interesting for the lovers of the highest in his art. It was devoted entirely to Beethoven, Schumann and Liszt. The numbers by Beethoven comprised three of his smaller pianoforte pieces, the Rondo in C, and two Bagatelles that rarely occupy the attention of pianists in public, and one of his greatest and most difficult ones, the sonata Op. 106 in B flat, often called, because of the German word that he used in the title, the "Hammer-klavier" sonata.

Mr. Hoffman was in a poetic and introspective mood. The transition from the simple pieces to the great one was not abrupt. He played them with exquisite delicacy and refinement of sentiment, with a touch of shimmering gold, of infinite gradation in nuance of dynamics and color. The sonata, as he played it, was revealed in its true stature: it was a performance of supreme euphony, of subtly adjusted proportions of its greater outlines as well as of all the details of its structure; and it gave the impression of spontaneity, of an immediately personal utterance.

Few performances of this sonata succeed in that, because its difficulties, intellectual as well as physical, stand in the way. But no difficulties stood in Mr. Hofmann's way. The intricacies in which the work abounds, and especially the fugue of the finale, were an open book to him, and he made them so to his listeners. And yet the conception of the work throughout was in the poetic, the introspective spirit. It hardly verged upon the heroic: the grandiose first movement might even have had more passionate intensity than Mr. Hofmann read into it, and in the Adagio the mingling of passion and sentiment which Beethoven invites gave perhaps a predominance of the sentiment, but a sentiment of uplifted fervor, of appealing eloquence that it is not given to many to bring home the significance of this composition to an audience; yet Mr. Hofmann's performance of it deeply impressed his listeners, and he was several times recalled after it.

His Schumann numbers included several of the "Fantaisrestücke," which Mr. Hofmann rearranged in a different order from Schumann's, and the "Kreisleriana," more music that virtuosos do not often much consider.

The pieces by Liszt included the Prelude in C, the two graphic Legends of Saintly Miracles, "En Rêne" and one of the two polonaises.

MME. FRANCES ALDA SINGS.

Soprano Assisted by Gutia Casini, Young Russian 'Cellist.

Mme. Frances Alda, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera House, gave a song recital last night at Carnegie Hall. She was assisted by Guita Casini, a young Russian 'cellist, and by Frank La Forge at the piano. There was a large audience. Mme. Alda's first group of songs was made up of four by Secchi, Purcell, Reichardt, and Carey. Her second and third groups were modern, several of them being down on the programme as sung for the first time here. She also sang with 'cello obligato Cesar Franck's "Panis Angelicus."

The singer was at her best after the first group. In that, whether it was the result of fatigue sustained in a long concert tour, or of nervousness, her voice was not at its best. There were times in the florid passages when its clarity was somewhat dimmed and intonation doubtful, but against this can be set the feeling of appropriate mood which she was able to infuse into these old songs, making them something more than mere display pieces. Cesar Franck's song was sung with a breadth and repose that made it, in its own genre, one of the most effective achievements of the evening.

It was when she came to the more varied expression allowed in her last two groups that the singer did her best work. Her voice was more fresh and powerful, and it quality was excellent. Among her new songs Leo Blech's "Tanssolee Stompe" was one of the most interesting. Gutia Casini, the 'cellist, apparently not out of his 'teens, showed himself a young man of promising talent. Frank La Forge, who seemed to be playing his accompaniments without notes, added a great deal by his work at the piano. Two of the songs were sung by Mme. Alda, and his "Retreat" was played by Mr. Casini with success.

Mr. Connell's Recital.

Mr. Horatio Connell had a gratifyingly large audience at his song recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon and held its attention and elicited its applause by his performance of a varied programme which extended from Bach and Haydn to Wolf and Brahms and a group of English and American composers. Mr. Connell's voice is sympathetic and beautiful, a baritone, but with something of the basso quality. His interpretations are sincere and musical, his diction well finished and clear; and it was evident that his audience derived a real pleasure from his singing.

W. W. FINLEY, HEAD OF SOUTHERN, DEAD

Railway President Succumbs to Sudden Attack of Apoplexy in Washington Home.

GENIUS AS TRAFFIC MAN

Improved Agricultural Conditions in South and Built Up Road's Earnings—Succeeded Spencer in 1906.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—William Wilson Finley, for the last seven years President of the Southern Railway Company, died suddenly at his home here early this afternoon. He had recently returned with his family from his country home at Warrenton, Va., and reopened his town house in the capital. He was apparently in good health, and was about to leave for his office this forenoon when he was seized with an attack of apoplexy and hemorrhage of the brain. Death occurred before physicians could reach his bedside. So sudden was the seizure that it was several hours before any one thought to notify the headquarters of the Southern Railway.

Mr. Finley was just past 60 years of age, having been born on Sept. 2, 1853, at Pass Christian, Miss. He entered railway service when he was 20 as stenographer with the New Orleans, Jackson & Great Northern and Chicago, St. Louis & New Orleans. He was for three years a stenographer in the Vice President's office, nine months the receiver's secretary, one year secretary to the agent for the Trustees, four years chief clerk in the general freight department, and three years Assistant General Freight Agent. In 1883 he became Assistant General Freight Agent for the Texas & Pacific Division of the Missouri Pacific and in 1886 General Freight Agent of that road.

Mr. Finley became Third Vice President of the Southern in 1905 and Second Vice President a year later, becoming President a few months later, following the tragic death of Samuel Spencer, who was killed on one of his own trains. He also was made President of the Alabama Great Southern, the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific, Georgia Southern & Florida, Mobile & Ohio, Northern Alabama Railroad, Southern Railway in Mississippi, and the Virginia & Southwestern, all subsidiaries of the Southern Railway.

Mr. Finley's advance in railway work was due to his genius as a traffic man, in which department he had few equals. As a part of his work in this field he entered upon an extensive campaign for the improvement of agricultural conditions in the South, particularly in the cotton belt. He organized industrial and agricultural departments, employed experts to help the farmers combat the boll weevil, and made a great many addresses on agricultural subjects. He was a firm believer in publicity. He succeeded in pulling his company through its crisis in the panic of 1907, when it threatened to become bankrupt, and had since built up its earnings after greatly improving the property.

Mr. Finley is survived by Mrs. Finley, the Misses Lettie V., Lillie D., Leonora, and Celestine Finley, and his son. The funeral services will be held in St. John's Episcopal Church, this city, at 11 A. M. on Friday. The burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Little thought has been given to the question of Mr. Finley's successor yet, but the new President is to be chosen from among the company's officials.

T. M. EMERSON DEAD.

President of Atlantic Coast Line Stricken on Inspection Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 25.—T. M. Emerson, President of the Atlantic Coast Line, died at his home here at 11 o'clock to-night. President Emerson and other officials of the Coast Line had been out on an inspection trip, and while en route to Montgomery, Ala., on Sunday he was taken ill with acute indigestion. He was rushed to Waycross, Ga., arriving there early yesterday morning, and was taken to a hospital, where he spent the day.

According to the reports here, the physicians objected to Mr. Emerson making the inspection trip, but he insisted upon going. He was brought here by a special train. Two physicians and a nurse accompanied Mr. Emerson on the inspection trip.

Mr. Emerson was born in Preble County, Ohio, March 29, 1851. He entered the railroad service in 1867 as a clerk in a freight office at Hagerstown, Ind., and by degrees forged his way to the front rank of railroad men in the country.

Lewis, 2d, of Philadelphia, John C. Weeks, Ernest W. Pittman, Walter Hughson and Lindsay H. Welling, and William Emery, Jr., who is to be best man.

RUSSIAN SYMPHONY PLAYS.

Altschuler Gives Jaernfelt's "Praeludium" for First Time Here.

The Russian Symphony Society gave its first subscription concert of the season at Aeolian Hall last night. The audience was of good size. Again Modest Altschuler played Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 6, the "Pathetique," at the beginning of the programme. This was followed by the same composer's "Ophelia," from the incidental music to "Hamlet," and then came Sibelius's "Valse Romantique" and Jaernfelt's "Praeludium," the latter played last night for the first time here. Maurice Warner was the soloist in Glazunoff's violin concerto, and the concert ended with Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Spanish Caprice."

The audience applauded most at the end of the third movement of the symphony, and in the second half of the valse and the "Praeludium" were each encored. If any proof additional to that supplied by his début were needed to establish that Maurice Warner is not yet a competent soloist for symphony orchestra concerts he gave it last night. The performance of the concerto was not enlightening either on the part of the orchestra or on his. They were not playing together when the end came. Mr. Altschuler, possibly in an attempt to follow him, indicating unaccented beats, while the orchestra was on the accented ones. The "Spanish Caprice," which the orchestra played well enough, seemed rather much ado about nothing.

"THE SUSPECT" A THRILLER

One-Act Play by George Baxter Acted at 44th Street Music Hall.

"The Suspect," a one-act thriller by George Baxter, is one of the features of the bill at the Forty-fourth Street Music Hall this week, where it is being presented by William A. Brady. The scene is laid in the office of a New York Police Inspector. Tim Casey, a reformed crook, is brought before the Inspector on a charge of bank robbery, and after receiving the "third degree" is handcuffed and led to a cell. Immediately afterward a woman comes to see the Inspector and asks his help in finding a man who saved her daughter from a burning building.

Of course, the supposed bank robber is the man she is looking for, and as the fire took place at the time the bank was robbed, the man is set free, with a reward of $10,000 from the child's grandfather. Casey, the thief is played by William Harrigan. Wayne Arey does a fine bit of acting as the Inspector. Gladys Morris is the woman, and Charles Bock plays a Police Sergeant.

Morgan Hill, Cattleman, Dead.

RENO, Nev., Nov. 25.—Morgan Hill, millionaire cattleman, owner of three ranches along North Fork of the Humboldt River, comprising 23,000 acres, died last night at Elko, this State. He suffered a stroke of paralysis more than a year ago. He left a widow, the daughter of Daniel Murphy, whose cattle once roamed the ranges of four States. His son-in-law, Capt. Worth, formerly of the French Army, has managed Mr. Hill's ranches since this illness became serious. Mr. and Mrs. Hill are well known in New York and Washington.

Samuel Winter Thomas.

Samuel Winter Thomas, a retired wholesale importer of cigars in Manhattan and for fifty years a resident of Bay Ridge, L. I., died on Sunday afternoon in his eighty-seventh year at the home of his son, Robert H. Thomas, 1,501 Ridge Boulevard. Mr. Thomas was born in Flushing on Feb. 21, 1827, and was graduated from Delaware College, Delhi, N. Y. After spending several years in the cotton business in Florida he came to this city more than fifty years ago, and with his brother formed the cigar importing firm of William H. Thomas & Bro., which is still in existence.

ARMY-NAVY FOOTBALL PLANS------BOXING---BASEBALL---MOTOR BOATS

PRESIDENT COMING TO FOOTBALL GAME

Mr. Wilson to Sit on Army Side During First Half of the Contest.

THEN WILL GO TO NAVY SIDE

White House Bride and Groom to be with President's Party—How Ticketholders May Reach Seats.

Secretary John B. Foster of the New York Baseball Club announced yesterday that President Wilson would surely attend the Army and Navy football game at the Polo Grounds on Saturday. In the President's party will be Mrs. Wilson and her daughters and Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, the White House bride and bridegroom. The President will probably arrive in this city on Saturday morning and leave for Washington soon after the game ends. The Mexican situation is taking up much of his time, but he will lay aside his official duties long enough to see the game. President Wilson is fond of football and baseball, having played both branches of sport while at Princeton.

During the first half of the game the President will occupy a box on the Army side and in the second half he will sit on the Navy side, probably as the guest of Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The spectacle at the Polo Grounds at this game promises to be one of the most impressive ever seen at an athletic event in this city. The gold and lace of the Army and Navy officials and Diplomatic Corps will lend much splendor and color to the occasion.

One of the most attractive features of the annual game between the two branches of the service is the drill of the cadets and midshipmen before the game. The perfectly drilled bodies of young men go through a long series of manoeuvres on the gridiron. The singing and cheering of both branches is usually better organized and more vociferous than the outburst of noise and melody at the big college games.

The New York club yesterday announced all the plans for the game and gave out an explanation of the entrances and the seating arrangements. The gates at the Polo Grounds will be opened at 11 o'clock, and the game will commence at 2 o'clock.

The Army will occupy the south side of the field and the Navy will be on the north side of the gridiron. The police arrangements will be the same as they were at the world's series games under Inspector Titus. It will be an idle task for the curious to go up to the grounds because no one will be allowed to pass up Eighth Avenue beyond 155th Street without a ticket.

The Army team will probably come here to-morrow or Friday and will have headquarters at the Hotel Astor. The Navy team will leave Annapolis to-morrow night and will stay at the Vanderbilt Hotel while in the city. Both hotels will have big crowds of Army and Navy people.

The directions for spectators going to the Polo Grounds, as given out by the New York Club yesterday, are as follows:

GATE NO. 1, EIGHTH AVENUE.

Spectators holding tickets for Sections 1 to 24 inclusive will enter at this gate. Spectators holding tickets for all sections upstairs will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for upper boxes 1 to 160 inclusive will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for lower boxes 1 to 194 inclusive will enter at this gate.

ELEVATED STATION ENTRANCE.

Spectators holding tickets for Sections 1 to 24 inclusive will enter at this gate. Spectators holding tickets for all sections upstairs will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for upper boxes 1 to 160 inclusive will enter at this gate.

SPEEDWAY ENTRANCE.

Spectators holding tickets for Sections 1 to 24 inclusive will enter at this gate. Spectators holding tickets for all sections upstairs will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for upper boxes 1 to 160 inclusive will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for lower boxes 1 to 194 will enter at this gate.

GATE NO. 2, EIGHTH AVENUE.

Spectators holding tickets for Sections 36, 37, 38 will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for boxes 306 to 449 inclusive will enter at this gate.

GATE NO. 3, EIGHTH AVENUE.

Spectators holding tickets for Sections 34 and 35 will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for boxes 288 and 305 will enter at this gate.

GATE NO. 4, EIGHTH AVENUE.

Spectators holding tickets for Sections 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 33 will enter at this gate.

Spectators holding tickets for Boxes 195A, 195 to 287 inclusive will enter at this gate.

PRESS GATE.

The press gate will be located as usual at Gate No. 1.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

In order to avoid congestion of traffic, holders of tickets are sincerely cautioned not to delay starting for the Polo Grounds until the last moment.

No person without a ticket will be permitted to pass above 155th Street.

The gates will be opened at 11 o'clock A. M. and the game will begin at 2 o'clock P. M. The Army will have the south side and the navy will have the north side.

NAVY INVITES MANY GUESTS.

Cabinet Officers and Officers to Attend Football Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 25.—Though President Wilson has given only a tentative acceptance to the invitation extended him by the Naval Academy authorities, it is hoped that he will be at the Army-Navy football game on the Polo Grounds, New York. He has promised to be present unless prevented by official duties. No President but Roosevelt has seen an Army-Navy football game. Secretary of State Bryan is also expected to be present. Other cabinet officers who have made their arrangements to be present as guests of the Navy and who have been assigned boxes are Secretary Daniels of the Navy, Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury and Attorney General McReynolds.

The naval authorities were somewhat surprised but pleased to receive a box. Other distinguished persons who will be in boxes on the Navy side are: Admiral Dewey, Rear Admirals Wainwright and Clark, Representative R. P. Dodson, Senator James O'Gorman, Gov. Goldsborough of Maryland, President Hibben of Princeton, and Col. R. M. Thompson.

There was another secret practice at the Naval Academy this afternoon. There was no regular practice game but there were short scrimmages designed to try out certain formations. The coaches are trying to bring a machine-like perfection in the execution of the plays and are giving final instructions in body blocking and putting opponents out of the play. These have been strong points in the play of the Navy team throughout the season.

YOST AT WEST POINT.

Michigan Coach Gives Cadets Drill in New Formations.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Driving the men through a ten-minute scrimmage and winding up with a fast signal drill, Head Coach Daly of the Army team succeeded in injecting more fire and dash into the Cadets to-day than has been in evidence for some time. He was ably assisted in the drill by Coach F. H. Yost, Michigan's "hurry up" man, and "Ham" Fish, Harvard's '09 Captain. These two coaches assisted Daly and his corps of gridiron advisers in putting the cadets through a stiff pace, which continued until darkness crept over the Army's gridiron. The Army's practice to-day was most encouraging. The men went at their work with much vim and gusto, and before the drill was ended had mastered several new inventions that Yost introduced.

Hodgson, Huston, and Benedict, the recently injured trio, were all out, but only the latter two participated in the rough work. Hodgson had a long punting drill. Jouett, who has been tried successively at quarter back and end on the scrubs, was shifted to Hodgson's place at left half on the regular to-day, and did well in the drill. Hobbs did the kicking for the scrubs. Merrill and Markoe were the ends, Wynne and Weyand the tackles, Jones and Huston guards, and McEwan centre. Prichard and Doe alternated at quarter, and Benedict, Hoge, and Jouett made up the back field. Except for Jouett, this is the most likely combination for the Navy battle, although there is an element of doubt concerning one of the line positions and one back field job.

ITHACANS AT SEASHORE.

Stiff Practice for Cornell Players at Atlantic City.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 25.—Favored with ideal football weather Cornell's sturdy gridiron warriors went through several hours' stiff signal practice at the Inlet Park here this afternoon for final work before the game with Pennsylvania Thanksgiving Day. The plays uucorked spelled trouble for the Quakers, and the Cornellian eleven may prove more of a stumbling block to the Red and Blue than in the last twelve years if the afternoon's work may be taken as a criterion.

Behind barred doors, Head Coach Al. Sharpe put his proteges through a gruelling two-hour signal practice and light scrimmage. Jack O'Hearn, who was stationed at right end and forced into retirement because of the injuries to his eyes in the Harvard game early in the season, was also there and assisted Van Ormand with the end men.

A variety of plays was unfolded. Quarter Back Barrett was in complete charge, and ran the team splendidly. Ends Shelton and Fritz took down forwards in good style. Criss-cross plays, trick formations, end runs and straight football were resorted to, and the accurate consummation of all proved a source of wonder to those having seen the ragged work early in the season.

Kicking practice was held, Fritz and Barrett doing the punting, Shuler and Barrett being used in the place kicking, and Fritz and Carter doing virtually all the drop-kicking. It is very likely the bulk of this work will be done by Barrett and Fritz on Thanksgiving Day, however, as they were most successful this afternoon.

COLUMBIA SOCCER TIE.

Princeton Escapes Defeat by Mistake of New York Player.

An accidental goal for Princeton scored by a Columbia player saved the Tiger soccer eleven from defeat at the hands of the Blue and White yesterday afternoon, when the two elevens played a tie game on South Field of 2 to 2. The Columbia team played a more aggressive game than the Princeton aggregation, and in the first half, in which all of the scoring was done, they had distinctly the better of it. Their victory was spoiled when S. Day, the Blue and White right back, kicked a goal for the Orange and Black from a scrimmage in front of the goal. The line-up:

Princeton.	Positions.	Columbia.
Beck.....	Inside left	Shanholt
Bird.....	Centre	Colquhon
Velte.....	Inside right	Peck
Boyle.....	Outside right	Collingwood
Twelvetrees...	Left half back	C. Day
Dinsmore...	Centre half back	Hamilton
Faber.....	Right half back	Mason
Gates.....	Left back	Leguardo
Robertson...	Right back	S. Day
Jackson.....	Goal	Krefeld

Goals — Columbia, Colquhon, Shanholt; Princeton, Beck, S. Day. Referee—Mr. Davis. Linesmen—Lamb, Columbia; Moore, Princeton.

Short Drill for Lafayette.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 25.—The early falling darkness necessitated a short football practice on Marsh Field this afternoon. The work was confined to rehearsing the signals and building up the defense for the game which Dickinson is expected to use on Thanksgiving Day. In the drill nearly all the 'Varsity men participated. They showed no effect of the terrific strain of the last few weeks and of the gruelling contest with Lehigh. With the exception of Capt. Wagenhurst, who is still a little stiff, the players were in good condition. Dick Diamond's collarbone is not broken, as was anticipated before the X-ray, but he will not be able to play on Thanksgivink Day. It is altogether likely that Pardee will take his place. Pardee has been playing splendid ball all season. Brown will hardly be able to play in this game, but Kennedy is expected to be in shape to take his place, hence the Lafayette back field will be just about the same as usual.

Brickley May Lead Harvard.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 25.—Harvard football players will not elect next year's Captain for some time yet. The choice will be among Brickley, Hardwick, and Trumbull, all of whom will be seniors next Fall. Brickley is the logical man, however. He has scored 245 points in his three years of football at Harvard, having made 34 field goals, 24 touchdowns, and 5 goals after touchdowns as a freshman and 'Varsity player. Trumbull is the most aggressive of all the candidates, but his election is not likely. Whoever is the Crimson leader next year will have the nucleus of a fine eleven. Only three of the men that started the Yale game Saturday will be lost by graduation. These are Hitchcock, Storer, and O'Brien.

Desjardiens Chicago's Captain.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Paul Desjardiens, centre rush on the University of Chicago championship football team, was elected Captain of the 1914 even. Next season will be Desjardien's l 'n intercollegiate sports.

FOREIGN HORSEMEN TO BUY TROTTERS

European Agents Bid at Old Glory Sale — Captain Aubrey Sold for $3,150.

With the arrival of four prominent European horsemen in this city and the better breed of harness racing horses being offered, the second day's bidding showed a slight increase yesterday at the Old Glory horse sale at Madison Square Garden.

The top price of the sale was reached in the afternoon session when Captain Aubrey, a bay stallion with a record of 2:07¼, by Peter the Great, out of May Fern, was knocked down to F. A. Crowe of Toronto, Canada, for $3,150. The stallion was foaled in 1904, and is 15.3 hands, being the premier offering of the King Hill Stock Farm, which occupied the attention of the buyers for the greater part of the matinée session. The buyer is connected with Crowe & Murray of Canada, who in past years were prominent exhibitors at the National Horse Show with hunters and jumpers. The stallion in all probability will be used in the Dominion for breeding purposes.

Charles Mills a former American trainer of harness racing horses, who for a number of years has been closely identified with the largest racing stables in Germany where he had won 106 races; George Wiltshire an English breeder and trainer and J. Wall also of Germany arrived at the Garden at the opening of the evening session. The fourth of the foreign horsemen was Stefan Ten, a former well known figure in racing circles in America. He is now located in Russia and has arranged a number of sales in the last three years which took from America some of the best trotting stock. He will remain here for a week and it was reported that he had purchased five yearlings which will be exported to Russia.

The most important offerings of the day were from the King Hill and Walnut Hall stock farms. The former comprised sixty head and brought a total of $16,445 or an average of $275 a head. The Walnut Hall offerings numbered twenty-eight head and averaged $230.

A. L. Thomas of St. Joseph, Mo., was a prominent bidder during the day and made a number of purchases. His top figure was paid for Lowell Axworthy, a standard bred and registered bay colt, a full brother of General Watts. The colt was knocked down for $1,000. The colt is entered in no less than six engagements, among them being the Kentucky Futurity for $25,000; The Horseman Futurity, $20,000; The Horse Review purse, $17,500; the Matron Stake, Missouri State Fair Futurity, and Western Breeders' Futurity.

Sorrento Todd, a bay stallion, sixteen hands, was another which engaged the attention of the buyers, and brought $875, being knocked down to Joseph T. Beaudoin of Quebec. While many of the prominent horsemen of the country are now assembled in the metropolis, a meeting has been arranged to be held this afternoon at 5:30 P. M. at the Holland House by the Amateur Road Drivers' League of America. It is to be the annual session at which officers for the coming year will be elected. Joseph F. Gibbons and Andrew Crawford will be the New York delegates. The best prices obtained during the day follow:

Garnish, ch. m., 2:18¾, by Highwood-Angerona; F. B. Davis, Port Jefferson, L. I. $350

Sorrento Todd, b. s., 2:11, by Todd-Sorrento; Joseph T. Beaudoin, Broughton, Quebec 875

Irwin Aubrey, b. g., 2:27½, by Captain Aubrey-Yvonne; F. K. Lachance, Montreal, Quebec 375

Captain Aubrey, b. s., 2:07¼, by Peter the Great-May Fern; T. A. Crowe, Toronto, Ontario 3,150

Ida Aubrey, b. m., by Captain Aubrey-Hindu; J. J. U. Morrow, Newcastle, Penn. 410

Lowell Axworthy, b. c., by Axworthy-Carpet; A. L. Thomas, St. Joseph, Mo. 1,000

Nansie Nan, b. m., by Klatanah-Mary Wickliffe; L. N. Jourdain, Three Rivers, Quebec 310

Colonel Yorke, blk. c., by Walnut Hall-Sylvia Yorke; James J. Brady, Philadelphia, Penn. 425

Columbia Swimming Races.

Poor performances marked the final events of the interclass swimming meet at Columbia University yesterday afternoon. H. S. Osgood, '15, one of the most promising sprinters on the 'Varsity team, won the hundred-yard swim from scratch in the slow time of 1:05. J. H. Cleveland was a double winner, capturing the furlong swim in 3:10 and the fifty-yard sprint for fat men in 0:28 3-5. The summaries:

220-Yard Swim.—Won by J. H. Cleveland, '16, (2 seconds;) P. Agramonte, Extension, (scratch,) second; S. H. Bijur, '15, (2 seconds,) third. Time—3:10.

100-Yard Swim.—Won by H. S. Osgood, '15, (scratch;) C. G. Eicholz, '16, (2 seconds,) second; T. Barrett, '14, (2 seconds,) third. Time—1:05.

50-Yard Swim for Fat Men.—Won by J. H. Cleveland, '16, (2 seconds; M. Maze, '14, (scratch,) second; S. H. Van De Water, '17, (1 second,) third. Time—0:28 3-5.

Hockey Practice for Squadron A.

Hockey practice for candidates for the Squadron A team will start Friday, Dec. 5. The use of St. Nicholas Rink has been from 6:45 to 7:30 P. M. every Friday during the season. At the first practice a captain will be elected and other matters of importance discussed.

WANTS FOOTBALL BARRED.

Col. Townley of West Point Says Sport Serves No Useful Purpose.

With the near approach of the Army-Navy football game at the Polo Grounds Col. C. P. Townley, Superintendent of the West Point Academy, sounds a note of alarm in his annual report to the Adjutant General of the Army at Washington which followers of football fear may bring about the abandonment of the sport at West Point. Col. Townley calls attention to the large percentage of injuries in football as compared to other sports, and emphasizes the fact that "football serves no useful purpose in the physical development or training in the corps," but is simply an entertainment.

It is pointed out in the report that 75 per cent. of the injuries received by cadets are due to football, while not more than fifty of the 600 cadets engage in this sport. Col. Townley says the sport has no special value as a physical training aid to warrant its continuance. The discipline at West Point is very severe, and permanent injuries to cadets may result in their being declared unfit for active service. According to the report of the medical director, during the season of 1912 sixty-one cadets were injured, eleven injuries being of a character liable to cause future trouble. In his report Col. Townley says:

"Attention is specially invited to that part of the following report submitted by the surgeon relating to football injuries. In considering that 75 per cent. of all injuries are due to football during its season it should be recalled that these come from but forty or fifty cadets who train and engage in this sport, while all other injuries come from the entire corps of over 600 cadets and are principally caused by work in the gymnasium, such as athletics, wrestling, boxing, &c., and from mounted drills in cavalry and field artillery. The game of polo in which first and second classmen engage also furnishes a few injuries.

"As injuries from football are so frequently of a serious and permanent character it is a question whether this form of sport is of sufficient value to the corps to warrant its continuance and the tremendous expenditure of time and money involved. Of the sixty-one injuries due to football and treated at the hospital from Sept. 1 to Nov. 30, 1912, eleven were of a character that are liable to cause future trouble; six were synovitis, three were sprains, one separation of adhesions, and one a fracture of fibula. In other words, 18 per cent. of the injuries were of a serious nature. Football certainly serves no useful purpose in the physical development or training in the corps, as it is voluntary and attracts to its squad only the few who are already physically strong, active, and well developed. Its value, if any, lies mainly in the interest, entertainment, and excitement it affords to other members of the corps than the thousands who attend its principal contests and are willing to contribute toward its support."

Col. Townley submits extracts in support of his attitude from Lieut. Col. F. R. Keefer, Medical Corps, which in part follows:

"With reference to the subject of injuries, (which were responsible for the greatest number of admissions to the sick report,) the table which follows gives some interesting information. It will be noted that injuries received in football are responsible for a very great amount of disability. Moreover, these injuries are largely of a more permanent character, a considerable percentage of them resulting in the knee joint, with resultant synovitis. Such an injury practically invariably leaves a permanent weakness of the joint. Injuries received in football have constituted nearly three-fourths (75 per cent.) of traumatisms from all causes during the football seasons of the past four years.

"The digestive disorders are mainly gastric and hepatic catarrhs of moderate character, consequent upon hasty eating and neglect to evacuate the bowels regularly.

Brown Fears Indian Warriors.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 25.—In the final practice of the Brown eleven for the season, Staff, one of the guards, received an injury to his shoulder that may keep him out of the game with Carlisle next Thursday. As several of the team are still suffering from the effects of last week's battle with Harvard, sentiment expressed by the coaches was not optimistic as to the probable showing against the Indians. The entire student body saw the team scrimmage work on Andrews Field.

Indians Resting at Mansfield.

MANSFIELD, Mass., Nov. 25.—"We're down here in the woods looking for a new supply of "pep' for the game Thanksgiving morning with Brown," said Coach Glenn Warner of the Carlisle football team. The Indians while in training quarters here are taking matters easy. Guyon, the swift back, is busy practicing at kicking goals from the field, but the work of the team as a whole is being confined to signal practice. Coach Warner says the players are all on edge.

Chicago Wants Eastern Game.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The University of Chicago, champion of the "Big Nine," probably will play an Eastern team next season. This was intimated to-day by A. A. Stagg, athletic director, who announced that several "old friends" may be dropped from Chicago's football schedule next year. He did not name the Eastern team which may be added.

Minds Will Play for Penn.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Fast signal drills constituted to-day's practice of the University of Pennsylvania football team at the Whitemarsh Country Club in preparation for the game with Cornell on Thanksgiving Day. The fact that the Ithaca eleven is at Atlantic City seemed to be an added incentive for the Red and Blue players to go at a fast pace, and the men looked like sprinters as they dashed up and down the field. Minds, the star full back, who had been on the side lines because of an injury, was in the practice again to-day, and there is little doubt that he will be in the battle against Cornell. The Pennsylvania coaches are greatly pleased with the form of the team as a unit, and express confidence of a victory over their old-time rivals.

Toohey to Captain Rutgers.

John P. Toohey, 1914, of Kingston, N. Y., has been elected captain of the Rutgers College football team. Toohey has played tackle for the past three years. The Rutgers students held a banquet and bonfire on Monday in celebration of the victory over Stevens on Saturday.

ENGLISH CHAMPION OUTPOINTS BLOOM

Freddie Welsh Leads in Seven Rounds of Bout with Brooklynite.

Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of England, outpointed Phil Bloom of Brooklyn in a ten-round bout at the Atlantic Garden A. C. last night. It was no easy task, however, that the English title-holder encountered. Bloom showed up stronger as the bout wore on, and in the final round he gave Welsh as busy a time as it is possible to crowd into three minutes, driving the Englishman back time and again with hard punches, which always went true to their mark. Welsh had gained such a lead in the early rounds that Bloom's rousing finish failed to turn victory in his favor.

The ringside weights were 135½ pounds for Welsh and 132¾ pounds for Bloom. It was Welsh's first appearance in New York in almost three years, and time has exacted its toll from the one-time remarkably clever boxer. He has slowed up perceptibly, and at long range last night he was no more effective than his less experienced opponent, who shot over a straight left with unerring regularity. In the clinches Welsh did his best work, but even at this style his punches were lacking in steam, and in the few outbursts of punching when he landed almost at will on Bloom the blows failed to slow up the champion. Bloom's weakness at infighting, or protecting himself at close range in the early rounds, resulted in his defeat. It was while the Brooklynite was backed against the ropes, with both hands held in front of his face, that the Briton did his most effective work. In the closing rounds Bloom showed a disposition to exchange punches in the clinches, and he gave as much as he received.

Welsh was entitled to seven of the ten rounds, and Bloom gained the honors in three. In the fourth Bloom kept Welsh off with a straight left to the face, and Freddie had no chance to do any infighting, which had earned him the three preceding rounds. In the eighth Welsh appeared tired, and he let Bloom do all the leading. Bloom's punches did no damage, but he was entitled to the uneventful round, as Welsh did little more than stay on the defensive. In the tenth Bloom cut loose with a display of punching power such as the previous rounds had not uncovered, and he led all the way. His blows jarred Welsh time and again, but were not forceful enough to floor the Englishman.

Outside of these three rounds Welsh's aggressiveness while he had Bloom backed into a corner or against the ropes gained him the honors. The lightning jabs and clever footwork of former days were missing, but experience helped, and the Briton outgeneraled the Brooklyn boy. In the centre of the ring Welsh did very little effective punching, but with Bloom on the ropes he worked both hands to head and body in a way that had the youngster bewildered. Both were jarred a few times with straight punches to the jaw, but neither went down, and at no time was either boxer in distress.

Athletes at 22d Regiment Review.

A special review and reception will be held this evening by the Twenty-second Regiment Engineers at the new Armory 168th Street and Broadway. Among the special guests invited through the courtesy of Col Hotchkin, will be Dr. Heinsegmann, Athletic Representative of Austria, James E. Sullivan, Judge Bartow S. Weeks, and a number of others interested in athletic sports. During the evening a pontoon boat contest will take place between the First, Second and Third Battalions. The men of the respective battalions have practised and trained hard for this contest. After the contest there will be dancing. The new track of the regiment is completed, measuring 6 laps to the mile, with a 100 yard straightaway. The same was laid entirely by the engineers themselves, and pronounced by experts the best of its kind.

Erlandsen Wins Road Race.

R. Erlandsen, carrying the colors of the Glencoe A. C., won the weekly road race of the St. Vincent Ferrer A. C. last night over a course approximately four and one-quarter miles, and part of which was run around Central Park. Erlandsen assumed the lead at about the half-mile mark, and from then until the finish of the race maintained a safe advantage, never really being forced to extend himself. He finished the distance in 24:57, while E. Long of the Salem-Crescent A. C., who was second, was timed in 25:24. Fifteen athletes faced the starter and all finished. Following is the order of finish of the first ten contestants:

R. Erlandsen, Glencoe A. C., 24:57; E. Long, Salem-Crescent A. C., 25:24; J. Ventarini, Ozanam Association, 25:31; S. Devine, Ozanam Association, 25:52; W. Burke, Union Settlement A. C., 26:00; C. Gray, Glencoe A. C., 26:09; A. Monaco, unattached, 26:16; R. Plant, Federal A. C., 26:29; J. Best, unattached, 26:34, and J. Barinque, New York Evening High School, 27:53.

A. A. U. Run in the West.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Entries in the A. A. U. mid-Western cross country run, which closed to-day, include such a strong team from the Illinois Athletic Club that it was made favorite for the event. William Kennedy, the I.-A. C.'s best distance man, is ill, and not able to compete, but with Ray, who holds the junior national A. A. U. championship; Waage, possessor of the Central A. A. U. one-mile record, and Sidney Hatch, Coach Charles Wilson has a good combination. The race will be run at Winnetka over a six-mile course.

New Ends for Coach Thorpe.

The announcement that Viviano and Carey, 'Varsity ends, and Curran and Brady, substitute ends, would be unable to play against Mount St. Mary's College eleven Thanksgiving Day caused a hurried search yesterday in Fordham University for suitable wing material. The football management succeeded in finding two experienced gridiron men. Viviano underwent an operation on his nose Monday, Carey has a broken rib, Brady has water on the knee, and Curran was hopping around on crutches yesterday, the result of the scrimmage the day before. Head Coach Tom Thorpe thought seriously of canceling to-morrow's contest until informed of Manager McLoughlin's success in getting "Heck" Lee and "Bill" Jackson to come out for the end position. Lee is a junior in the medical school and plays the left-field position on the 'Varsity nine, and Jackson is a senior in the college and was a member of the football squad last Fall. They alternated at left end during the practice period, Conklin holding down the right wing.

INDICT PENN. R. R. ON REBATE CHARGES

Grain Shippers Included in True Bills Involving a Maximum Fine of $1,530,000.

SIX INDICTMENTS FOUND

Keystone Elevator Co. and Miller Brothers, Defendants in Former Cases, Among Those Accused.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Three indictments containing 165 counts and alleging offenses carrying a maximum fine of $1,530,000 were returned to-day by the Federal Grand Jury against the Pennsylvania Railroad and others on charges of failing to collect demurrage charges and of giving or receiving rebates. Separate indictments were also brought against the Keystone Elevator and Warehouse Company, Harvey C. Miller, and John F. McLaughlin, President and Superintendent, respectively, of that corporation; Morris F. Miller, J. Elsie Miller, and Thomas M. Sloan. The Millers are members of the grain firm of L. F. Miller & Sons and Sloan is the firm's general bookkeeper. All told six indictments were found.

The Pennsylvania is accused of having failed to collect demurrage charges on cars containing corn consigned to L. F. Miller & Sons. The railroad is also charged with failing to collect charges for storage and elevation on grain shipped to the same concern and with giving rebates to that firm.

There is an indictment directly against the Keystone Elevator Company and McLaughlin, charging them with making false reports of weight on grain consigned to the Millers. With Sloan and McLaughlin the Millers were indicted on charges of conspiracy to obtain discriminations in transportation at less than the regular rates.

The indictments are based on charges of discrimination made to the Interstate Commerce Commission by rival shippers from time to time. These charges were presented to the Federal Grand Jury early in the Fall after investigation by special agents of the commission.

The first bill, containing fifteen counts, charges the Pennsylvania Railroad with failure to observe tariffs relating to demurrage on cars. Each count relates to a particular car and alleges that the demurrage charges of $1 a day a car should have been paid by L. F. Miller & Sons. Under the Elkins act the maximum fine is $20,000 for each offense, or a total of $300,000.

The second indictment is against the Pennsylvania Railroad, Harvey C. Miller, and McLaughlin, and contains seventy counts. The first thirty-five counts are drawn under sections 1 and 2 of the act of 1903, and the second thirty-five under the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, and its amendments. The first nineteen counts under the Elkins law charge the defendants with failure to observe tariffs relating to storage, and the remaining sixteen charge failure with not enforcing the elevation tariffs, the storage and elevation being upon carloads of grain carried over the Pennsylvania Railroad, and stored in the Keystone Company's elevator. The remaining thirty-five counts relate to storage and elevation charges.

An indictment consisting of eighty counts against the same defendants charges them with giving rebates through the medium of alleged false claims presented by L. F. Miller & Sons and paid by the railroad, and based upon alleged false reports of weight made in the case of each particular carload of grain. Another bill of forty counts asserts that the Millers and Sloane accepted rebates.

In an indictment containing forty counts it is alleged that the Keystone Company and McLaughlin, by means of false reports of weight, permitted L. F. Miller & Sons to obtain transportation at less than regular rates. The indictment charging conspiracy contains three counts and names Miller, Miller, Sloane, and McLaughlin as having conspired to obtain the rebates by the use of a false claim for damages in connection with the transportation of grain.

The Keystone Elevator Company was indicted several years ago on similar charges. The case went to the United States Supreme Court on appeal and was ordered back to the District Court. Harvey C. Miller and his brother, Morris E. Miller, were tried several months ago before Judge Speer of the Federal Court in Savannah. They had been indicted in conjunction with the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company and the Seaboard Air Line Railroad. Harvey C. Miller was found guilty and was fined $5,000, but his brother was acquitted.

An official of the Pennsylvania Railroad said the company would not give out a statement in regard to the indictments. Elsie Miller, one of the defendants, also declined to discuss the subject.

LEAVES FRISCO BOARD.

Bixby Resigns as Director—Yoakum Out of St. Louis Trust Co.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 25.—The resignation of W. K. Bixby from the Directorate of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad and the severance of connections between B. F. Yoakum, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Frisco and the St. Louis Union Trust Company became known here to-day.

Mr. Yoakum did not formally resign, but ordered a local broker to sell his ninety shares of St. Louis Union Trust Company stock. The sale automatically removed him from the Directorate of the board, as a Director must own at least ten shares of stock. Mrs. Yoakum still owns one hundred shares of the stock.

The trust company acted as local banker for the Frisco system. Mr. Yoakum's action is believed to have had some connection with the recent investigation into the Frisco receivership conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission in St. Louis, as the sale of his stock was made the day the hearing closed.

Mr. Bixby explained his resignation by saying:

"I am already connected with the Wabash Railroad as a receiver and felt that I had better not retain my place on the Frisco board, simply because I could not give sufficient time to the duties of both offices."

EXPORTS UP UNDER TARIFF.

Shipments of Goods Increase, While Imports Are Dropping.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Exports and imports under the new tariff are being watched with keen interest by the trade experts of the Treasury and Commerce Departments. The returns for October, balanced with those received up to Nov. 21, give some indication of the effect of the new duties. Thus far it is clear that there is no upheaval. In fact, the signs are all the other way. Exports and imports for the first three days of October were placed with those of September, in order to keep the results of the new tariff law to themselves, the law having gone into effect on Oct. 4.

In the ten months of this year imports, compared with last year, fell off $50,694,000, while exports increased $134,352,880. Imports in October were $45,000,000 less than in 1912. Those free of duty fell off $21,136,000, while the dutiable imports declined $23,858,000. Exports for the month were greater by $16,357,000. The excess of exports over imports for October were $138,634,000.

Figures of particular commodities for that month under the new tariff will not be available for several weeks. It has been apparent thus far, however, that there is a steadily increasing export of iron and steel manufactures, cotton and cotton manufactures, leather goods, automobiles, and manufactured meat products.

B. & M.'S PLIGHT "SERIOUS."

To Meet Its Obligations Must Increase Rates, Says Chairman Elliott

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—The Boston & Maine Railroad's financial condition was characterized to-night as "very serious" by Howard Elliott, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, in an address before the New England Dry Goods Association.

"The Boston & Maine has suffered a decrease of $1,221,000 in net returns during the first four months of the present fiscal year," Chairman Elliott said. "Unless this decrease can be wiped out in the remaining eight months the company will have failed to earn enough to pay its obligations."

The remedy, he said, was to be found in an increase in rates.

Regarding the examination of the road's property by Samuel M. Felton, President of the Chicago Great Western Railroad, Mr. Elliott explained that Mr. Felton found many instances in which considerable economy in the operation of the road was possible, but only at great initial expense.

"The Boston & Maine Railroad now," he said, "is worth more than the par of its capitalization."

Referring to the Government's demand for a reorganization of the New Haven system to conform to the Sherman Anti-Trust law, Mr. Elliott said:

"I don't think we ought to be brought into litigation at this time. We ought to work the matter out in a practical way. We are doing what we can to readjust conditions, and we are still struggling to make matters right."

DENOUNCES PRINTING LAW.

Delaney, Investigating Contracts, Calls It a Gigantic Humbug.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—"A gigantic humbug" was the term Commissioner John H. Delaney of the Department of Efficiency and Economy applied to-day to the State printing law. He insisted that it should be repealed.

Mr. Delaney has been investigating the State printing contracts for some time, it became known to-day, and is to make a report thereon soon to Gov. Glynn.

"The present methods used by the State in purchasing its printing seem to be especially well designed to promote extravagance and to shut the door effectually against any efforts for economy," Mr. Delaney said.

"The control of the public printing, at first glance, seems to be placed in the hands of a board, composed of the Secretary of State, the Controller and the Attorney General, but this board has no real power.

"The State printing law is so cunningly devised and worded as to prevent the board from deviating by a hair's breadth from the precise specifications which are written into the law. The board itself cannot even prepare specifications to fit the particular character of work required by the different departments."

Federal Utilities Passes Dividend.

Directors of the Federal Utilities Company, Inc., a concern engaged in buying and selling securities in public utility and other corporations, decided yesterday to pass the quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. due next month on the preferred stock. In explanation of this action President De Forest Candee notified shareholders that income in the ten months ended with Oct. 31 was sufficient to meet dividend requirements, but depreciation in the market value of securities owned and a consequent shrinkage of surplus had caused the Directors to conserve resources.

SEE DANGER IN USE OF RED AUTO LIGHTS

Locomotive Engineers Demand a Change, Saying Present Signal Confuses Them.

Many suggestions were made for changes in the automobile laws of the various States at the recent conference of the Uniform Motor Vehicle Legislation Commission in this city. Col. William D. Sohier, Chairman of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, urged that the use of the red light on the rear of motor cars be discontinued. Several locomotive engineers, according to Col. Sohier, had said that the red light was confusing, and, therefore, dangerous, and suggested that a light of some other color, possibly blue, would be preferable. A number of members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, it appears, complained that they had been confused by seeing a red light ahead on rounding a railroad curve and had brought their trains to a sudden stop, thinking a switch must be open, only to find that the red signal was the vanishing taillight of an automobile on an adjoining highway.

The contention of one locomotive engineer was that after a number of such experiences he might some time assume that the light was that of a motor car and wreck his trains on an open switch. The suggestion that a rear light of another distinctive color be adopted was not discussed in detail by the conference, but was referred, with other matters, to a committee in the membership of which seven States are represented.

***

There will be a meeting of the Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automobile Engineers to-night, at the society's rooms, 1,790 Broadway, at which silent and roller chains and intake manifolds will be the subjects of discussion. The attention of automobile designers has been turned to these subjects of late, in the case of the first two because of the advent of the starting and lighting dynamo, and in that of the last by the acute fuel problem.

***

Announcement was made yesterday by the International Motor Company that the temporary injunction granted against it, in a suit brought by one of the stockholders for the appointment of a receiver, had been dissolved, and that a plan had been put in force by which bank loans and notes payable, amounting to $2,500,000, had been extended—principal and interest—for three years from Nov. 1, 1913. The merchandise creditors will have no claim on all the assets of the company, save for a mortgage of $48,000 on the Plainfield plant and $6,500 on Newark real estate. The assets exclusive of licenses, patent rights, and good will were said to be more than $5,000,000, while the claims of the merchandise creditors were put at $300,000.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Importers Lose on Candle-Shade Protest, but Win in Others.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled claims by several importers dealing with the classification of candle shades composed of cotton appliqued with metal thread. Duty was taken by the Collector at New York at the rate of 15 cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 179 of the act of 1909, by virtue of the first proviso to Paragraph 349, as ornaments worked with metal threads. The shades were claimed dutiable at 60 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 349 as appliqued articles. The importers included E. Stegemann, Jr., Abraham & Straus, Bavo & Dotter, Bloomingdale Brothers, Higgins & Seiter, Ltd., Mc-Fadden & Co., W. R. Hoe & Sons, the Simpson-Crawford Company and Stern Brothers.

W. A. Walker succeeded in a controversy relating to the rate of duty on waterproof velvet fabrics in the piece. The merchandise was returned by Appraiser Higgins as colored cotton velvet, and duty assessed at the rate of 47½ per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 325 of the act of 1909. The backs of the fabrics are coated with a substance resembling rubber, which renders the cloth impervious to water. Duty was claimed at 10 cents a square yard and 20 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 347.

Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago were sustained in a claim for lower duty on silk ribbons. The Appraiser reported that the ribbons measured less than twelve inches in width and did not have fast edges. The Collector classified the goods as silk trimmings and exacted duty at 60 per cent. under Paragraph 402 of the act of 1909. The firm asserted that the ribbons had fast edges and were therefore dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem under the specific provision for such goods under Paragraph 401.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

Imports into Chile by international parcel post practically doubled in the four years ended June 30, 1912, and the Chilean postal authorities say that there has been a marked increase so far this year. Parcels imported in the first eight months of 1913 numbered 33,550, compared with 29,290 for the entire year of 1912.

Seventy per cent. of the world's production of cork comes from Spain and Portugal. There were produced in Spain in 1912 approximately 78,000 short tons of cork, of which 54,750 tons came from the Seville district. It is estimated that the growers received an average of $57.90 a ton, or $4,516,200, for the entire quantity produced in Spain.

The foreign trade of Greece for the calendar year 1912 amounted to $84,724,194, against $60,429,255 in the previous year, a decrease of approximately 4½ per cent. The value of merchandise imported was $29,734,960, a drop of almost 50 per cent. from the previous year. Exports were valued at $27,989,234.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A trough of moderately low pressure extending from the Central Plains States through the upper lake region into the St. Lawrence Valley has caused some light local rains in the central valleys and the upper lake region. Rains also continued in the Southwest and locally west of the Rocky Mountains, while in the East and South the weather was generally fair.

It is colder in the Atlantic States and the Northwest, but temperatures are still considerably above the seasonal average in the latter district. Over the remainder of the country it is somewhat warmer, as a rule, with temperatures also above the seasonal average.

The weather will be unsettled with occasional rains during Wednesday and Thursday in the central valleys, the lake region, and New England and probably on Thursday in the Middle Atlantic States.

Winds on the North Atlantic, moderate westerly; Middle Atlantic, moderate, west and northwest.

FORECAST TO-DAY AND THURSDAY.

Western Pennsylvania—Cloudy Wednesday, local rains at night or Thursday; somewhat colder Thursday; moderate south winds, becoming variable.

Western New York—Cloudy Wednesday. Thursday, unsettled, probably rain and colder; moderate west to northwest winds.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination at the New York Custom House for assistant in grain standardization, for men only, on Dec. 3, to fill two or more vacancies in the Office of Grain Standardization, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $2,000 a year, depending upon previous training and experience, and vacancies as they may occur in positions of the same similar qualifications. The eligibles obtained from this examination will be classified into two groups in accordance with the rating received on education, training, and experience. Those who receive a rating of 90 per cent. or over on this subject will be eligible for positions at salaries ranging from $1,600 to $2,000 a year. Those who receive a rating of less than 90 per cent., will be eligible for certification for positions at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $1,500 a year. After this classification has been made with reference to education, training, and experience, eligibles will then be certified by their average percentages in the entire examination from each of these groups according to the salaries which they are willing to accept, and, accordingly, those eligibles who attain and exceed 80 per cent. in this subject and who are unwilling to accept appointment at no less than $1,500 a year will not be certified. The persons appointed to positions at the lower salaries may be stationed at Washington, D. C., or assigned to the grain standardization laboratories in Baltimore, Chicago, Decatur, Ill., Kansas City, or New Orleans, and the duties will consist in assisting with the scientific work being carried on at those points, as making mechanical analyses of grains in the laboratory and in assisting in experiments being carried on in co-operation with grain inspection departments and grain elevator companies.

Competitors will be examined in practical and technical questions, thesis or report, and education, training, and experience.

An educational training equivalent to a four-year course in a college of good standing, preferably one giving an agricultural training, is a prerequisite for consideration for this position. Applicants must have reached their twentieth but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination.

Further information may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

DEPENDABLE INCOME

Keeping uppermost in mind the important factors of safety and dependable income, how could you do better than to systematically accumulate sound investment bonds? Five hundred dollars so invested should earn $25 a year, $1,000 at least $50 a year, $5,000 not less than $250 a year, and larger sums in proportion. Sound investment bonds purchased now are practically certain to increase in value. If you would like to have our suggestions along these lines, send for Circular No. 1188 describing Canadian and American Municipal Bonds and Public Utility Bonds.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Trading Shows Renewed Life and Prices Advance—A Change in Sentiment.

The Stock Exchange did almost four times as much business yesterday as on Monday, and the market was strong nearly all day. You cannot dig a hole deeper than the earth; if you do you come out into the sunshine. Yet Wall Street had been inclined to look upon that impossibility as a feasible thing. On Monday, when trading had fallen to the lowest level in a quarter of a century, a longer period than most men now active in its affairs can remember the doings of Wall Street, there were few who saw anything better in sight for a long time to come. Some even went so far as to expect a progressive decline in trading and in prices, notwithstanding the abnormally small total to which the former had already fallen, and despite the evidence of firmness which the latter had for some time been displaying.

Too much need not be inferred from yesterday's activity and strength, but they at least must serve to discountenance those who indulged in the extremes of pessimism which lately found reflection in Stock Exchange sentiment. Yesterday's sharp reversal of market conditions did not appear in all respects spontaneous, but to a large extent it was so. Conditions were not such as to have invited a sudden inflow of orders from the public at large, and it is a fair assumption that traders' purchasers partly for the long account, but also partly for the short account, were the mainspring of yesterday's increased activity and forward movement in prices. Perhaps those who led in this movement were actuated by the feeling that the relative firmness of prices in a market in which practically all activity had ceased indicated a position in which only a little effort was needed to turn prices upward. Or it may have been that the favorable possibilities of several matters of prime importance which are now occupying foremost places in public discussion were regarded as offering a reasonable margin of safety to those who might adopt a constructive market attitude. The proposed currency measure and the increase in freight rates which the railroads are seeking are both matters which may eventuate most favorably for the country. Possibly, too, overnight consideration of the really remarkable showing which the country is making in its foreign trade may have convinced a larger number of the great importance of the volume of our trade with other nations and of the phenomenal credit trade balance which is being built up.

Whether or not these elements in the situation, and such change as has already been brought about in stock market sentiment bear further fruit in a continuance of the movement which was begun yesterday, considerable satisfaction can be taken in yesterday's Stock Exchange record. It has at least broken the continuity of the pessimism of such part of the financial community as bases its view of the stock market. It is probably true that outside of Wall Street fewer people than ever relatively attach as much importance to the fluctuations of the stock market as was attributed to them in years past, but even outside of Wall Street a break in the lifelessness of the stock market can hardly be anything but a welcome occurrence.

There was little new for Wall Street to discuss yesterday except its own change of mind as reflected in the stock market. Some previous tendencies, however, were emphasized by the day's happenings. The shipment of another $2,250,000 to Canada, taken in conjunction with the early preparations for the Dec. 1 disbursements, caused call money rates to advance to 4 per cent., although the ruling rate was only 2¾ per cent. On the other side of the money market balance sheet was recorded a further decline in discount rates at Berlin which followed upon the publication of a very favorable weekly report by the Imperial Bank of Germany. That institution gained over $4,500,000 gold and cash to a total of more than $10,800,000. Its cash holdings are $107,000,000 larger than they were a year ago, while its circulation was greater by only $10,000,000. This great strength, compared with the bank's position at this time in 1912, and the progressive decline in the Berlin discount rate must be given considerable significance in forecasting the probabilities of the European money market for the balance of the year. At London discounts eased a little and the Bank of England obtained $4,500,000 of the South African gold arrivals. An advance in consols was one of the noteworthy features of the day's foreign markets.

For ourselves we cannot expect to get through the preparations for the Dec. 1 payments quite as easily as we would have done in the absence of the Canadian demand for gold which has already taken close to $7,000,000 within a week. At the same time the chances still favor the passing of the December interest period with less inconvenience than was encountered at the first of November. A continuance of market conditions such as prevailed yesterday would soon increase Wall Street's interest in the money market. Of late that interest has been almost entirely academic because so little money was being employed for current stock market operations. So little, in fact, that no more unlikely time could have been chosen for the latest Washington references to the fostering of speculation by the funds held by banks in New York City. That reference was made at the outset of the Senate debate on the currency bill which deals with a proposal of law to which Wall Street will no doubt give increasing attention as the time approaches when action will be taken on this most important matter. Meanwhile the attention of a good many is being directed toward Washington in anticipation of what the President will have to say in his annual message to Congress. A variety of reports evidently based on preconceived conceptions of what the President is likely to say are making their appearance in the financial district. Probably the matter in which most interest is likely to be shown by the financial community is what the President will have to say on the question of further corporation legislation. It would like very much to have some more definite intimation than it has yet received as to just how extensive and how radical a programme for this sort of legislation will be mapped out.

Pendulum Swings Back.

While yesterday's trading was not in large volume, measured by old standards of activity, it was so much ahead of the previous day as to bring about a complete revulsion of feeling. The depression which was everywhere evident on Monday lifted before the close of the first hour. The spectacle of Hope crushed to earth by declining prices, and revivified twenty-four hours later by a spurt of activity on the bull side, is old, but it is always interesting.

The Mexican Problem.

If President Huerta of Mexico would depart for Europe, or go down in a crushing defeat before the rebel forces, the problem of financing the National Railways of Mexico's approaching interest payments would be greatly simplified. With political conditions as they are, making possible the operation of only about half of the company's mileage, it is a serious problem. There is a payment of about $800,000 to be made Dec. 1 on the company's recently executed two-year note issue, and another of more than $2,500,000 on mortgage bonds a month later.

Who Owns the Corporations?

From returns made to Dow, Jones & Co. it appears that in spite of the clamor against trusts and large corporations the number of small stockholders is steadily increasing. The shares of 191 corporations which have counted the names on their stock books are in the names of 929,282 stockholders. There was an increase in 1913 of 29,109 shareholders in these companies. The average holding of stockholders in 145 industrial concerns and 46 railroads is 93 shares.

Commercial Paper Erratic.

Commercial paper brokers say their business has been subjected since the 1st of November to unusual irregularity. There have been days when there was plenty of paper to sell and the banks were willing to take considerable offerings. On other days entire hours would pass without a single transaction or an inquiry. The month is expected to show, when the final reckoning is taken, that it makes a poor comparison with November of last year, and is far behind August and September of this year. Local banks are still reported to be practically out of the market, only buying on orders sent in from correspondents in the interior. Brokers state that the recession in trade is being reflected clearly in the output of commercial bills but that there has not been a sudden slump of borrowing since the steel and copper industries began to show a marked curtailment of activity. Six months paper is quoted from 5½ to 6 per cent., practically unchanged from the figures of four months ago, with some bills particularly liked by the banks going on a 5¼ per cent. basis.

Activity Close After Dullness.

The overnight change of sentiment toward stocks, as represented in a much greater volume of transactions yesterday than on Monday, was not unexpected by the older members of the Wall Street community. The records of former days of meagre trading goes to show that frequently substantial business has developed on the heels of exceptional dullness. Last July the smallest total of shares dealt in for seventeen years was followed by a 300,000-share session three days later, and within a month—during the vacation season, too—trading had worked up to better than 400,000 shares a day. Stock Exchange members of an analytical turn of mind said yesterday that today's business would indicate whether they and their colleagues would really be in a mood to give thanks on Thanksgiving Day. They believed that the extent of trading in a session preceding a holiday would, under existing circumstances, show definitely whether interest in the market was as nearly dead as it appeared to be on Monday. A fairly large attendance of brokers on the board and a moderately active state of business, they thought, would reflect sound underlying sentiment in the market and indicate increased trading in the near future.

Copper and a Strike.

The copper trade speculated yesterday on the possible effect on the market of a protracted strike at the General Electric Works at Schnectady. It was estimated that the company uses, in normal seasons of production, about 12,000,000 pounds of copper a month. Although buying of electrical supplies has been in the past few months considerable under the average of the same period of last year, the company has been fairly busy, and a consumer of copper well worth noting. If the General Electric Company should have to retrench drastically on buying supplies because of a strike of even a few weeks' duration, it was said, the present indifference of consumers would be considerably accentuated.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 2¾@4 per cent., with the last loan at 2¾ per cent. The renewal rate was 2¾ per cent.

Time money rates were 5@5¼ per cent. for sixty days, 4¾ per cent. for ninety days, and 4½@5 per cent. for four to six months.

Commercial paper was quoted at 5¾@6 per cent. for the best names.

The local banks have lost $6,518,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 5 per cent. for short and 5 per cent. for three months' bills; Berlin, 4½ per cent.; Paris, 4½ per cent. Money was 4½@4¾ per cent. in London, and 2 per cent. in Berlin.

The Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 50½ pfennigs. The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 30½ centimes.

Foreign exchange was quoted as follows:

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Increased Business and a Sharp Upward Movement in Prices on the Curb.

While business on the Curb was not remarkably heavy, there was a good increase of activity as compared with Monday, and prices as a whole moved up sharply. The greatest gains were made by the oil shares, where advances ranging from 1 to 15 points were scored. Standard Oil of New Jersey rose 6 points, to 383. United Cigar Stores closed 1¼ points higher, at 89, having earlier in the day sold at 89¼. Riker-Hegeman new shares were more active, with dealings in 5,500 shares at 7 to 7⅛.

Transactions reported were:

TO STOP CORNERS ON COTTON FUTURES

Exchange Plans to Store in the South Graded Staple for Delivery Here.

MAY END MANIPULATION

Warehouse Receipt and Guarantee of Grade Will Also Protect Owners and Bankers.

The Cotton Exchange has in process of formation a plan which will do away with the necessity of shipping to New York from the Southern fields all cotton to be delivered on future contracts traded in here. The Exchange maintains at the present time a body of expert examiners of the staple whose business it is to grade every bale received at licensed warehouses in this city. It is proposed to have warehouse depots at various points in the South where this work may be done.

"If this plan can be carried out," said Supt. W. V. King of the Exchange yesterday, "and there is not much doubt but that all difficulties can be met and overcome, it will be a great boon to the trade. It will prevent local corners and manipulation of the market, and it will give to the owners of cotton a reliable guarantee of the grades, thus making it more salable to mills at home, and also for export to any part of the world. It will also make cotton one of the safest collaterals to loan money on, because the bank or banker will know by the warehouse receipt and the guarantee of grade that the cotton is safely stored in an approved warehouse and what its market value is.

"A special committee has been directed by the Board of Managers to study this subject and work out a plan to lay before the Exchange by which this system can be extended. The Chamber of Commerce of Columbia, S. C., realizing what a great benefit this will be to all concerned, has already sent a deputation to the New York Cotton Exchange to assure them of its cordial approval and earnest wish to co-operate in putting into effect such a beneficial plan."

Mr. King pointed out that with the constantly enlarging crops in recent years and the consequent increase of business in contracts, it has become difficult to get a large enough stock of cotton in one place to answer the requirements of the trade. The elimination of corners in the commodity is expected to result from the availability of a great deal of cotton in the active seasons of trading.

PROTESTS LOWEST BIDDER.

But Cooper & Evans Co. Is Overruled on Contract for Elevated.

A protest was made yesterday against the Public Service Commission's award of the contract for the construction of Section 2 of the New Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, elevated line to the lowest bidder. This was the firm of Post & McCord, Incorporated, which offered to do the work for $1,672,190.

The next firm to it was the Cooper & Evans Company, which bid $1,692,722.50. This concern has received the construction contract for one of the sections of the new Queens elevated lines, and has been making good progress with its work. Consequently it urged that, considering the closeness of the bids, it should receive the New Utrecht Avenue contract also, and in support of this it alleged that Post & McCord, while experienced in the work of steel construction, lacked experience in the difficult job of putting in the foundations.

The protest was heard by one of the Commissioners and Chief Engineer Craven. The latter pointed out that 90 per cent. of the work on the New Utrecht Avenue line was steel construction, for which Post & McCord were well qualified by experience. So he recommended the acceptance of the lowest bidder. The commission acted on Mr. Craven's advice and awarded the contract to Post & McCord.

$2,250,000 More Gold to Canada.

Yesterday's quota of gold withdrawn from local vaults for shipment to Canada in process of the present movement of the metal in that direction amounted to $2,250,000, making a total for the month of $6,350,000. The American Exchange National Bank took $1,500,000 from the Clearing House vaults, and $750,000 was supplied for other institutions by the Sub-Treasury.

Missouri Commission Approves 100-Year $470,000,000 Blanket Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 25.—The Missouri Public Service Commission to-day granted the application of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad for permission to issue $470,000,000 of refunding bonds to take up the entire indebtedness of the system and make a single mortgage. The bonds are to bear interest not to exceed 6 per cent., to run until 2014, and to cover all stock issues, franchises, and equipment on the 10,000 miles of the St. Paul system. The company's statement shows an aggregate of $316,428,200 in outstanding bonds.

The filing of the mortgage alone cost $10,000.

$4,500,000 STOCK FOR $1,805

N. Y. Railways Co. Buys in Old Metropolitan's "Cats and Dogs."

Permission was granted yesterday to the New York Railways Company to purchase certain traction securities which, in the parlance of Wall Street, are known as "cats and dogs." Their face value was $4,500,000, but all that the New York Railways Company was authorized to pay for them was $1,805.

These securities, which are nearly all practically worthless, were once in the possession of the old Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and on May 19 were sold on the Court House steps at public auction by William L. Turner, the Special Master in the traction cases. There they were bought up by J. M. Burnett, and since then they have passed into the ownership of William W. Ladd, receiver for the old New York City Railway Company. To avoid any risk of their ownership giving opportunity to any one to cause trouble to the New York Railways Company, it sought approval of its purchasing them.

Included in the lot were 25 shares of the Aden-Wald Street Railway Company, 100 shares of the Thirty-fourth Street Crosstown Railway Company, 15,000 shares of the People's Traction Company, 5,000 shares of the Fulton Street Railway Company, 15,000 shares of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Streets Railway Company, 7 shares of the Broadway & Seventh Avenue Railway Company, $52.73 scrip of the old Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and $20 voting trust certificate of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company.

There was also a temporary receipt issued by the Central Trust Company on Aug. 26, 1896, for $1,000,000 of first mortgage bonds of the Wal & Cortlandt Street Ferry Company, but this the commission did not authorize the New York Railways Company to buy.

MORE ADMIT MISBRANDING.

Two Plead Guilty Under Interstate Commerce Act.

Two more pleas of guilty to a breach of the Interstate Commerce act in misbranding goods dispatched by common carriers in interstate commerce so as to procure the benefit of lower freight rates were entered yesterday. Edwards & Rierdan of 564 Broadway admitted before Judge Hunt in the Federal District Court that they shipped artificial flowers as "millinery." They were fined $200. Louis Lekfowitz admitted that he called leather goods "scrap leather." He was fined $500.

These cases were brought as part of the campaign now being carried on by William L. Lloyd, Special Agent of the Interstate Commerce Commission, against firms which have made such misbranding a practice.

New Haven Pays $1,498,230 Taxes.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 25.—State Treasurer Roberts received to-day from the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company a check for $1,458,238.90 in payment of taxes. The amount is smaller by $112,649.66 than last year, the difference being due to the lower market price of the stock.

General Chemical Extra Dividend.

The General Chemical Company yesterday declared an extra dividend of 5 per cent. on the common stock out of the earnings for 1913. The dividend is payable Feb. 2, 1914, to holders of record Dec. 31.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Fifth Avenue Bank is distributing a pamphlet on the income tax law written by Herbert M. Teets of the New York bar.

Procter & Borden and E. Lowber Stokes of Philadelphia have been awarded an issue of $1,008,000 Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh equipment 5 per cent. bonds, Series H, subject to the approval of the Public Service Commission.

Moore, Leonard & Lewis, members of the Stock Exchange, have opened a branch office in the McAlpin.

SAYS FEDERAL SUIT IS BIG MISTAKE

Government Has Been Tricked in Case Against Jewelers, Asserts Trade Authority.

PRODUCERS WANT A COVER

Under Which Some of Them Can Deceive the Jobbers and Get Cream of Business.

Considerable criticism is heard in local jewelry circles of the recent action of the Government in filing a dissolution suit, on the charge of violation of the Sherman act, against the National Wholesale Jewelers' Association, the National Association of Manufacturing Jewelers, and others. So long a time had elapsed between the Government's announcement that a suit would be entered and the filing of this suit that some members of the trade thought the matter had been shelved. Since it has become evident that the Government is in earnest in the matter, however, complaint is heard to the effect that the national officials are expending their energies in the wrong direction.

"It is like hunting pet lambs with a ten-inch gun," said a well-known member of the trade (who is not a jobber) in discussing the case yesterday. "While real trusts are doing their work practically unmolested and are plundering the public, the Government is breaking into a matter that is of absolutely no concern to the consumer, and one which has no bearing at all on the high cost of living. Prices on foodstuffs may apparently be forced up with serious results to the consumer and without great danger to the combinations back of the movement. Jewelry is a luxury however, and the consumer pays the same price for it, if he is prosperous enough to afford it, regardless of whether the manufacturer sells direct to the retail trade or through the jobber. The fact that this is the question does look like misdirected energy.

"It is a matter of serious moment to the jewelry jobber that the Government has taken the arbitrary position of telling him where he must buy his goods or get into serious legal difficulties. The prayer of the Government in the suit just entered does not say this in so many words, but the spirit of the prayer really can be interpreted in no other way. The Government alleges a violation of the Sherman act in that a number of jobbers have made an agreement not to buy from manufacturers who sell direct to the retail trade, who make use of outlets to the consumer other than the jobber. I will grant that this is technically wrong under the Sherman act, but I maintain that from a moral and business point of view the attitude of these jobbers cannot be criticised. The manufacturer option applies to the manufacturers who have agreed to sell none but the jobbers.

Government Being Used?

"The whole sum and substance of the matter is that the Government is apparently being used to protect a class of jewelry manufacturers that is not needed in this country, and which should be shown so by all honest merchants in the jewelry business. In explaining what I mean by this statement let me say first that the jewelry manufacturing industry of this country is divided broadly into four classes. The first class sells exclusively through the jobbers; the second sells only to the retail trade; the third class is important enough to sell to both the retailers and the jobbers, and to let the jobbers know that it is competing with them for many of the best retail accounts. All these three classes of manufacturers are justified in the position they take.

"But the fourth class is the objectionable class. It is these manufacturers that the jobbers want the right to protect themselves against, and that the Government is seeking to protect through the suit just filed in the Southern District Court of New York. These manufacturers are they who tell the jobbers that they are selling their products only to the wholesale trade, and then dishonestly and deliberately sell them to the cream of the retail trade, on which the jobber is forced to rely for a living. In other words they are exponents of 'dirty' business; men who do not let their right hand know what their left hand does, but inversely from the Biblical command.

"There are many who will say, and doubtless there are officials of the Department of Justice among them, that the jobber is an economic waste, and that he should be eliminated. To these I would answer that if the jobber were not a necessary adjunct to business in a great many lines he would be eliminated without hesitation by the manufacturers and retailers in those lines. The manufacturer would want to finish off the profit now made by the jobber, and it is not hard to see how the retailer would then be forced to buy direct from the producer.

Jewelry Jobbers Neeeassary.

"The jobber is essential in the jewelry business for two important reasons: first, that he makes it possible for small manufacturers, whose invested capital represents millions of dollars in the aggregate, to keep alive in a business way, and, second, that he is constantly augmenting the ranks of the retail trade by starting deserving men in business and carrying them along financially until they are able to stand on their own feet. If jobbers were not enterprises fail, the jobbers often take heavy losses. If they succeed, the jobber's reward is not great, for as soon as the retailer gets big enough to go to the manufacturer with sales direct to the retail trade, he does so without hesitation or remembrance of the house that gave him his start.

"The jobber helps the small manufacturer in this way: no producer of jewelry whose annual output does not exceed $50,000 in value can possibly afford to maintain a selling staff large enough to sell direct to the retail trade. There are many of these manufacturers; some of them make rings, some make pins, and some make novelties. The jobber buys a substantial amount from each of them in the course of the year.

With this collection of goods he sends his road men into practically every small town in that part of the country to which his business is principally confined. With jobbers spread all over the country, this means that practically all of the retail trade of the United States, both large and small, is drummed into by men who sell the small manufacturers' goods. The latter could never hope to get such a representation of their goods on their own accord, because the majority of the orders placed with the jobber on their especial line is too small to pay the selling cost. In the aggregate, however, these purchases through the jobbers are sufficient to keep the small producers' plants in operation during the best part of the year at least. When the time comes for these manufacturers of their own accord, to eliminate the jobber as a waste, they will do so without hesitation. But that time, in my opinion, is a long way off; in fact, I think that it will never come.

Text of Federal Plea.

"Nothing could be more high-handed or unfair than the attitude the Government has taken in its suit against the jobbers. In Paragraph 6 of the prayer of the United States Attorney in the case a provision is made which will be impossible for the jobbers to live up to and stay in business. This provision follows:

That the said defendants, and each of them, and their Directors, officers, agents, servants and employes, and all other persons acting under, through, by, or in behalf of them, or either of them, or claiming so to act, be perpetually enjoined, restrained, and prohibited from communicating, directly or indirectly, with any manufacturer, producer, or dealer for the purpose of inducing such manufacturer, producer, or dealer not to sell jewelry or jewelry products to any person, firm, corporation, purchasing syndicate, or other organization not classified or recognized as a wholesaler or jobber by said Association of Manufacturing Jewelers, or by said National Wholesale Jewelers' Association, or by any other body or person, or in said Black Book or in said Red Book.

"These books, of course, refer to the rating publications gotten out by the Boards of Trade of the jewelry industry. In them are designated the firms which are wholesalers and those which are not, as the facts may be.

"In actual practice this is the way the above provision would work out: A jewelry jobber, being enjoined individually not to restrain trade in the manner outlined heretofore, either directly or indirectly, finds one day that a certain manufacturer from whom he buys goods is selling to the cream of the retail trade. He decides not to buy from him any more. This he has a legal right to do, and when that manufacturer's salesman visits the jobber to solicit an order, he has a right to tell him that he won't buy anything. But, under the injunction, the jobber has no right to tell the salesman why he won't buy. In doing so he would violate the injunction by indirectly communicating with the manufacturer to the effect that the lost business was due to the manufacturer's selling to the retailers, and in this way indirectly inducing the manufacturer to stop selling to the retailers.

Collusion Might Be Charged.

"It might also happen that three or four jobbers would have salesmen in Albany on the same day, and they might all see there a manufacturer's salesman who was drumming the retail stores for business. Without meeting each other, or without knowing that they had all seen the manufacturer's agent, these salesmen might write to their employers and tell them what they saw. Each jobber then, without the knowledge of the other jobbers were doing, would send his account with that manufacturer. Wouldn't it be easy under those conditions for the manufacturer to charge collusion and have the jobbers prosecuted for violating the injunction of the Government? The jobbers would be legally and morally guiltless, but they would have a hard and expensive time proving it, if at all."

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

THE LOCKHART PIANO COMPANY, INCORPORATED, of 615 to 619 Tenth Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $29,703 and assets of $14,417. The company was incorporated two weeks ago with capital stock of $10,000, and Louise H. Lockhart is President and Treasurer. The debts were contracted by her when she was in business as Lockhart & Co., and were assumed by the company. Among the creditors are Wood & Brooks, Buffalo, $3,667; J. Breckwaldt, Dolgeville, N. Y., $2,918; Courtade & Son, $2,447, and Fairbanks & Co., Springfield, Ohio, $1,862.

JOSEPH AUTIER COMPANY.—A petition has been filed against the Joseph Autier Company, manufacturer of cloaks and suits, 153 West Twenty-seventh Street, by these creditors: Harry Cohen, $572; Rose Schulman, $85, and William H. Mayer, $5. Liabilities are $8,000 and assets $4,000. A petition was filed against the company on Dec. 20, 1912, when the liabilities were $37,364, and a composition with creditors was made at 25 cents on the dollar.

THE RELIABLE WOOLEN COMPANY.—Three petitions were filed within a few minutes of each other yesterday against Fannie Freedman, trading as the Reliable Woolen Company, jobber in woolens and dress goods, 196 Hester Street. The creditors are: Adolph Strauss, $211; Harry Child, $118; Karl Hersha, $118; Jacob Granowitz, $68; H. Abrams, $360; Frederick R. A. Stiefel, $200; Grossman & Goldenstein, $102, and Noschkes & Greenberg, $58. Judge Hough appointed William Henkel, Jr., receiver, with authority to carry on the business for ten days. It was stated that she was overrun by creditors and that she had closed up the store, as she did not care to continue business any longer. The liabilities are said to be $28,000 and assets $5,000.

MARIAN AVERY BARRETT of 250 West Eighty-second Street has filed a petition with liabilities of $4,489 and no assets. She has only two creditors, Edward D. Hall, $3,489, deficiency judgment, and Gustave l'Amoreaux, $1,000, legal services. In October, 1910, she bought a four-story dwelling house at 119 West Eighty-fifth Street from Mr. Hall and gave back a mortgage for $30,000. The mortgage was foreclosed and the property sold in July last, leaving the above deficiency.

JENNIE MacBRIDE.—A petition has been filed against Jennie MacBride, dealer in gowns and dresses, 18 West Thirty-seventh Street, by these creditors: Hapf & Daxon, Inc., $538; Joseph Meyer & Co., $367, and H. C. Bastian Company, $367. The liabilities are said to be $5,000 and assets $2,000.

TOBIAS HERSKOVITZ of 889 Kelly Street, who is a foreman in a clothing factory, has filed a petition with liabilities $1,864 and no assets. The debts are for indorsing notes of Henry Herskovitz & Co., and there is only one creditor, the Plymouth Rubber Company, $1,864.

RATNER & SRAGOW.—Judge Hough has confirmed a composition of Ratner & Sragow, dealers in dry goods and clothing, 1,997 Third Avenue, with creditors at 35 cents on the dollar. The liabilities were $20,000.

POUGHKEEPSIE CHAIR COMPANY.—Judge Hough has confirmed a composition of the Poughkeepsie Chair Company with creditors at 50 cents on the dollar, payable half cash and half in notes. The liabilities were $35,391.

COLONIAL HOUSEFURNISHING COMPANY.—Judge Hough has confirmed a composition of the Colonial Housefurnishing Company of 32 West Twentieth Street with creditors at 25 cents on the dollar cash.

MORRIS WERSHA.—Judge Hough has dismissed the petition filed on Oct. 23 against Morris Wersha, cloak manufacturer, 208 Sixteenth Street, on a settlement with creditors at 20 cents on the dollar, payable 15 cents cash and 5 cents notes.

ABRAHAM LEVY.—Judge Hough has dismissed the petition filed on Nov. 10 against Abraham Levy, trading business as A. Levy & Co., cloak manufacturer, 208 Greene Street, on a settlement with creditors at 20 cents on the dollar cash.

HUSCH, INC.—Judge Hough has appointed Herbert J. Dentz, receiver for Husch, Inc., dealer in women's wear, 1478 Broadway, bond $3,000, with authority to continue business twenty days.

WILLIAM WOLFSON.—Judge Hough has appointed Harry Zalkin, receiver for William Wolfson, shoe dealer of 33 Market Street, bond $2,000.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Local Customs Cases for Trial.

Many protest cases affecting New York importers will be heard by the United States Court of Customs Appeals at the session opening Dec. 2. This will be the last session of the court this year, and it is expected that much important litigation arising under the old tariff will be heard and disposed of in order to clear the calendars in anticipation of the important questions to come before the court under the new law. The cases to be tried cover a wide variety of merchandise.

Complain of Easy Creditors.

Comments are constantly reaching the National Jewelers' Board of Trade in reference to the indulgence shown by many sellers toward delinquent debtors. A little more insistence on the part of sellers, the board says, would prove not only of great benefit to them in overcoming the abuse of long drawn-out payments, but would emphasize to the buyer the great advantage he derives from maintaining his credit by promptly meeting his obligations at maturity.

New Pencil-Sharpener on Market.

The soiled fingers that result from pencil sharpening are, it is said, eliminated by a new device called a "deposit pencil pointer," which was recently put on the market. It is a nickel-plated tool, slightly larger than a pocket knife, and the manufacturers say that it sharpens pencils of any size or of any kind of lead without breaking the point or soiling the hands. The blade of the device cuts with the grain, and may be adjusted easily for light or heavy cutting. It may be resharpened, if desired.

Soft Coal Prices Lower.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today:

"The gradual settling down of bituminous prices to lower levels, which has been in progress for weeks past, still continues to be the distinguishing feature of the trade. The dullness in the spot market remains unbroken.

"The mild weather last week put a decided quietus on the local anthracite trade, which the slightly lowered temperatures of the present week have thus far failed to relieve to any noticeable extent. Retailers who were offering liberal premiums on stove coal a week or ten days ago have withdrawn their offers for the time being."

Federal Bureau to Expand.

Because of the success of the local branch office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the Department of Commerce has decided to establish similar branches in other cities. A branch will be opened in New Orleans in about two weeks, and another will be opened in Chicago in the near future. E. E. Judd, who has been associated with the bureau in Washington for several years, has been made a Commercial Agent, and will take charge of the New Orleans branch. Information regarding commercial conditions and trade opportunities in foreign countries will be supplied by all the branches of the bureau.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

The grain markets advanced yesterday, led by a gain of a cent a bushel in wheat options. Corn closed from ¾ to ⅞c up and oats was firm at a level from ¼ to ⅜c higher than Monday's close. Cotton positions were irregular, ending the day from 11 points down to 1 point up. Provisions were firm and cotton oil was unsteady.

WHEAT.

The Argentine situation was again a stimulating influence in the market and a number of cables were received which indicated more or less anxiety regarding the crop outlook in that country. The Liverpool market was firm early, but eased off at the close. Prices on the Continent were higher and there was general uneasiness on the part of eborts in all the markets. Values here were higher from the start and the close was at about the best for the day with net gains of ¾ to 1c.

The export demand was fairly liberal and sales were reported of 100 loads, part on Monday, including 16 loads of Manitoba, 70 loads of No. 2 hard Winter wheat from Chicago, and 10 loads of durum. Receipts at Northwestern points were larger than last week and stocks at Minneapolis have increased 275,000 bushels during the past three days, while Duluth has gained 140,000 in two days.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 97½c, cost, insurance, freight, New York export, and 99c, free on board; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 97½c, free on board.

CORN.

A bullish feeling also prevailed in the corn market, and prices closed at ⅝c to ⅞c net advance. Shorts were good buyers, owing to indications of unsettled weather and on further fears of congestion in December. The trade became more or less excited on account of a rumor that the Government had placed an embargo on Argentine corn, owing to the prevalence of the foot and mouth disease among the cattle in that country, but a special report from Washington denied this rumor.

In the local cash market old No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 82¼c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

The oats market was influenced by the strength in corn and prices were firmer, closing at a net advance of ¼@2⅝c. Bradstreet's visible supply increased 283,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 1,108,000 last year.

The local cash market was quiet, standard white being quoted at 46@47c; No. 2, 47@47½c; No. 3, 45½@46c; No. 4, 44½@45c; clipped white, 44½@48½c; fancy clipped white, 47@49c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was lower at the start, owing to a decline in the hog market and liberal receipts at Western points, but during the day a firmer feeling developed. The close was near the top. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 23,000; estimated for Wednesday, 30,000. Kansas City received 19,000 and Omaha 12,000.

COTTON.

The feature of an early break in the cotton market yesterday was scattering December liquidation, which was evidently promoted by the weakness of near months in New Orleans, and the fact that Friday will be the first December notice day in New York. Offerings were gradually absorbed, however, and the market later turned firmer with January and later deliveries selling above the closing figures of Monday, and closing steady at a net advance of 1 to 5 points. December became comparatively quiet when the later deliveries rallied, but remained relatively easy, closing at a net loss of 11 points.

Weakness in Liverpool where the spot demand was less active, and rather bearish overnight spot advices from the South probably accounted for the opening decline of 7 or 8 points, and an already unsettled market was rendered more nervous by the scattering December liquidation. After showing a net loss of 13 to 14 points, with December breaking through the 13 cent level for the first time since the middle of last October, however, the market became firmer on covering and trade buying. Closing prices were a shade off from the best under realizing.

Southern spot markets as officially reported early were generally unchanged. The local market for spot cotton was quiet and 10 points lower at 13.40 for middling upland; sales nil.

The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

COFFEE.

To-day is first-notice day for December in the coffee market, and in consequence much of yesterday's business was in the form of evening up the December position. Total sales for the day aggregated 173,500 bags, and of this amount 91,000 were in the form of exchanges, mostly from December to the later positions, which was done at 65 points to May, 40@41 to March, and 85 to July. The undertone was firmer throughout the session and final prices were only slightly below the top, with net gains of 6@12 points.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Harlem Property in Trade for Bronx Flats—Private Dwelling Sales—Augustus A. Low Home on Brooklyn Heights Bought for Apartment Alteration—Big Railroad Deal in Flushing.

No large deals characterized the Manhattan realty market yesterday. In the Bronx, however, and in Brooklyn the volume of business was very good. In Brooklyn additional evidence of the change in the Heights locality from private residences to apartments was shown in the sale of the large dwelling by the Augustus A. Low estate at 156 Columbia Heights for alteration by the new owners into apartments.
